It has been decided to establish a meteorological observatory at the top of the great cathedral spire in Ulm, Germany. The Ulm cathedral is one of the most extraordinary in existence, on account of the great size and height of its single spire, which reaches an elevation of 528 feet. Although the great church was begun more than 500 years ago, the spire was not completed until 1890.

New Roof for Crystal Palace.

An entire new glass covering has been ordered for the roof of the Crystal palace in London. The total glass area to be covered is about fifteen acres.

DOES IT PAY TO BUY CHEAP?

A cheap remedy for coughs and colds is all right, but you want something that will relieve and cure the most severe and dangerous results of throat and lung troubles. What shall you do? Go to a warmer and more regular climate? Yes, if possible; if not possible for you, then in either case take the only remedy that has been introduced in all civilized countries with success in severe throat and lung troubles, "Boschee's German Syrup.,' It not only heals and stimulates the tissues to destroy the germ disease, but allays inflammation, causes easy expectoration, gives a good night's rest, and cures the patient. Try one bottle. many years by all druggists in the world. Sample bottles at O. P. RABER'S, Corunna.

Prepared Food for Soldiers.

The success of the Germans in the war of 1870 has been attributed by experts to the conveniently carried prepared food supplied by the sausage-makers of Berlin.

Story of a Slave.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. George D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., tells how such a slave was made free. He says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters, she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle working medicine is a godsend to weak, sickly, run down people. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by H. B. McCord the Druggist.

—E. M. Hilkey and family wish to express their most sincere thanks for the kindness shown toward them during the sickness and death of Mrs. Addie Hilkey, also for the beautiful floral offering given.

—It is stated that Hon. Timothy E. Howard of South Bend, ex-judge of the supreme court, has about concluded to permit the use of his name as a candidate for the nomination of governor on the democratic ticket.

—A pathetic incident connected with the death of Miss Eva Surfus of Huntertown was that she was to have been married Monday, the day of her burial, to Flint Knott of Butler township. She was sick but a short time.

—A number of young people in the crowd at Curt Eckhart's last evening, went to Perry Romine's where they were the guests of Miss Mae Romine. It was a pleasant gathering and the young people all enjoyed themselves to the full extent.

—A wealthy Kosciusco county farmer was hauled up before Judge Biggs at Warsaw the other day for making false returns to the assessor. Besides having his assessment increased several thousand dollars he was fined $100 each on two separate offenses. There are others who ought to have the same dose.

—When Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Zent left for their western trip yesterday a number of their friends were at the Wabash station to wish them "bon voyage." When the train pulled in and while "Ike" was bidding his friends goodbye the friends began to shower rice upon himself and wife and everybody in this vicinity thought a newly-married couple were starting on a wedding journey. We'll bet a nickel that "Ike" will get even with the originators of this joke when he gets back from Mormondom.

—The trial of Johnson, one of the men implicated in the murder of Policeman Rath at Hicksville, is in progress at Defiance.

—Mrs. Howard Bruce and children expect to leave in a short time to join Mr. Bruce who has a position with a railroad at Salida, Cal.

—Madden Bros. are getting in a fine lot of marble and granite and the orders now on hand for monuments will keep them busy for several months.

—County Superintendent Coe and family have taken up their residence in the property recently purchased by Mr. Coe on South VanBuren street.

—Alvin Kittredge, a Steuben county farmer, was fined $5 and costs a few days ago for cruelty to animals—not properly caring for his sheep. Correct.

—Willis Fulton a Huntington county boy serving with the Seventeenth United States Infantry in the Philippines, died a few days ago with smallpox.

—Miss Hulda Fulkerson of Cedarville, who visits Auburn frequently, had one of her arms badly burned a few days ago while emptying a bucket of hot ashes.

—William Eckert, one of the COURIER'S valued patrons, was a caller today and paid the subscription of himself and brother Jacob into 1901. We would like to have a few more callers of that kind.

—Little Arthur, son of William Bailey, was badly scalded on the right arm last evening, by tipping over a cup of hot coffee. The little fellow suffers considerable pain, but no serious results are anticipated.

—Allen Clark received a letter yesterday from his son Will, who is in the Twentieth United States regiment at Manila. "Billy" says he is in fine health and expects to reach the states again in a few months.

—Cory Shugers returned yesterday afternoon from Coldwater, bringing with him a fine new tricycle made to his order by the Shugers Cycle Co. of that place. It is a nice machine and up to-date in every particular.

—Another bad wreck occurred on the B. & O. at Whiting last evening when No. 14, the night express, ran into an open switch and collided with several freight cars. Engineer Renneman was killed and several other trainmen were badly hurt.

—C. P. Huntington has laid his hand upon his heart and declared that his conscience compels him to admit that the Nicaraguan canal will be a failure. Incidentally, he might have added that he feared it might reduce the earnings of his railways.

—Frank Rohm, a wide awake, energetic young man, has taken a position as salesman at Yeshera's clothing store, where the business has so largely increased that more help is needed. Mr. Rohm will doubtless prove a good man for the place.

—F. J. Sowle has commenced suit against the town of Angola, for the return of $300 saloon license paid the town in 1896-98, and has employed Bell & Dougman of Fort Wayne to represent his interests. The grounds alleged for the suit is unconstitutionality of law and ordinance under which the money was collected.—Waterloo Press.

—It is reported that Jay McIntosh has a damage suit against Wm. Kennedy, for turning him out of a tenement house when his child was sick. The child died and the charge is made that its death is due to exposure incident to the compulsory moving. It is also reported that Mrs. K. is preparing to move to Chicago.—Waterloo Press.

—Verta Helen, daughter of John and Ann Potts, was born January 28 and died March 16, 1900, aged one month and eighteen days. The little one was laid away in the Fairfield cemetery to await the call of the angel on the morning of the resurrection. The family have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement. The funeral was conducted by Rev. A. E. Gaff.

—The state tax commissioners will probably ask for legislation at the next regular assembly regarding the taxation of cars belonging to the large packing companies of the country and other private corporations. At the present time there is no law by which cars belonging to private corporations can be assessed and thousands of dollars which rightfully belong to the state are lost every year.

—A car load of sugar beet seed arrived at this place Friday morning for the Kalamazoo Beet Sugar company. This will be insufficient and another car load will be shipped from Kalamazoo to this point. The company will use ten car loads of seed in all this season. Each car load costs $1,700, which will make the total amount paid out for seed by the company this season $17,000. —Walkerton Independent.

—The United States revenue commissioner rules that no revenue stamps are required on a conveyance of realty that is given away.

—Fred Rogers of the Reading, Mich., Hustler, wants a man to run the Hustler "as Jesus would," and offers some mighty big bargains for the right man.

—Six special judges were engaged in the trial of as many cases at one time yesterday in the Elkhart court at Goshen. Business must be brisk in the legal line up there.

—It is announced that no bands will be carried to the Grand Army encampment free this year. The rate for bands, however, will be less than that charged for regular business.

—A. Lewis has just received a car load of Bay City white pine lath, the first invoice of this choice stock that has been received here for some months owing to the scarcity and high price of this special line of goods. It is claimed for them that they are the best in the market.

—It is a splendid testimony to the rectitude of the American press that partisan papers left their party flag without hesitation when it came to a test between loyalty to party and loyalty to convictions. Practically all the republican papers in the country have sharply and unhesitatingly condemned the course of their party on Porto Rico.

—Charles R. Dancer, son of Trustee Dancer of Jackson, has just graduated at the Medical College at Fort Wayne with high honors. He has for some time been a trusted and valued "interne" at Hope Hospital. Now, since his graduation, he has been appointed to the medical department of the Home for the Feeble Minded, at a salary of $1,200 a year. That is a nice starter.

—Governor Mount heartily indorses the suggestion by General Coburn that the Fourth of July this year be generally observed by Indiana people, it being the centennial of the organization of the territory. General Coburn's idea is that papers and addresses shall be prepared and delivered in each county, on the early history of the state, and that these papers be printed in pamphlet form and then sent to the state to be bound in one large book.

—A bachelor farmer near Stamford, Conn., is about to start a garden of Eden, and to make the story complete and realistic, he advertised for a wife whose first name must be Eve. He has also set himself to the task of driving all the snakes from his farm and cutting off the apple trees. Whether he expects to follow all the biblical description isn't made clear, but it is safe to bet that Eve will continue to propound the conundrum: "Is my hat on straight?"

—Constant coughing will, if neglected, inflame the entire mucous membrane lining the air passages. Lichty's Cough Cure is the only medicine to be relied upon to give quick relief and allay inflamation. It is soothing in its effect; it is pleasant and agreeable to take; children like it. Sold by H. B. McCord.

—There is some talk at the treasury department of issuing half-penny pieces to meet the new demands of the time. A bill has been prepared and will shortly be introduced directing their coinage, and it is expected to receive the approval not only of shoppers but the proprietors of department stores where such coins would be principally used. It is understood the plan originated at Chicago.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

THE BURCH CASE.

Old Mr. McConnell, in the west part of the county, was owner of a 120-acre farm. His daughter married a railroad man who found employment on a road in Kentucky. As McConnell and his wife grew old and could not agee with the children here, they wanted Burch to come up and live here and care for them. Burch could not afford to leave a good job, and said they might come to Kentucky and he would care for them as long as they lived. So they went. They gave Burch and his wife a deed of the little farm in consideration of this service, Several years later the old gentleman died. After four years more the old lady died also. Then the old man was taken up and the two together brought to this county, as they had expressed a desire to be laid to rest in the soil of Indiana. Burch and his wife came with them and soon after went home.

Now comes Mrs. Burch's brother, Hi, and sues her to have this deed set aside so he can share it with her. After a full hearing, the jury decided against him, and Burch retains the land.

THE HECKATHORN CASE.

There was a habeas corpus case today. Dave Heckathorn had his attorneys, Roby & Harper, get out a writ of habeas corpus against Sheriff Hathaway to secure his freedom from jail in which he has been for some time. Pomeroy was attorney for the state. Mrs. Heckathorn and one of the grown daughters were present, and the scene was a rather sorrowful one for all three.

Mrs. Heckathorn told of her husband's cruel treatment years ago, after he had taken to drink. She told how it had compelled her to get a divorce. Later, she paid for his treatment at the Auburn Keeley Institute, furnishing from her own means the fee of $75. She said that for nearly five years after that he was a sober man, and caused her no trouble whatever. Then he took to drinking again and was worse than ever, so that they feared for their lives, and he had to be put under bonds, and finally into jail. Now however. she believed he was thoroughly repentant and had resolved to lead a different life. In view of the faith she now had in him, she said she would put no further obstacles in the way of his securing his freedom. Her manner impressed one that she was in earnest in the hope that her husband might see brighter days.

Mr. Heckathorn himself was put on the stand. He told about the same story of the past, as his wife had. He seemed honestly repentant. Judge Bratton questioned him fully, so as to find how much reliance ought to be put on his good resolutions. Dave admitted he had been drinking too much, and latterly, had taken to the use of alcohol weakened with water. He denied having threatened to shoot anyone. He said he had owned at least two guns all the time since he was fourteen, and now has a number of fine ones. He said he was not in the habit of carrying all his guns with him when he went to the farm north of Hudson or the one east of Summit. Once only he took all his seven guns to Ashley to show them to a railroad man, as they were fine pieces. He is fifty-nine years old, and he said he never had any trouble except what strong drink got him into. He said he was more in earnest now than when he swore off before, and took the Keeley cure. Liquor had got him into jail often lately. Dave, and the wife and daughter, all seemed to feel their humiliation.

Judge Bratton was in doubt as to what was the best thing to do and held his decision till this afternoon.

The decision was that Dave go free on a promise of good behavior, but if he fails to keep his promice, he can be put in jail without a trial.

The Coffinberry Case.

Judge Watkins came up from Huntington yesterday, and called court long enough to render his decision in the Coffinberry case. It will be remembered that Coffinberry's bondsmen, had to pay about $7,000 to make up for his forgeries in the auditor's office. They then wanted Mrs. Coffinberry to pay them back But she refused, as all the real estate had been deeded to her by Coffinberry a short time before his death. Then the bondsmen brought suit to have that deed set aside, and this was tried before Judge Watkins at the December term, as reported fully in the COURIER at the time. The Judge reserved his decision till he had time to study it over carefully. His decision is that the deed must be set aside. This leaves Mrs. Coffinberry not the sole owner of the real estate but only holds it in trust for the bondsmen and must make them a deed within the next ten days. Mr. Fraser of Fowler, Ind, and Rose & Rose of Auburn, were attorneys for Mrs. Coffinberry, while the bondsmen had Roby and Sharpless.

A Ripe Old Age.

Wednesday, April 4, occurred the birthday anniversary of one of the oldest and most respected citizens of DeKalb county, John Wyatt, of Jackson township, who is now in his 90th year, and the occasion was celebrated by a gathering of his children at his home four miles west of Spencerville. All the children were present except Dr. A. R. Wyatt of Lagrange. Guests were there from Kansas City, Mo., Fort Wayne, Hicksville, Lagrange, Spencerville and Auburn, and in all respects it was a notable gathering in honor of a most worthy man. Those present were entertained by the grandchildren and a pleasant feature was the splendid dinner served. Mr. Wyatt is in good health for one of his years and bids fair to celebrate more anniversaries of his natal day.

Best Remedy for Rheumatism.

Quick relief from pain. All who use Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism are delighted with the quick relief from pain which it affords. When speaking of this Mr. D. N. Sinks of Troy, Ohio, says: "Some time ago I had a severe attack of rheumatism in my arm and shoulder. I tried numerous remedies, but got no relief until I was recommended by Messrs. Geo. F. Parsons & Co., druggists of this place, to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. They recommended it so highly that I bought a bottle. I was soon relieved of all pain. I have since recommended this liniment to many of my friends, who agree that it is the best remedy for muscular rheumatism in the market." For sale by H. B. McCord.

Attention Farmers.

Like Velvet.

Our readers will be interested in knowing there is one medicine sold by the druggist, H. B. McCord, that possesses unusual merit. Krause's Little Liver Pills. They are a small, purely vegetable, gelatine coated pill, acting directly on the liver and bile without the irritation and griping common to most pills. They are gentle and natural in their action, as soft as velvet to all tender surfaces and a positive unfailing cure for Billiousness and Constipation. H. B. McCord.

Barn Burned.

The farm barn of Jacob Gall, near Wm. Carr's in Jackson township, was destroyed by fire last evening about seven o'clock. The horses were saved, but the wagon, buggy, farm implements, hay, etc., were a total loss. It is not known how the fire originated, but may have been by tramps sleeping there. It was insured in the DeKalb Mutual.

A Testimonial from England.

"I consider Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the best in the world for bronchitis," says Mr. Wm. Savory of Warrington, England. "I has saved my wife's life, she having been a martyr to bronchitis for over six years, being most of the time confined to her bed. She is now quite well. Sold by H. B. McCord.

Pains in the Back.

A. B. Farrington, Constantia, N. Y., says; "I was troubled several years with kidney disease and suffered severe pains in the back. I used Foley's Kidney Cure and one bottle cured me. I recommend it to my friends. It has given perfect satisfaction. H. B. McCord, Druggist.

A PROGRESSIVE ORDER.

The A.O.U.W. Lodge manifested its usual progressiveness last night by the initiation of six candidates through its beautiful degree and ritualistic work. This lodge stands among the first in the state in membership. While its growth has been above the average during the past few years, great care has been taken in procuring only the very best of material, and its steady increase can be accounted for by its active and zealous members. The meeting last night was one of the most interesting for a number of years, and a larger attendance was recorded than has been for a long time. The candidates were Ora Brandon, George Gregg, Fred Carper, W. L. Hoodelmier, W. H. Powell and Mathia Arnold. The candidates were given the benefit of the "rediculous as well as the sublime"—all tending to teach the beauty of charity and brotherhood and a higher life. After the degree work was conferred, a bountiful repast was served by the entertaining committee, which all seemed to enjoy immensely after their hard work earlier in the evening, After supper the screen work was presented in eloquent form, portraying many beautiful lessons in life. Then the lodge adjourned at the hour of twelve, everyone feeling imbued with nobler purposes So ends the tale of a nights outing in the mystic precincts of A.O.U.W Lodge No. 12.

OBITUARY.

James Lee, son of James and Ida Rose, was born in Cosse, Whitley county, Indiana, August 13, 1896, and departed this life after a few days of illness, at the tender age of 3 years, 7 months and 17 days. Little James leaves to mourn his early death, a father, mother, one brother, two sisters and one grandparent. He was a precious child, and the possibilities of his life will never be realized in this world. Death coming as it did only affected the body, while the spirit remained unharmed. God has taken the little lamb to himself, where no sin will ever touch his soul. Parents, go bury your sorrows in the promises of Christ, who is faithful, who promised to help and succor you in this trying hour. The funeral service was conducted from the house Wednesday at 2:30 p. m.; interment took place in the old cemetery, opposite the Evergreen, J. D. Brosy officiating.

Cold Steel Or Death.

"There is but one small chance to save your life and that is through an operation," was the awful prospect set before Mrs. I. B. Hunt, of Lime Ridge, Wis., by her doctor after vainly trying to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. He didn't count on the marvellous power of Electric Bitters to cure Stomach and Liver trouble, but she heard of it, took seven bottles, was wholy cured, avoided surgeon's knife, now weighs more and feel better than ever. It's positively guaranteed to cure Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles and never disappoints. Price 50c at McCord's drug store.

How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is strange, but it often happens.

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food, which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health; if you have not got it you can get it by taking

Scott's Emulsion

You will find it just as useful in summer as in winter, and if you are thriving upon it don't stop because the weather is warm.

CHAPTER XXVII.

We spoke in Thursday's Daily of the ambuscade the British force near Bloemfontein, South Africa, was drawn into by the Boers a few days ago There had been a hard skirmish and the British had held their own in such a way as to prove to the Boers, they were not to be beaten in a fair fight. So the Boers put up a little job on them. Their center slowly retreated, and fought a little as they went, and the British got interested and kept on after them, seeming to think that all the Boers in that section were directly in their front. Here is where they were mistaken. The two extreme wings of the Boer line fell back rapidly and were soon out of sight and forgotten. They knew the lay of the land, and after getting out of sight, hurried to a place where the road ran through a wild ravine. Here the two wings settled down on each side, and secured safe places behind rocks, trees, anthills, etc. Soon the fleeing Boer center came tearing down the ravine, with the British following. The Boer center kept running till they got to the other end of the ravine and could see their two wings closing in behind the British, and then the retreating center stopped, turned and fought. The British had got even their field artillery, partly into that ravine. With a deadly fire all around them, it took courage, skill and coolness to save the men. But they lost seven field pieces.

Stratagems of this sort are always popular with savage or semi-civilized people.

An almost exact counterpart of this Boer-British trap occurred less than eighty miles from Auburn. It occured in 1680 and the only account we have of it was given by the Indians to the Jesuit priests who came among them fifteen or twenty years after the fight took place.

This ambuscade and its battles occurred near the St. Joseph river between South Bend and Elkhart.

The Iroquois Indians from Canada New York, surprised a party of Miamis who were having a season of fishing and hunting along the St. Joseph. The Miamis were not only defeated, but several of their wives and families made prisoners. This was a bitter thing for even a savage to bear, and though inferior in numbers and arms, the Miami's took desperate steps to get their families back. They had only bows, spears and war clubs, while many of the Iroquois had guns furnished them by the French. As the Iroquois fell back on the homeward journey, the Miami's followed quietly. A heavy rain came on, and knowing that would wash out their tracks, they divided, as the Boers did last Sunday, a part going one side of their foes, and a part the other, the two wings uniting some distance ahead. The Iroquois soon saw no one was following, and they were in high spirits and very careless. Suddenly from the tall, wet grass and bushes came showers of arrows from an unseen foe. They were struck dumb with amazement for they had no idea they were then walking on the washed out trail of the Miamis. When the latter had used up their arrows they showed themselves suddenly in what we now call a rush or a charge, in which their war clubs did deadly work. Their enemies were beaten and the Miami wives and children recovered. It was the most notable battle ever fought in Indiana, if we except the fight the descendants of these Indians made at Tippecanoe where they tried a game somewhat like this, but failed, for Gen. Harrison knew their mode of warfare.

If you go by the Pennsylvania road through Pittsburg, when you are about nine miles east of that place, look to the south and notice how the land, now cleared, slopes down that way in a sort of ravine. It was here that the French and Indians caught Gen. Braddock as he came across the river and was ascending that ravine. It looks very safe and innocent now, but it proved a death trap to the British and the American colonists, beside which the ambuscades in South Africa look very small.

But where war is waged between two nations, both highly civilized and intelligent, these stratagems are seldom used, for each party is too wide awake to be caught by such schemes. So they generally meet in a fair field and the best man with the best troops and arms, will win. Something of this sort occurred at the Battle of Waterloo, when Napoleon was unable to stand against the well-trained English and Prussian.

If you have an old copy of the census of 1840, you will find a record of one slave held in Putnam county, and two in Rush county. Seems queer, don't it? In the earlier supreme court decisions are recorded a number of cases involving the right to hold slaves. Slavery began in Indiana by the French who were in possession before the Revolutionary war. They claimed the laws of France permitted it, and the Indians helped them in this practice. But when Uncle Sam got it, and it became a territory, it came under the ordinance of 1787, which said there should be no slavery. Still a man who owned a slave would not give up his property as long as he could avoid it, and cases brought would only liberate the one slave named, and all the neighbors went on as before. But it gradually grew less, and it is probable that the three slaves reported in the census of 1840, were old persons who chose to stay with the old boss.

Cook-Wohlford.

Married last evening, April 4, at 6 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents in Garrett, by Rev. J. D. Brosy, Willard Cook and Mary Ellen Wohlford. The ceremony was performed in the presence of the bride's parents, a brother and wife, Mrs. J. H. Miller and her son, W. H. Miller, of Butler. After the ceremony and congratulations given, we were seated to a table loaded down with good things to eat. Mr. Cook was formerly a resident of Hagerstown, Md., but is now employed by the B. & O. railroad company as engineer. Mrs. Cook was a resident of Garrett. They took the 8:05 train last evening and came to Auburn, where they remained over night with Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Myers, on McIntyre street. This morning they took the Wabash train to North Manchester where they will visit friends. They will remain in Garrett for a short time and then make their home in Chicago Junction, Ohio. B

Does This Hit You?

Now that garden making is about to commence, and as the majority of our gardeners would prefer to make garden without the aid of the "old hen" who is always kicking it all over the lot, would it not be well for our neighbors to bear in mind the golden rule, "Do as you would be done by." If you must keep a few chickens, keep them on your own premises. You would not like to have your garden and yard scratched up and littered over by your neighbors chickens. Many times just such little neglect causes ill feelings between neighbors for a life time.—Shut up the pullets.

Caught a Dreadful Cold.

Marion Kooke, manager for T. M. Thompson, a large importer of fine millinery at 1,658 Milwaukee Avenue, Chicago, says: "During the late severe weather I caught a dreadful cold which kept me awake at night and made me unfit to attend my work during the day. One of my milliners was taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a severe cold at that time, which relieved her so quickly that I bought some for myself. It acted like magic and I began to improve at once. I am now entirely well and feel very pleased to acknowledge its merits." For sale by H. B. McCord.

All For Robinson.

Hon. J. M. Robinson has the luck to get all the delegates so far chosen. Whitley county gave him her 11 votes, first, though they have found since, that 12 is their proper number. Allen county gave him 49 with one doubtful who may favor Hench. Since then Noble and Lagrange have chosen those who favor him. Only Steuben and DeKalb remain, and as far as we can see, both these will be in his favor. He already has more than three-fourths, and it is likely all will be for him.

The Best Blood Purifier.

The blood is constantly being purified by the lungs, liver and kidneys. Keep these organs in a healthy condition and the bowels regular and you will have no need of a blood purifier. For this purpose there is nothing equal to Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, one dose of them will do you more good than a dollar bottle of the best blood purifier. Price, 25 cents. Samples free at Howard B. McCord's drug store.

Sheep for Sale.

Owing to a scarcity of feed I have concluded to dispose of my entire flock of sheep at private sale, consisting of twenty-nine head of ewes, one ram, and thirty-two head of lambs by their sides, ranging in age from two to eight weeks. Also several head of young cattle. Residence two and one-half miles south west of Jackson Center.—P. P. LOCHNER.

THE DRUNKARD'S CATECHISM.

Who is it that loafs at ease while you toil from morning to night?

THE SALOON-KEEPER.

Who is it that buys houses and lands and strutes in fine clothes, with the money that might have kept your family from going in rags?

THE SALOON-KEEPER.

Who is it that takes your last cent for his poisonous drinks, and when your money and reputation are gone, will take you by the coat collar and kick you into the gutter?

THE SALOON-KEEPER.

Who is it that robs you of reason, puts you lower than the beasts, drives you into jail and penitentiaries, and sends many to the gallows?

THE SALOON-KEEPER.

"Nicholas Davis, of Troop B, Third United States Cavalry created great excitement Thursday afternoon at Fort Meyer and for several hours held the entire garrison at bay. Davis is said to have been drinking heavily and the effect of the liquor was to lead him to the belief that the fort was being stormed by an enemy, and it was his duty to defend it. Davis entered the troop quarters and with a Krag-Jorgensen rifle kept a watch on all sides. There was plenty of ammunition at hand for him and he was free in his shots. After hours were spent in trying to effect his capture, which was done at great risk of life, Captain Broughton ordered him shot, and when he again appeared at the window two soldiers fired; fortunately the shot struck the casement and the stock of his rifle, stunning him, as several pieces of metal was imbedded en his face; this ended the seige and the wounded drunken soldier was cared for in the hospital." Margaret Dye Ellis. 241 N. Capitol St., Washington D. C.

The parentage of three hundred idiots was traced by Dr. S. G. Howe, who reported to the Massachusetts Legislature that of the three hundred, one hundred and forty-seven were children of drunkards. Seven idiotic children were the offspring of drunken fathers and mothers. What an array of appalling facts and figures the liquor business gives! Statistics are sometimes more eloquent than words, but they do not tell the heartaches, the mental anxiety, the nervous strain, and the physical agonies of many who, though abstainers themselves, feel the influence of the accursed drink evil.

A Night Of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she could not live till morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night. "All thought she must soon die from Pneumonia, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, saying it had more than once saved her life, and cured her of Consumption. After three small doses she slept easily all night, and its further use completely cured her." This marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at McCords drug store.

"Thea," and her eyes sought the last embers of the oak block, "you are not kind as a husband should be. You n-never give me any jewels."

"Jewels!" and his basso voice seemed to come from his heart. "You ask for jewels? Any one with diamond eyes, ruby lips and teeth of pearl ask for jewels? Why, the rarest gold could buy would only be superfluous?"

Then for the first time in days she kissed him.

Facts in the Case.

Smiles—I'm glad I wasn't Shakspeare.

Giles—Why are you?

Smiles—Because I should be dead now.

Giles—Yes, that's true—and Shakspeare would be forgotten.

Where Lambs Gambol.

"Have you ever seen 'Romeo and Juliet?'" inquired the Throop street girl.

"No," responded the red-vested youth, "but I have seen Romeo to my sorrow." And his empty pockets showed that Romeo had seen him.

Forewarned Is Forearmed.

"Going to the Paris exposition next summer, Horrocks?"

"Yes."

"Good. So am I. I hope I shall see you often."

"I hope you will, Varnum."

"We ought to begin saving money for it, oughtn't we?"

"Yes. That is, you ought. I am going to run an American boarding house."—Philadelphia Times.

Objectionable.

"Billy, I'll take in de Paris exposition show only on one condition."

"What's dat, Sandy?"

"Dat dey cut out de 'Palace of Industry.'"

His Private Opinion.

"My dear," said Mrs. Jorgson, as she closed the book she had been reading, "do you know what is the most curious thing in the world?"

"Of course I do," replied the brutal half or the combination. "The most curious thing in the world is a woman that isn't curious."

Practical View.

She—Summer is my favorite season. It's so delightful to sit under the trees and listen to the concert by nature's feathered songsters.

He (enthusiastically)—Isn't it, though? And it doesn't cost a cent, either.

Matrimonial Bliss.

"You must think I'm a fool," exclaimed the angry husband.

"I would never have ventured to say so," replied his better half, "but now that you have mentioned it, I am not prepared to deny it."

On Listening Terms.

"Are you on speaking terms with Mr. Chatterbox?"

"No, merely on listening terms."

No Grounds for Argument.

"What is life?" asked the professor of the class in moral ethics.

"The absence of death," replied a youthful philosopher.

And the professor let it go at that.

An Author in Embryo.

The art of writing a short story must seem to be easy to many people, and they never realize its difficulty until they try. In a Southern school the teacher, as an educational experiment, assigned each pupil the task of writing an original story.

On the day when the stories were read a bright little towhead arose and started in as follows:

"On the green slope of a mountain stood a first-class Jersey cow, with three legs."

"That's won't do, Johnnie," interrupted the teacher, "you are one leg short."

"No, I ain't," replied the future author. "You don't wait to get my plot, which is that a railroad train cut off one leg, and the owner of the cow got three thousand dollars damages, and moved his whole family to Paris in time for the Exposition, where the girls will be married to rich Frenchmen and die happy ever afterward!"

The average man has more money back of him than he can see ahead of him.

THE LIGHT OF EASTER.

WELCOME, O light of Easter morn!
Whose glorious banners span the skies;
Bring thou the hope—of ages born—
That bids all slumbering nature rise.
Again shall earth, triumphant, free,
From winter's grasp, sing forth her pride,
Through spring's awakening melody,
O light of Easteritide!

O blessed light! though darkly down
O'er Judah's hills her sun had set,
Yet thou didst Calvary's victory crown
And gild pain-shadowed Olivet,
When swift before thee fled the gloom,
The grave's dark bondage thrust aside,
And conqueror thou o'er death and doom,
O light of Eastertide!

Fair, peaceful light, in blessings fall
Round, weary feet and hearts that grieve;
Life's fairest promise bring to all,
Thy lilies with its cypress weave;
Bring answer to the anguished prayer,
Bring peace where pain and storm abide,
And thou the longest linger there,
O light of Eastertide!

O wondrous light! that shining through
Long vistas of the speeding years,
Still brings the hope of birth anew,
As each returning spring appears;
Emblem of life immortal thou,
As o'er the world, through spaces wide,
There breaks thy radiant glory now,
O light of Eastertide!

—Woman's Home Companion.

AT THE CHURCH DOOR

EVERY young woman, in this wonderful age, has a "call" to be a genius in some special direction, but Dorothy Lake was an oddity.

She was in no popular sense a fin de siecle girl, and her father, an old-fashioned man, without any soulful aspirations, had been heard to thank God for it.

His little laughing Dorothy quite satisfied his private ideal of what a girl should be, although she was a perpetual thorn in the side of his only sister, president of several clubs, and an earnest advocate of woman's rights.

"But so am I, auntie," Dorothy had argued, from the stronghold of her father's knee. "I believe in woman's rights as much as you do, only we differ about what these rights are."

"Will you explain your platform, my dear?" her aunt asked, grimly.

And Dorothy had laughed, and finally averred that, in her opinion, a woman's rights consisted in having all men honor and protect her, and one especial man love and take care of her.

Undoubtedly, Dorothy was an oddity, but several men of younger years than her father were not altogether displeased with the out-of-date characteristics of this winsome maid. One in particular, viewed her with eyes of distinct approval, and Dorothy's rosy cheek grew rosier still whenever Jack Eustis, junior partner in her father's firm, came near.

For Jack and Dorothy this dusty old world became a glorified romance; blessed by the dew and the sun, the rosy bud of passion slowly unfolded its perfumed leaves, until in perfect and wonderful bloom the rich rose of love stood waiting to be gathered.

Then some untoward fate turned Jack's eyes in the direction of a sparkling debutante, whose brunette beauty glowed like a rich ruby, in contrast with the cool, pure turquoise charms of his own little lady love. Dorothy watched his undisguised masculine admiration, and her feminine soul grew bitter within her.

"How handsome Miss Hayden is," she remarked, with assumed nonchalance, following the direction of his gaze.

And Jack, not having attained the wisdom of angels, warmly agreed.

"Quite the prettiest girl in the room," pursued Dorothy, smoothing her gloves with assiduous care.

Jack cheerfully assented.

And then Dorothy waltzed away with a new partner, and, try as he might, Jack failed to catch a single glance over that partner's shoulder from the blue eyes that meant his heaven.

He took refuge in sulky flight, and Dorothy, having laughed and danced the evening through, spent the remainder of the night in tears, not of repentance, but of jealous wrath and pain.

The nightfall found her carefully dressed and willing to be sued into a forgiving frame of mind. But Jack, the outraged and indignant, had not yet reached the melting mood; he waited for a word of apology and recall, and when, after what seemed to Dorothy unpardonable delay, he finally sent in his card, Miss Lake was "not at home."

Lent gave excuse to one aching heart for complete withdrawal from distasteful gayety, and never was a "miserable sinner" sensible of greater misery than when lovely Dorothy Lake besought mercy in the church litany.

"Jack Eustis went home last night," announced Judge Lake, his eyes on his buttered toast, Palm Sunday morning. "Got a telegram at 4 o'clock that his mother was dying."

How small and pitiful now seemed the quarrel that had parted them. Being a proud woman, she could not stretch out a beseeching hand to her lost lover. For her there was nothing save the time-honored sorrow of silence.

Little Dorothy, fair as a violet in her Easter array of lilac crepe and snowdrops, knelt in the church where the air was heavy with the fragrance of lilies, and prayed for that "peace which the world cannot give."

"And, O God, don't let his mother die," she kept repeating with the persistency of a child, but not even to God was this shy, proud nature willing to formulate in words the prayer that shook her soul to its center.

She lifted her head to find the church almost deserted. Some one, pale and repentant, stood at the church door. The meeting was as solemn as the place, and broken words of love and sorrow were breathed on either side.

And only the birds on the belfry twittered above them and the green ivy peeped through the open windows to share their joy.

A few weeks later, at their marriage—for Jack would listen to no delay—an incident occurred irregular and unheard of in wedding annals. The bridal party was shocked, but the bride only smiled, when the bridegroom, contrary to all precedent, led her unsaluted from the altar, but bent down and kissed her at the church door.

ORIGIN OF EASTER RABBITS.

According to Teutonic Tradition Bunny Was Once a Bird.

One of the quaint and interesting features of our modern Easter carnival is the appearance in shop windows, side by side with the emblematic colored egg, of a pert tall-eared rabbit, and those who cannot understand why bunny should have a place in our Easter decorations shrug their shoulders and think it a trick to please the children. But the legend of the Easter rabbit is one of the oldest in mythology, and is mentioned in the early folk lore of South Germany. Originally, it appears, the rabbit was a bird, which the ancient Teutonic goddess Ostara—goddess of the east or of spring—transformed into a quadruped. For this reason the rabbit or hare is grateful, and in remembrance of its former condition as a bird and as a swift messenger of spring, and of the goddess whom it served, is able to lay colored Easter eggs on her festival in the spring time, the colors illustrating the theory that when it was a bird the rabbit laid colored eggs, and an egg has always been a symbol of the resurrection, and therefore used as an illustration at Easter.

In many parts of Germany it is a common custom for children to go to their godmother at Easter to receive colored eggs and a baked rabbit. Sometimes the children are sent to the garden to make a "rabbit's nest" with straws and sticks, and in the morning they are sent to gather the wonderful colored eggs which the rabbit had laid for them. And they always find them.

Easter and Immortality.

Here are a few fit words for Easter Sunday morning from Edward E. Hale, a man whose large thought makes him at home with all sects, yet bound by none:

"Easter morning does not prove man's immortality. It asserts it. In the universal resurrection from the night of winter, as life which had been sleeping returns, it asserts man's communion and companionship with the God who is life, it declares that man, a child of God, cannot die. Because he is immortal he can come to his God as an immortal comes, can speak, can listen, can reply. He enters on this or that enterprise sure that he has infinite allies. If one of these be called away they shall meet again. He lives for and with those who are also immortal. Each for each has companionship, perhaps help. It cannot be that they are to grind along through ages stupid and alone.

"To renew such immortal life here is the yearly mission of Easter day. That this which is mortal may be clothed upon with immortality."

EASTER AND ITS EGGS.

EASTER brings the feast of eggs. The original use of the egg at Easter simply typified the revivication of nature. Some historians say that the custom of giving eggs at Easter is to be traced back to the theology and philosophy of the Egyptians, Persians, Gauls, Greeks, Romans, etc., among all of whom an egg was the emblem of the universe, the work of the Supreme Divinity. The egg in all ages and in every country has been the subject of poetical myths and legends. The ancient Finns believed that a mystic bird laid an egg on the lap of Vaimainon, who hatched it in his bosom. He let it fall into the water and it broke; the lower portion of the shell formed the earth, the upper the sky, the liquid white became the sun and the yolk the moon, while the little fragments of broken shell were changed into stars.

Hutchinson remarks that "the egg was held by the Egyptians as a sacred emblem of the renovation of mankind after the deluge. The Hebrews adopted it to suit the circumstances of their history as a type of their departure from the land of Egypt, and it was used in the Feast of the Passover as part of the furniture of the table, with the Paschal lamb. Christians have certainly used it on this day, as retaining the elements of future life, for the emblem of the resurrection. It seems as if the egg was thus decorated for a religious trophy after the days of mortification and abstinence were over and festivity had taken place, and as an emblem of the resurrection of life, certified to us by the resurrection from the regions of death and the grave."

The usage of interchanging eggs at this season has been referred for its origin to the egg games of the Romans, which they celebrated at the time of our Easter, when they ran races in an egg-shaped ring, and the victor received eggs as his prize. These games were instituted in honor of Castor and Pollux, who, fabulists relate, came forth from an egg deposited by Leda after Jupiter had visited her in the shape of a swan.

She Sympathizes.

The Minister (over his unfinished sermon)—Dear me! It's so hard to have anything new for Easter!

His Daughter—I suppose it is, dad. What a pity you can't leave it all to the milliner, as the rest of us do!—Puck.

MRS. HODGSON BURNETT.

Whose Recent Marriage Was a Surprise to Many Admirers.

The recent marriage of Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett to Stephen Townsend, the English physician-actor, has created much interest and not a little surprise in this country. When she left Washington a few years ago she positively declared that she did not have the slightest intention of marrying again, and yet she married almost immediately after reaching Genoa, Italy, where Mr. Townsend was staying.

Mrs. Burnett's life has not been all roses. Her literary successes, great as they were in every respect, did not bring her joy. She is said to have spent few happy days since she played with her sisters under the blue skies and in the sweet-smelling woods of sunny Tennessee. Mrs. Burnett is now 51 years old, and she has been a breadwinner ever since she was 15. She was born in Manchester, Eng., and came to America with her mother and sisters in 1865. The family was so poor that the little which she could earn as a country school teacher was most welcome.

The change from the tall factory chimney scenes of Manchester to the open, new country of Tennessee filled the heart of little Frances with delight. It was during these early struggles that she conceived the plan of sending a story to the magazines. Her sister sold grapes for the postage which carried her first effort to the publisher. From that time forward Mrs. Burnett's ascent to fame and wealth was easy as the proverbial descent to Avernus.

Her first story was published in 1867, and the products of her pen have been in big demand since that time. The creator of "Fauntleroy" was celebrated as a clever story writer and romancer at 24, and it was at that age, in 1873, that she married Dr. Burnett. Almost since that time Mrs. Burnett has lived in Washington. That "Lass o' Lowrie's," one of her most widely read stories, was written and published in 1877. From this success dated her career as a book writer.

Mrs. Burnett first met Townsend in a professional capacity. Since then they have been almost inseparable. He was the cause of her divorce from her husband—an act that alienated many of her friends.

AN HISTORIC PLAYHOUSE.

It Passed Away in the Destruction of the Comedie Francais.

The Comedie Francais, Paris, which was destroyed by fire, and in which one life, that of Mlle. Henriette Henriot, was lost, was the most historic playhouse in France and was intimately connected with the history of French literature. Opened first in the sixteenth century, its doors are now closed on the lagging heels of the nineteenth. Under Louis XIV. the Comedie was one of the glories of France. It remained the same until the recent disaster, and was universally recognized as the first theater in the world.

Bernhardt came from the Comedie Francais to win her first success before the people of America. To American travelers the place was almost as well known as the prominent playhouses in the chief American cities, and few visited Paris who did not spend a night at the Francais, to see the wit, the genius, the fashion and the folly of the gay capital.

The theater was subsidized by the government. Genius for decades was always sure of recognition and financial reward, and this attracted to the house the best of the dramatic art of France. At the head of the theater was an administrator general, who was paid 36,000 francs a year for salary and expenses. He was usually drawn from the ranks of distinguished literary men of the day, and it was his duty to represent the comedians toward the state. The co-partnership of the theater comprised twenty-four members. A certain sum of money was set aside annually from the receipts of the theater for the pensioning of such of its members as were compelled to retire through old age. The annual expenses averaged 2,000,000 francs and the receipts about 2,500,000. These figures are those for the year 1896. In the receipts were included 240,000 francs paid annually by the government in support of the theater. The theater contained many valuable paintings, statuary groups and priceless relics of the past. These to a great extent were destroyed.

Wireless Telegraphy.

Professor Oliver Lodge is reported to have announced that he has an entirely new method of telegraphing without wires which will, he hopes, enable him to send messages long distances. He does not, like Marconi, depend upon sympathetic waves, but upon magnetism, which is independent of obstacles; and he believes it will be applicable to signalling between ships and between the shore and ships. Professor Lodge's ideas are not yet reduced to practical form.

A MOTHER'S STORY.

Tells About Her Daughter's Illness and How She was Relieved—Two Letters to Mrs. Pinkham.

"MRS. PINKHAM:—I write to tell you about my daughter. She is nineteen years old and is flowing all the time, and has been for about three months. The doctor does her but very little good, if any. I thought I would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but I want your advice before beginning its use. I have become very much alarmed about her, as she is getting so weak."—MRS. MATILDA A. CAMP, Manchester Mill, Macon, Ga., May 21, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It affords me great pleasure to tell you of the benefit my daughter has received from the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After beginning the use of your medicine she began to mend rapidly and is now able to be at her work. Her menses are regular and almost painless. I feel very thankful to you and expect to always keep your Vegetable Compound in my house. It is the best medicine I ever knew. You have my permission to publish this letter if you wish, it may be the means of doing others good."—MRS. MATILDA A. CAMP, Manchester Mill, Macon, Ga., September 18, 1899.

How It Happened.

Mistress—How is it, Sarah, that whenever I come into the kitchen I find you gossiping with the baker or the butcher?

Maid—Well, ma'am, if you really ask for the truth I should say as it was them nasty soft-soled shoes you comes creeping about in.—Tit-Bits.

WEAVES WIRE FENCES.

Machine Which Will Rapidly Construct a Serviceable Fence.

Since the use of wire fences in one form or another has become so great on our Western plains, in Australia and South Africa, the development of machines for their construction has been brought to a high state of perfection. Our illustration, which represents an improved wire-fence weaving machine, shows quite clearly how strong and serviceable fence may be constructed in position very rapidly and cheaply. The horizontal strands of wire are first attached to a post and threaded through the several guides on the weaving machine and continued to a movable standard some distance farther along. The weaving machine carries a number of spools of wire, and when it is started in operation the weaving of the fence progresses rapidly in the form shown. The several spools on this fence machine are made to revolve around the guiding strands of wire, the wire being automatically uncoiled from them. After several revolutions of the spools, produced by a hand-wheel, the machine is unlimbered by means of a lever and is moved back a few inches further, and the same operation repeated. When a sufficient length of fence has been woven a post is placed in position and the wire fence attached to it, when the standard carrying the foundation wire is moved along for another length.

TAKES A WOMAN

To Insult Another Woman in a Sure, Effective Way.

"It takes a woman to insult another woman," casually remarked the man with a flower in his coat, "and I don't mean to insult the sex by saying it, either. It is simple fact." "Oh, very well," assented his listener. "But what do you call it beside 'simple fact' when you make such a sweeping charge?" "Well, for instance," said this man with a flower in his coat, "I was at a reception the other afternoon, where a pretty young woman, a local artist, was bidden to sing. She happened to be suffering from a bad cold, but rather than disappoint the hostess, who depended on her voice for entertaining the guests, she began bravely a well-known German song, which she does usually remarkably well. And then I was an eyewitness to a scene that illustrates my 'sweeping charge.' Seated directly in front of the singer were two ladies who disdained the art that had been fostered in a rival clique, and who were determined to let their victim see how despised she was, how bad her voice, how crude her method; at least this was all written on their countenances, as I saw them. The lady who knew it all signaled the lady who knew that she knew it all by pushing out a Boston boot and touching the other's foot. Indescribable weariness lifted the eyebrow of the lady who knew it all, and the lady who knew that she knew it all leaned forward, resting her chin in her glove, as though unable to hold herself erect an instant longer. And still the song went on! And still the ladies rustled and twisted, fastening their gaze blankly on the singer, but at last the lady who knew that she knew it all perceived her insult was not taking effect, and thereupon she arose, bidding her hostess good-by in the middle of the last verse with a great flourish." "And you think this is a nice thing to relate," cried a woman, who, happily for her, doesn't know a note of music." "No," said the man, calmly, "but was it nice of your sex to try to upset a fellow-creature, by letting her see how distasteful she was, not because she couldn't sing, but because here came a chance to pay off some old scores? Yes, I persist in saying that it takes a woman to insult another woman. I should never have dreamed of going out in the middle of a song given at a private drawing-room, no matter how much I hated the man who was singing it." "Perhaps not; but doubtless the lady was faint, ill, a wreck, and emotion was not good for her. That is the most charitable light in which to look at any such breach of good manners."—Boston Herald.

Sharp.

A story is told of a lord and a clergyman who were once driving together, and passed the city jail. The lord turned to his companion and jokingly said:

"Where would you be, sir, if that jail had its due?"

Without a second's hesitation his companion smilingly responded, "Riding alone, I fear."

The Reason.

In one of his books Mark Twain observes that the reason there is comparatively little arable land in Spain is because the great majority of the Spanish people are in the habit of squandering it on their persons, and when they die it is buried with them.

THE GOLDEN TEMPER.

This Is the Philosopher's Stone of a Woman's Domestic Life.

"The art of being companionable is a secret worth finding out, even if it takes time and patience to learn it," affirms Mary Stuart McKinney in the Woman's Home Companion. "Some people are born with the happy knack. There is a spontaneous gaiety that you expect women to have, just as you expect the birds to sing and the sun to shine. Many a very bad quarter of an hour has been averted in the domestic circle by a bright laugh or a gay rejoinder. The laugh may be saucy and the rejoinder a bit of verbal buffet, but if it is only done good-naturedly it will be all the more effective. It used basely to be said of men that the only way to make them happy was to feed them well. That could only have applied to a small and commonplace minority. Of course, no one wants an uninterrupted round of even the most brilliant smiles any more than he would wish to make three meals a day off meringues and biscuits glaces, but it is safe to say that countless numbers of willing and delighted masculine captives may be led by the lightest chains that gaiety and good-humor can forge. One result of a great deal of the imperfect education that is dealt out by the handful nowadays is that some women are apt to set undue value on mere book learning and the gift of controversy. This kind of a person looks upon your little poke as beneath her dignity, and she treats you to a somber harangue on the necessity of having serious views of life at the moment when you are striving to look at things cheerfully in an effort to forget cares and anxieties. It is a woman's privilege to lighten the shadows and be all that is gracious and bright on the ornamental side of life. It is a good plan to let much learning sit as lightly as possible and to get into the habit of making 'little troubles pass like little ripples in a sunny river.'"

English the Commercial Language

The Chinese minister made the noteworthy statement in his Philadelphia address that in all the ports and trade centers of the east the English language held a place in the counting-room and school such as no other language could claim. "Chinese, Japanese, Germans, Russians and Frenchmen alike," he said, "make use of it in their business offices, in their clubs and in their family circles. In short, it may be called the commercial language of the orient."

A Successful Farmer.

Within three miles of the town, going eastward, is the farm of Mr. W. Creamer, one of the municipality's largest and most prosperous mixed farmers. Mr. Creamer came to this country in 1880 and settled on a portion of the land which comprises his present enormous farm of 1,280 acres. In common with many others of a similar period he experienced all the hardships and difficulties common to the absence of railway and market facilities. In nowise daunted, by energy, industry and indomitable will he has been able to surmount all obstacles and has achieved an unparalleled success, and is known throughout the district as one of its pre-eminent farmers. His operations extend over 1,280 acres, two sections (the thought alone of so much land makes the Eastern farmer dizzy); 800 acres of this is broken and the remainder is excellent pasture land and wood. This harvest he took off a crop of 500 acres of wheat and 200 of other grains. Four hundred acres are plowed and ready for wheat next spring. Mr. Creamer is, as has been stated, a mixed farmer of no mean proportions, having at the present time 40 horses, 60 head of cattle and 50 pigs. The most modern farm buildings are found on his premises, the main building being a barn 55 feet square on a stone foundation, containing stabling for 16 horses and a large number of cattle. The loft is stored with 29 loads of sheaf oats for feed and tons of hay; there is also a cutting box. Another building of large dimensions is the granary, in which, after teaming large quantities to market, he still has stored 3,000 bushels of wheat. A crushing machine is in the building. There are a number of lesser buildings containing chicken house, pig pens and cattle sheds. The farm residence is a handsome frame structure of ample proportions, in connection with it is a wood shed. The water supply is unexcelled; besides house supply there is a well in the stables and a never failing spring situated in a bluff, which never freezes. Surrounded by a thick bluff of poplars, extending in a semi-circle to the west, north and east, the winter storms are broken and accumulation of snow unknown. Added to his farming operations, Mr. Creamer conducts a threshing outfit for the season. His success is an instance of what can be accomplished in Western Canada.—Baldur (Man.) Gazette, Nov. 16, 1899.

Thousands of settlers are going from the United States to take advantage of the free homestead lands that are being offered by the Canadian Government.

Venice Without Water.

Venice without water would hardly be Venice at all, but we are assured there is a possibility that the picturesque Venice of to-day may become a city of the past, and eventually Venice may be waterless.

According to Prof. Marinelli, the regular increase in the delta of the river Po is such that in process of time the northern Adriatic will be dry, and Venice will no more be upon the sea. A comparison of the Austrian map of 1823 with the record of the surveys of 1893 shows that the mean annual increase of the delta during these seventy years has been three-tenths of a square mile.

An encroachment upon the sea of three-tenths of a mile in a year means a large increase in a century. It appears that the total increase in six centuries has been about one hundred and ninety-eight square miles. The increase is continuing, and the Gulf of Venice is doomed to disappear.

No immediate alarm need be felt, and it will not be necessary to hurry off to Venice to take a farewell look at the city in its present picturesqueness. Prof. Marinelli calculates that between a hundred and a hundred and twenty centuries will elapse before the entire northern Adriatic will have become dry land.

Sir Robert Peel was once going through a picture collection with a friend where there was a portrait of a prominent Englishman who was famous for saying sharp things.

"How wonderfully like!" said the friend. "You can see the quiver on his lips."

"Yes," replied Sir Robert, "and the arrows coming out of it."

What Do the Children Drink?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing, and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs about ¼ as much. All grocers sell it. 15c. and 25c.

ALABASTINE is a durable and natural coating for walls and ceilings, made ready for use by mixing with cold water. It is a cement that goes through a process of setting, hardens with age, and can be scoated and recoated without washing off its old coats before renewing. Alabastine is made in white and fourteen beautiful tints. It is put up in five-pound packages in dry form, with complete directions on every package.

ALABASTINE Should not be confounded with kalsomines, as it is entirely different from all the various kalsomines on the market, being durable and not stuck on the wall with glue. Alabastine customers should avoid getting cheap kalsomines under different names, by insisting on having the goods in packages properly labeled. They should reject all imitations. There is nothing "just as good."

ALABASTINE

Prevents much sickness, particularly throat and lung difficulties, attributable to unsanitary coatings on walls. It has been recommended in a paper published by the Michigan State Board of Health on account of its sanitary features; which paper strongly condemned kalsomines. Alabastine can be used on either plastered walls, wood ceilings, brick or canvas, and any one can brush it on. It admits of radical changes from wall paper decorations, thus securing at reasonable expense the latest and best effects. Alabastine is manufactured by the

O, How Happy I am to BE FREE from NEURALGIA

In what Mrs. Archie Young of 1817 Oaks Ave., West Superior, Wis., writes us on Jan. 25th, 1900. "I am so thankful to be able to say that your SWANSON'S '5 DROPS' is the best medicine I have ever used in my life. I sent for some last November and commenced using it right away and it helped me from the first dose. Oh, I cannot explain to you how I was suffering from neuralgia! It seemed that death was near at hand. I thought no one could be worse. I was so very weak that I hardly expected to live to see my husband come back from his daily labor. But now I am free from pain, my cheeks are red, and I sleep well the whole night through. Many of my friends are so surprised to see me looking so well that they will send for some of your '5 DROPS.'"

RHEUMATISM 5 DROPS [TRADE MARK.]

"I have been afflicted with rheumatism for 2 years. I was in bed with it when I saw your advertisement in a paper, recommending SWANSON'S '5 DROPS' very highly. I thought I would try it. It has completely cured me, but I like it so well that I want two more bottles for fear I will get into the same fix I was before I sent for '5 DROPS,'" writes Mr. Alexander Futrell of Vanndale, Ark., Feb. 6th, 1900.

Is the most powerful specific known. Free from opiates and perfectly harmless. It gives almost instantaneous relief, and is a positive cure for Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia, Backache, Asthma, Hay Fever, Catarrh, La Grippe, Croup, Sleeplessness, Nervousness, Nervous and Neuralgic Headaches, Earaches, Toothache, Heart Weakness, Dropsy, Malaria, Creeping Numbness, etc., etc.

30 DAYS to enable sufferers to give "5 DROPS" at least a trial, we will send a 25c sample bottle, prepaid by mail for 10c. A sample bottle will convince you. Also, large bottles (300 doses) $1.00, 6 bottles for $5. Sold by us and agents. AGENTS WANTED in New Territory. Write us to-day.

Spring Body Cleaning

Every spring you clean the house you live in, to get rid of the dust and dirt which collected in the winter. Your body, the house your soul lives in, also becomes filled up during the winter with all manner of filth, which should have been removed from day to day, but was not. Your body needs cleaning inside. If your bowels, your liver, your kidneys are full of putrid filth, and you don't clean them out in the spring, you'll be in bad odor with yourself and everybody else all summer.

DON'T USE A HOSE to clean your body inside, but sweet, fragrant, mild but positive and forceful CASCARETS, that work while you sleep, prepare all the filth collected in your body for removal, and drive it off softly, gently, but none the less surely, leaving your blood pure and nourishing, your stomach and bowels clean and lively, and your liver and kidneys healthy and active. Try a 10-cent box today, and if not satisfied get your money back—but you'll see how the cleaning of your body is

WATERLOO

A visit to Waterloo last Saturday showed the town busy and full of country people. And such piles of eggs, we never saw. It was apparently "egg day" at Speer's grocery, where they must have taken in several hundred dozen. We were pleased to see Mr. Speer looking in better health. Charles Kelley has just recovered from a siege of poor health. Will Lease is busy overseeing the spring work on his farm and with his law practice. Hez. Lease is full of business at the bank, and D. L. in the store. Giles Abbey is hale and sound yet, after more than twenty years as cashier of the DeKalb bank, the oldest in the county, established by Best & McClellan early in the 70's. J. C. Boyer was at his best, overseeing his Saturday sales. R. M. Lockhart was bustling about as usual. Dr. Darby has a fine drugstore in the corner of his block so long occupied by J. D. Campbell. The latter has one of the rooms in the new brick block, and everything is tidy. But we were sorry to see "Jim" almost blind, due to an affection of the optic nerve, resulting from the grip. He is suffering from this cause a good deal. R. N. Crooks and his son have a good business at the furniture store. We met a number of others, including S. P. Klotz, J. F. Maxson, our old friend Henke and others we cannot recall now. Editor Willis shows plainly the results of poor health, but we hope to see him hang onto the willows and come out all right in the spring. He and his boys have a model institution in both the newspaper and books and stationary line, and we hope are doing well. Gib McIntosh came up from Wabash Saturday, to join his family who have been visiting here a week or two. He is timber buyer for the big Wabash National Cooperage and Hardwood Co., whose owners are Auburn parties. He has followed this work many years and is considered an expert in that line. They all went back to Wabash the first of the week.

G. A. R. Meeting.

The officers of DeKalb County Battalion, G. A. R., met in the post hall in this city Saturday afternoon to arrange for their next annual meeting, and there was a good attendance. After some discussion it was decided to hold the meeting in Auburn on Thursday, August 16.

Lieut. A. P. Green was appointed chairman of the committee on arrangements, with power to select all necessary assistants. Committee on program—G. W. Gordon, Joseph Rainier, Rev. J. N. Wilson, J. O. Davidson and G. A. Bishop. Committee on transportation—F. C. Waterman, Waterloo; Russell A. Copp, Ashley; John Otto, Auburn; E. W. Miner, Garrett; Jonathan Hazlett, Butler; Mahlon Baker, St. Joe.

The annual meetings of the battalion have been very successful and the one this year is expected to lead all others in interest and attendance. Our people should arrange to give the old veterans a cordial welcome.

Death of Thomas McCrum.

We noted briefly yesterday the illness of Thomas McCrum and that he was in a very serious condition. Our people were unprepared, however, for the news of his death, which occurred at 6:15 last evening at his home on South Cedar street. Mr. McCrum, who was long employed in the Kiblinger factory and respected by not only his fellow-employes but his many acquaintances, was taken sick Friday afternoon. His condition rapidly grew worse and on Saturday evening he became unconscious, remaining in that state until his death. Mr. McCrum was an industrious, quiet man, and his death will be deplored by a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. He reached his forty-fourth birthday last July. The services will be held at the Lutheran church Thursday afternoon, Rev. J. D. Brosy officiating, the cortege leaving the house at 1:30. Interment in Woodlawn cemetery.

Murder Near Hicksville.

Sylvester Steel was shot and almost instantly killed at the home of Chas. Smith, west of Hicksville, Saturday evening, by William Davis. Steel had been paying considerable attention to the wife of Davis and the latter had on several occasions threatened to kill him. Steel was just entering Smith's house when a shot was fired and the wounded man fell dead on the floor. The murderer escaped but was traced by bloodhounds to Hicksville and captured. For fear of mob violence the officers hurried their man on board a freight train and he was taken to Defiance to await trial. Davis made no denial of the crime.

Mr. Guild Stays.

The conference decided that Rev. T. M. Guild is to be returned to Auburn and continue in charge where his work has been such a decided success. This will gratify his people and all other church-goers, for he has endeared himself to the community in general. It is a compliment to a deserving, hard-working and capable man, one who has always done his duties scrupulously and conscientiously. We gladly join in the general congratulations. And Auburn ladies are rejoicing that Mrs. Guild will be with them for a time longer. She has made for herself friends in many circles.

Conference Appointments.

The appointments of ministers for the North Indiana conference were made yesterday afternoon and many changes are noted. Owing to lack of space we connot give the entire list but these will be of interest to most of our readers.

McVicker's Theater.

Love, heroism, pluck and sincerity are the qualities which have made Jacob Litt's "In Old Kentucky" the tremendous popular success which it is. The old play is taking a new lease of life at McVicker's Theater, Chicago, where it is playing a two weeks' engagment to audiences that pack the house as if the piece were in its first instead of its seventh season. The charm of freshness is lent to this engagement by the splendid scenery painted for the New York Academy and used only in that house and McVicker's. The superb setting of the mountain scene is the admiration of all spectators. Over a chasm that cleaves the mountain in twain a slight bridge is thrown way up at a dizzy height above the stage. Across this bridge the heroine runs to her solitary little home on a still farther height. Presently one of the men who loves her, fired by jealousy of another cuts the rope which holds the bridge in place and when Madge comes back and sees the man she loves lying unconscious while a smoking fuse attached to a dynamite bomb threatens his life. The girl rushes for the bridge and finds it gone; then, frantic with the sense of danger, she seizes the rope and swings across the chasm in time to save her lover. The pickaninny scene in the second act goes splendidly as presented at McVicker's. The little "coons" enjoy the frolic and fun intensely and the dancing and singing give genuine enjoyment. This year Elsa Ryan, a beauty and a bright, talented girl, plays Madge and plays it well. She is the daintiest sweetest little person one would want to see and in her jockey costume looks charming. The engagement ends Saturday night April 14.

Blanche Walsh and Helbourne MacDowell in an elaborate revival of Sardou's "Cleopatra" will be the attraction Easter week and following them Otis Skinner will make a fine production of "Prince Otto."

OBITUARY.

Mary Elizabeth Clark was born in Hendryburgh, Ohio, April 17, 1837. She moved with her parents to Wells county, this state in the year 1856, where she was united in marriage to William Clark on the 31st of December 1860. To this happy union were born six children, three of whom are still living. Mr. and Mrs. Clark came to Auburn on the fifth day of May, 1875, where they have since lived. Nine years ago Mrs. Clark was called to mourn the death of her husband, and since that time she lived in her own home on West Eleventh street, until two years ago, when she made her home with her daughter, Mrs. John Lochner, having sold her own home. Mrs. Clark was a charter member of the W. R. C. of Auburn, where she has always been an honored and esteemed member. She has filled all of the high offices in the Relief Corps. Her removal by death will be keenly felt by each one of her sisters. One week Tuesday she went to visit some relatives living in Zanesville, Allen county, and while there she was taken sick with congestion of the lungs and pleurisy, which terminated her earthly life on last Sabbath, April 8, at 3 p. m. It would have been a comfort to her and to her children also, if they could have been by her bedside when she passed away, but this was denied them by death coming too soon. Mrs. Clark had reached the ripe age of 62 years, 11 months and 21 days. She lived a good and useful life, and was a loving and tender mother, and was respected by all who knew her.

Mother Clark leaves to mourn her death three children, five grandchildren, three brothers, one sister besides many other friends. The funeral service took place at the home of John Lochner on South Jackson street Tuesday at 2, p. m. Interment in Woodlawn cemetery, Rev. J. D. Brosy officiating, assisted by Rev. W. L. Meese.

George Allen Park was born September 30, 1899, died April 6, 1900. Aged 6 months and 6 days.

Little George was born in Waterloo and was the pride and hope of his young parents, Albert and Marie Parks. His sickness was brief and violent, being pneumonia, it very soon smothered the life out of the sweet little darling The grandparents, Allan and Lovina Park, at whose home it died, were incessant and tireless in their efforts to render every aid to the little sufferer, but

"All that's bright must fade,
The brightest still the fleetest;
All that's sweet was made
But to be lost when sweetest."

"Though lost to sight, to memory dear, thou ever will remain."

Cottage services were conducted by Rev. W. O. Butler at the residence of Allen Park, and the remains were buried on the lawn of the home, for the time being.

Dewey Holbert, infant son of Elim and Emma Kessinger, was born in Churubusco, Ind., Oct. 2, 1898, and departed this life at the tender age of 1 year, 6 months and 6 days. Dewey leaves to mourn his early death a father and mother, one brother, one sister and three grandparents. This experience so common in human life, is always sad. There is, however, always a bright side in the death of every child, for none of them are lost. Jesus said "for of such is the kingdom of heaven." The funeral service was conducted from the house on South Main street Tuesday at 3 p. m. Interment took place in the Woodlawn cemetery, Rev. J. D. Brosy officiating.

Melba Vestalis, infant daughter of Myron and Opha Brandon, was born in Auburn April 6, 1900. and died April 9, 1900, aged 3 days. She leaves to mourn her early death a father and mother and four grandparents. Scarcely had the little one been given when death took it away. In all our sorrows we are not alone, but we have one who is mighty to save, and help us. The funeral service was conducted from the home on North VanBuren street yesterday at 1 p. m. Interment took place in Evergreen cemetery. Rev. J. D. Brosy officiating.

To Make Things Solid

A Lewis & Co. have just received a car load of the celebrated Lagdorffer German Portland cement. They have handled this brand for the past four years and some of the best walks and crossings in Auburn have been made from it; the town has used nearly 100 barrels in that time.

The Wayland cement is an American make, introduced here last season. Two car loads were sold during the season, and Picker Bros. and other customers who used it for walks found it as good as the imported cement. Lewis & Co. will handle these two grades this season, aside from a cheaper grade. Their yards are near the Lake Shore freight depot where they have a full line of building material. Peerless white lime has no equal. They sell lots of it.

UNIFORMED PORTERS

At Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Station, Washington, D. C.

The uniformed porters who were placed in service by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at their Washington City station on the first of the year have proven a great convenience to the traveling public. There are six of them and are known as "Station Porters" They meet all trains, and their duties are to assist passengers in carrying their baggage from the train to the waiting room or carriages, and are instructed to pay special attention to elderly people, ladies and children, assisting them in every possible manner. They are not allowed to request any remuneration from passengers for their services. The men have been drilled in politeness and have passed examination as to their knowledge of the train service. Their uniform is of blue cloth, with red cap, lettered "B & O.," with shield on the left breast with the figure of the Dome of the Capitol. The men are also posted on the city of Washington. and will give any information pertaining to street car service and other matters so essential at the Capital. 16

Automobile Service.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has established Electric Automobile Service at Washington, D. C. in connection with the train service, being the first railroad to introduce this mode of transportation regularly to and from its railway station.

The Automobiles are of the latest electric pattern, absolutely noiseless in regard to machinery and running gear. They are provided with luxuriously deep cushioned seats, with electric lights and time pieces. Two small trunks can be carried on the supports at the rear of the vehicle, and the top of the cab provides ample room for small traveling bags and hand luggage.

The splendid streets of Washington are particularly favorable for this high-class transportation, and the vehicles can in safety reach a speed from ten to fourteen miles an hour on any of the streets, excepting in the business portion.

It has been arranged, when special service is desired, passengers on trains when nearing Washington from East will notify conductor before reaching Baltimore, and on trains from the West will notify conductor before arrival of train at Washington Junction.

The rates for this extraordinary service are extremely reasonable, and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, with its advanced ideas and methods, is to be congratulated in being the first to inaugurate regularly this latest invention in transportation service. 16

Savage Hair-Dressing.

Hair-dressing among savages is an art absolutely unequaled among civilized people, and the edifices erected on the heads of Africans and Fiji islanders are works of time and, like Rome, are not built in a day nor taken down in a night. From the island of Engano, near Sumatra, comes a curious head ornament. It is a bell-shaped cap of black wool, with a grotesque little figure of a man seated on top, with eyes of mother-of-pearl, the black inlaid with spots of the same substance.

Philippine Fibres.

The Philippines supply the most important of our fibers, Manila hemp, which in the present year will amount to about $6,000,000 in value.

The Grenade Throwers.

The Grenadiers, the senior of British regiments which compose the brigade of guards, got its name from the fact that toward the end of the last century the men were armed with hand grenades to throw among the enemy. They had to be in the front of the fighting line, hence they gained a reputation for bravery and the name of the Grenadiers. The badge of the regiment is still a hand grenade spouting flame, though that deadly engine of war has long since been superseded.—Scottish American.

—Mrs. Dr. Buchtel had a serious time yesterday. She had for several days been suffering from something in her throat, which finally proved to be an ulcer or something of the sort. It got so bad, they sent for her sister Mrs. McKahan in Ligonier, and she reached here Sunday evening. On Monday, her mother, Mrs. Dowell came from Ligonier. While Dr. Buchtel was at the afternoon train to meet Mrs Dowell it appears the ulcer broke. It came very near choking her, and only the coolness of her sister appears to have saved her. By prompt and energetic efforts she managed to get the throat sufficiently cleared so the patient could breathe again.

Lewis, the staff correspondent of the Indianapolis Press who visited Auburn some time ago was assaulted at New Albany, Sunday, by a fellow named Ochiltree, who is connected with a gang of lottery sharks operating in towns along the Ohio river. Mr. Lewis was preparing to "write up" the gang, hence the assault.

—The new presiding elder of the Ft. Wayne district of the Methodist conference is Rev. W. H. Daniels, who is well known to many readers of the Courier, he having been pastor of the church here in the early eighties. He is one of the most prominent and respected ministers in Northern Indiana and fully worthy of the honor bestowed upon him by the conference.

HISTORY OF A WEEK.

PEOPLE, PLACES AND THINGS OF THE WORLD.

News of Crimes and Criminals, Accidents, Fires, Etc., from North, South, East and West, Sandwiched with Minor Affairs.

Marsh Found Guilty.

Lansing (Mich.) special: Arthur F. Marsh, late Inspector General of the Michigan National Guard, has been convicted of having feloniously conspired with certain of his official associates to defraud the State. The statutory penalty is fourteen years' imprisonment or less. Marsh was indicted by the county grand jury on the showing made implicating him in the sensational deal where State military clothing and equipment, inventoried at some $65,000, was alleged to have been sold for $10,500, shipped to Chicago, thence without breaking bulk to a military supply concern in Kalamazoo, and thence repurchased by the State Military Board for about $40,000.

War Taxes Are to Remain.

After the regular weekly Cabinet meeting Wednesday, it was stated on authority that there would be no legislation at this session of Congress reducing the war revenue taxes. The President has conferred with the leaders in both houses of Congress and it has been decided that it would be unwise to reopen the financial and tariff question. The program is to pass the legislation already mapped out, and no more, and adjourn before the Republican National Convention.

Fatality at a Fire.

At Ravenna, Mich., fire destroyed $40,000 worth of business property, reducing to ashes eight store buildings, one residence and the village hotel. During the fire a soda fountain tube filled with carbonic acid gas exploded, the flying pieces striking the hotel proprietor, H. Marion Higgins, breaking his left leg in three places and his right arm and injuring him internally so severely that he died three hours later.

Fatal Wreck.

The south-bound passenger train on the Fort Worth and Denver City Railroad was wrecked near Channing, Texas. The coaches caught fire and the entire train except one coach burned. It is reported six or seven people were killed, among them the Wells-Fargo express messenger, Mr. Chapman. The fireman and express messenger, it is believed, were burned in the wreck.

Closed on Sundays.

At the session of the Newark Conference of the M. E. Church of New Jersey, Dr. I. W. Hathaway, President of the American Sabbath Union, announced that he had just come from Washington, where he had called upon President McKinley. The President, he said, had informed him that the United States buildings at the Paris Exposition would be closed on Sunday.

Changed His Mind.

A special to the New York World from Washington says: "Admiral Dewey authorizes the World to announce to the American people that after mature reflection and in response to the earnest entreaties from all parts of the country, his formed decision not under any circumstances to run for the Presidency is rescinded."

Big Fire at Menominee.

Fire destroyed the Spies building, the largest block in Menominee, Mich. The loss on building is $60,000; insurance, $12,000. No estimates are obtainable on the losses sustained by firms occupying the block, but it is believed the total losses will reach $200,000.

Pepper Has Declined.

Mr. Charles M. Pepper, who was recently proffered the position of Secretary to the Philippine Commission, has declined the place. At the time the proffer was made Mr. Pepper was absent in Porto Rico and no earlier opportunity was afforded for making known his declination of the honor.

Found Money in Garden.

At Quincy, Ill., Charles Schellbacher, while spading his garden, unearthed a copper kettle containing $2,000 in coin. It is supposed it was buried by his mother, who died recently. She left $3,000 cash in bank, but would not trust all her savings to the banks.

Miss Nethersole Acquitted.

The jury in the case of Olga Nethersole and others accused of maintaining a nuisance in performing the play, "Sapho," in New York, returned a verdict of not guilty.

War Cloud.

Russia and Japan continue ominous war preparations. The former is storing grain at Port Arthur and buying supplies at war panic prices throughout China.

Masonic Temple, Fort Wayne, Ind.

April 16, the week—Eldon's Comedians.

Takes Towns in Mindanao.

Manila special: Gen. Bates has occupied without opposition the towns of Surigao, Cayagan, Iligan and Nusamis, in northern Mindanao. The navy also took part in the operations. Gen. Bates captured 215 rifles and a number of cannon.

Robbers Kill Operator.

Robbers rifled the Santa Fe depot at Winfield, Kan., and shot and killed D. C. Coates, the night operator, in escaping. They secured only a few cents. The killing was evidently committed to prevent identification.

Dies Praying for Her Son.

Mrs. William Styles dropped dead at a religious meeting at South Webster, O. She made repeated efforts to induce her son, John Styles, to go forward and profess conversion and at last started forward to pray for him. At the front of the church she fell and expired.

Three Fires Start Simultaneously.

Fire starting almost simultaneously in three buildings owned by Cashman Brothers, contractors and stevedores at Newburyport, Mass., caused a loss of $50,000, distributed among a number of concerns. Cashman Brothers' loss is $25,000.

TRADE MAKES GOOD PROGRESS.

Stocks Reach Highest Point of the Year—Dun's Review.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: "Progress toward better things has been unmistakable. It was a year ago that the frenzied speculation in industrial stocks reached its culmination with prices averaging higher than at any time since, while railroad stocks after some decline rose $1.18 per share higher in September, and after the fall in both, which ended in December, have now risen $8.35 per share to the highest point of this year. The advance during the last week has been remarkably vigorous and with more public support than before. Cotton has declined ¾ cent this week. The demand for cotton goods is fair for immediate needs, but the tone is weaker for future deliveries. Wool has declined fully 1 cent on the average of revised quotations. The dry goods market is quiet and orders are limited. Iron is growing weaker except in Bessemer pig. In finished products no further change appears except in refined bars and in plates. The advance of 1 cent in hemlock sole leather has led to some heavy transactions. Hides at Chicago continue to decline, though slowly. Transactions through clearing houses show a much smaller volume of business than a year ago. Failures for the week have been 203 in the United States, against 194 last year, and 33 in Canada, against 26 last year."

GO TO LAW OVER DEWEY'S NOSE.

Certain Medallions Alleged to Disfigure the Admiral's Countenance.

A suit at law has been instituted which depends for settlement upon the question, "Has Admiral Dewey a wart on his nose?" The plaintiffs are Whitehead & Hoag, New Jersey, who make medallions, and the defendants are Griesheimer & Co. of Chicago, who ordered 5,000 numismatic presentments of the "man of Manila." When the medallions were examined it was found that upon the nose of the metal miniatures there was a wart, which appeared not in any previous limning of the admiral. Mr. Griesheimer immediately telegraphed to President McKinley, Mrs. Dewey, Admiral Montejo and Secretary Long of the Navy Department, asking earnestly and in set terms whether there was a wart, carbuncle, mole or other excresence upon the admirable nose of the admiral. All agreed by wire, at Griesheimer's expense, that the hero's nose was as smooth as "they make 'em." Then the Chicago man refused to pay the bill, and the suit followed.

WOMAN BURGLAR IS CAUGHT.

Mamie Perkins, a Partner of David Johnson, Aged Cracksman.

Mamie Perkins, a female burglar, is a prisoner at the St. Louis police station. When David Johnson, the septuagenarian cracksman, was captured evidence went to show that he was accompanied by a confederate in his operations. Examination of the soft earth under the windows of three of the houses which he looted showed the footsteps of a woman. Suspicion pointed to Mamie Perkins, a negress with whom Perkins had been noticed on frequent occasions, and measurements of the footprints tended to show that the suspicions were correct. Part of the stolen property was also found in her possession.

MAGNETIC POLE LOCATED.

The Borchgrevink South Polar Expedition Reaches New Zealand.

Carsten E. Borchgrevink, the leader of the south polar expedition, fitted out in 1898 by Sir George Newnes of London, who, with the surviving members of his party, arrived on the steamer Southern Cross at Campbelltown, near Bluff Harbor, New Zealand, telegraphs to Sir George Newnes that the object of the expedition has been fully attained and the position of the south magnetic pole has been located.

Car Hangs Over a Precipice.

A crowded street car of the Wilkes-Barre and Wyoming Valley Traction Company jumped the track on North Main street, Pittston, Pa., and plunged through the railing guarding a high embankment. The car did not pause until the fore truck and entire front were hanging far out over the embankment. If the car had moved a foot farther a fatal plunge and a frightful loss of life would have been inevitable.

Fatal Dynamite Explosion.

A disastrous explosion occurred at Five-Mile Point, B. C., where the dynamite factory of the Ontario powder works is situated. William Way and Harry Gervan were in the packing house engaged in packing dynamite cartridges when a terrific explosion occurred, killing the two men and completely obliterating all traces of the packing house.

Locked in a Burning House.

The dwelling of S. Tobias in South Muscatine, Iowa, was destroyed by fire. Mrs. Tobias was absent, having locked her three children, aged 5, 4 and 1 year, in the house. After several attempts the firemen rescued the children, but all were insensible from inhaling smoke. The younger child will die.

Loses Church Funds at Craps.

Rev. John Williams, who has been collecting money to build a colored men's church in Omaha, wandered into the Holy Grail Club room the other night and got into a crap game, in which he lost $77 of the church money. It was then learned that Williams' real name was Johnson and that he was a hold-up man.

Viola Horlocker Not Guilty.

At Hastings, Neb., Viola Horlocker, who for nearly two weeks had been on trial in the District Court, charged with administering poisonous candy to the wife of her employer, is again a free woman. The jury that declared her not guilty was out less than an hour.

Murdered His Brother-in-Law.

Harboring imaginary wrongs, John W. McKimm, aged 29 years, shot and killed Dr. B. F. Shaw, his brother-in-law, as the latter sat reading the Sunday school lesson to his 5-year-old daughter at Kansas City. Shaw died instantly. McKimm is believed to be insane.

Paul Leicester Ford to Marry.

Announcement was made of the engage of Paul Leicester Ford, the novelist, and Miss Grace Kidder, a Brooklyn, N. Y., society belle. Mr. Ford is the author of "The Hon. Peter Sterling," "Janice Meredith" and "The Story of an Untold Love."

Great Coal Strike in the East.

Thirty thousand miners in the Pittsburg district struck against the new scale. The strike grows out of general dissatisfaction over the scale of wages recently adjusted between the two coal trusts and the wage committee of miners.

Stiff Fight with Outlaws.

In a fight between a sheriff's posse and a gang of outlaws near Navajo Springs, N. M., two of the posse were killed. Five outlaws were captured, two badly wounded. The others escaped.

Sells' Circus Stock Said to Be Sold.

J. A. Bailey of Barnum & Bailey fame is reported to have purchased all of Peter Sells' stock in the Sells-Forepaugh circus.

Big Deal in Coal for Export.

One of the largest coal deals ever effected in that district was closed at Charleston, W. Va., by C. J. Wittenberg, president of the High Carbon Coal and Coke Company of New York. The owners of twenty collieries signed contracts for the sale of all coal shipped east by them during the ensuing year. These mines have a daily output of 8,000 tons. A large part of this coal will reach foreign markets to which American coal has never before found admittance.

EXPLORED THE SOUTH SEAS.

Professor Agassiz Talks of the Trip of the Albatross.

Prof. A. Agassiz, who left San Francisco several months ago in charge of a party of scientists on board the steamer Albatross, has returned on the China, and proceeded at once to Washington to report regarding the results of his voyage to the South seas. The scientific expedition went first to the Paumotus, exploring the northern part of these islands, a region never before examined by scientists. After refitting the vessel at Tahiti, the remaining of the Society Islands as well as the Cook, Savage and islands of the Tonga group were explored. After refitting at Suva, the Ellice, Gilbert and Marshall islands were explored and the Island of Guam was visited. Along her course the Albatross made soundings, those between San Francisco and the Marquesas being the first ever made along that route. About one hundred miles southeast of Guam a depth of 4,318 fathoms, or nearly five and one-half miles, was found. There are only three deeper soundings, one of them being near Guam. The Albatross is still at Yokohama.

SASH AND DOOR MILL BURNS.

Fire in a Chicago Factory Causes a Loss of $30,000.

In less than half an hour from the time fire was discovered in the sash, door and blind factory of the E. J. Davis Manufacturing Company, the three-story brick and frame building, with its contents, was destroyed. According to the statements of Watchmen Edward Kinkowski and Edward Hanks, the flames were preceded by an explosion. The watchmen say that a few weeks ago a fire was discovered in the factory which they believed to have been of incendiary origin, and both are inclined to the opinion that the explosion which caused the fire this morning was of similar origin. The losses are as follows: On building, $10,000; E. J. Davis Manufacturing Company, stock and machinery, $25,000; Grismore & Pratt, $10,000; Fred Hewen, $5,000.

Customs Receipts of Cuba.

The War Department makes public a comparative statement of customs receipts in Cuba for the months of January and February, 1900. The statement shows that receipts of the island for January and February, 1899, were $2,014,933, those of January and February, 1900, were $2,772,619, an increase for the two months of 1900 over the same period of 1899 of $757,685.

Thieves Turned the Tables.

While shadowing a suspected robber Patrolman Fitzgerald of Cleveland was taken captive by seven men. Fitzgerald had followed the suspect into a house. He was immediately seized, overpowered and bound and gagged by the thugs. After half an hour Fitzgerald succeeded in severing his bonds with his teeth and went to the central police station.

Young Bank Thief Is Caught.

Thomas J. Stewart, 18 years of age, formerly messenger of the First National Bank of Easton, Pa., was arrested at Denver, charged with robbing the bank of $1,745 on March 17. When arrested Stewart confessed and gave to the officers $1,158 of the money taken.

Two Filipinos Hanged.

Morales and Gonzalez, who were found guilty of murdering a countryman, were hanged in the plaza in front of the church at San Carlos, province of Pangasin, P. I., an officer of the Seventeenth infantry presiding at the execution.

San Francisco Mills Burn.

In San Francisco fire destroyed the Yosemite flour mills, the factory of the Californian Italian Paste Company and several small houses. The buildings were all owned by C. R. Splivalo, and the total loss is estimated at $200,000.

Great Growth of Northwest.

An increase in population of 900,000 in ten years in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Montana is shown by R. L. Polk & Co.'s Northwestern Gazetteer, just issued. The present population is placed at 2,725,000.

Penitentiary Shops Burn.

The bolt manufacturing shops connected with the State penitentiary at Columbus, Ohio, burned. Loss to the State and contractors about $140,000.

Four Hundred Men on Strike.

A strike was started at the works of the New York Air Brake Company at Watertown, N. Y. Four hundred men are out.

Building Trades Tied Up.

At Indianapolis the bricklayers and hodcarriers have joined the strike of the carpenters and plumbers, and the building trades are completely tied up.

Famous War Correspondent Expires.

Archibald Forbes, the well-known war correspondent, died in London. He had been in bad health for some years.

BIG HALL IN RUINS.

THE KANSAS CITY CONVENTION BUILDING IS BURNED.

Great Auditorium in Which the National Democratic Convention Was to Have Been Held Is a Total Loss—Will Be Rebuilt Without Delay.

The Kansas City convention hall, the largest auditorium in the United States, with perhaps one exception, and in which the Democratic national convention was to have been held, caught fire shortly after 1 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. The fire started in the rear, and the beautiful building was soon a mass of flames. The firemen could do but little but to attempt to save surrounding property. Half an hour after the fire was discovered the roof fell in with a crash. The Second Presbyterian Church nearby caught fire, and is almost a total loss. The fire next spread to a row of three-story flats, and the Aldine flats, an apartment, was threatened. The Lathrop school caught fire, but the pupils were marched out in safety.

The convention hall cost about a quarter of a million, and is insured. Before the roof of the building fell $10,000 had been subscribed by spectators to rebuild the hall, and it is claimed the entire amount will be raised in a short time by public subscription. The directors of the burned building say it will be rebuilt, and be ready for the opening of the Democratic convention on July 4.

OVATION FOR THE QUEEN.

Victoria Sets Foot on Irish Soil After Nearly Forty Years.

Queen Victoria set foot on Irish soil Wednesday for the first time in almost forty years. Dublin was resplendent. The decorations in the city and along the route which the Queen took from Kingstown were lavish and more magnificent than those of London at the time of the diamond jubilee. The streets were spanned in a hundred places by elaborate arches bearing mottoes of welcome and expressions of loyalty. The entrance to the city at Leeson street bridge was marked by a huge triumphal arch of flags, flowers and evergreen on which was emblazoned a welcome to Dublin in gold letters. The streets were jammed with people at an early hour. Irishmen had gathered from the ends of the island, and hundreds of Englishmen were in the throng. The entire route from Kingstown to Dublin was lined with spectators. The Queen was received by the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, Earl Cadogan, the Duke of Connaught, commander of the forces in Ireland, Lord Mayor Talton of Dublin and a number of other notables, all in full dress and robes of state.

KANSAS CITY'S CONVENTION HALL.

The Queen drove the ten miles to Dublin in a carriage drawn by four horses with outriders and escorted by the Life Guards. The royal procession passed through a lane of thousands of people, who cheered her Majesty continuously.

The Queen arrived at Leeson street bridge early in the afternoon. Here a platform had been erected for the ceremony of presenting Victoria with the keys of the city. The keys were presented to her Majesty on the same cushion that was used on the occasion of her previous visit.

FIRES AT WALES.

Attempt Is Made to Assassinate the Heir to the English Throne.

An attempt to assassinate the Prince of Wales was made at Brussels Wednesday. Two shots were fired at him, but both went wide of the mark. The would-be assassin was arrested. The attempted assassination occurred in the station du Nord. The Prince, accompanied by his wife, was descending from the train when a young fellow rushed forward and fired two shots from a revolver at the Prince. Instantly there was great confusion in the station, and bystanders seized the man before he could fire again. Anxious officials surrounded the Prince when it was learned that the shots had gone wide and that he was unhurt. The Prince and Princess of Wales were in Brussels en route to Denmark.

THE PRINCE OF WALES.

Telegraphic Brevities.

Captain Chadwick, who commanded the New York during the war with Spain, has filed a claim of prize money for capturing five vessels.

Attorney C. E. George, Chicago, guilty of fraud. He securned $5,000 from persons by the name of McCormick, asserting that they were heirs to a big fortune.

The British steamer Pawnee arrived at New York from Mediterranean ports via Bermuda, and was detained at quarantine, owing to the presence on board of three cases of smallpox.

One thousand Kansas farmers will go to Kansas City in prairie schoomers to attend the national Democratic convention.

The Government is withholding $175,000 from Western railways. They want full tariff rates for hauling troops; the Government insists that they shall grant the party rates of 2c a mile.

In the Boston Common Council one of the aldermen offered a resolution that the Council send a delegation of seven aldermen to represent the city at the Paris exposition, and that the United States Government be requested to detail a suitable warship to carry the distinguished party across the Atlantic.

CLEVER COUP OF BOERS.

Rout of Broadwood's Force Proves Skill in Preparing Ambuscade.

The London correspondents with Gen. Roberts add little of importance to the commander-in-chief's account of the disaster to Col. Broadwood's column. All the accounts of the fight from a British source concur in stating that Col. Broadwood's force of about 1,000 men was outnumbered by the Boers eight or ten to one, and the arrival of the infantry division and Gen. French's cavalry alone prevented the annihilation of Col. Broadwood's command.

As regards the details of the affair, the stories differ considerably. The affair seems rather to testify to the skill of the Boers in preparing ambuscades than to neglect of the British to reconnoiter the route of the convoy. It seems that the scouts of the convoy must have passed close to the ambushers, who apparently were as invisible as partridges in cover.

The correspondent of the London Morning Post, in describing the working of the trap, says the convoy had scarcely proceeded 300 yards, and the men were still eating breakfast, when the enemy opened fire from a donga in front and eighty yards from the head of the convoy. The fire was deadly, and the men of the leading troops, Roberts' horse, were swept from their saddles. A scene of confusion followed. The teams of four guns, their drivers having been shot, stampeded and carried the guns out of action. These and one other gun were saved. The teams of the other guns were shot, and the guns, with the convoy, fell into the hands of the enemy. Meanwhile Gen. Alderson's brigade held back a force of the enemy, estimated to number 7,000, with great gallantry, losing heavily, and falling back by degrees. The enemy in a donga in their rear pursued the flying guns until the approach of the Ninth division from Bloemfontein checked the pursuit.

CONDITION OF CROPS.

Unfavorable Reports of Winter Wheat in the Middle West.

The chief of the climate and crop division of the weather bureau reports the crop condition on the 1st of April. East of the Mississippi River, except in the Southern States, the season has been generally backward and unfavorable for farm work, with excessive rains in portions of the Gulf States, and heavy snows in portions of the lake region and New England. On the Pacific slope and in the Rocky Mountain districts exceptionally favorable conditions have prevailed, and farming operations are progressing rapidly.

Unfavorable reports regarding winter wheat continue from Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and portions of Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky and Maryland; elsewhere the crop looks favorable and enters spring in excellent condition. Outside of a limited area in Southern California, winter wheat on the Pacific coast is well advanced and promising. Some spring wheat has been sown over the southern portion of the spring-wheat region, and also in Montana, where the season is unusually advanced.

Corn is being planted in the Southern States, some as far north as North Carolina. In Southern Texas the bulk of the crop has been planted. Oats are being sown in Kansas, Missouri, Ohio and Kentucky, and are coming up to good stands in Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas, Tennessee and Mississippi. Reports of winter killing of the fall crop are received from Virginia and Georgia. Cotton planting has begun over the southern portion of the cotton region. The prospects for fruit are favorable, although peaches sustained some damage in Missouri, Arkansas, Illinois and Ohio.

The soil is in good condition and considerable plowing has been done in all except the more northerly sections, where frost still remains in the ground, and in portions of New Jersey, Maryland, West Virginia, Tennessee and North Carolina, where this work has been delayed by wet weather.

CHURCH AND CLERGY.

One hundred and twelve pupils of the Indian school at Carlisle, Pa., have been received into the Catholic Church. The school has 162 pupils.

The British Foreign Bible Society intends to provide all Boer prisoners with Bibles printed in Dutch, and the plan will be carried out within a few weeks.

Cardinal Vaughan received from the Pope a dispensation remitting the Lenten fast on thirty-eight out of forty days of Lent. This act of his Holiness was owing to the prevalent influenza in England.

The queerest church in the world is in Bergen, in Norway. It is completely made of paper, and rendered waterproof by an application of quicklime with curdled milk and white of eggs. Over 1,000 people may be seated in its interior.

The Churchman's Liberal league in Great Britain has issued a monthly journal in the interests of disestablishment of the Church of England.

The First Batist Church in Dover, Pa., has converted a building heretofore used for church social affairs into a shirt factory, where church members are given preference in employment. Five per cent out of the wages is to revert to church work in the town.

A special prayer for the success of the British arms has been prepared by the Jewish rabbis in Jerusalem for use in the synagogue.

Pennsylvania Methodists are urging the claims of the Rev. Dr. Thomas B. Neely, pastor of Union Church, Philadelphia, for a bishopric, and those claims will be pressed at the general conference in May.

By order of Bishop Hohan the priests of the Catholic churches in the Scranton, Pa., diocese announce that funeral services will no longer be conducted in the churches of the diocese on Sunday, which practically puts a ban on Sunday burials by Catholics there.

The Senate on Thursday agreed to the conference report on the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill. Heard an extended speech by Mr. Beveridge in support of free trade with Porto Rico. By a vote of 18 yeas to 32 nays refused to strike out the committee amendment to the Porto Rico bill imposing a duty of 5 cents a pound upon coffee imported into the island. By a vote of 16 yeas to 33 nays refused to strike out the provision for a duty of 15 per cent of the Dingley law rates on products of Porto Rico imported into the United States. The House passed the army appropriation bill in a form only slightly modified from that in which it came from the committee. One of the amendments adopted opens the soldiers' homes to the officers and men of the volunteer and regular armies incapacitated by service during or since the Spanish war. An incident of the day was a defense of the War Department against the charge of reckless extravagance in the fitting up of the transport Sumner, made by Mr. Driggs of New York the previous day. Mr. Parker (N. J.) produced the itemized expenses furnished by the War Department to show there had been no extravagance. Vincent Boering's right to his seat from the eleventh Kentucky district was confirmed without opposition. His seat was contested by Mr. White, another Republican.

On Saturday the Senate completed consideration of the Porto Rican bill with the exception of two amendments. Senator Fairbanks made a lengthy speech defending the 15 per cent tariff. Bills were passed granting lands to the State of Alabama for the education of colored students, and to establish a light and fog signal at Brown's Point, Puget Sound. The House passed the fortifications appropriation bill as it came from the committee. It carries $7,093,488. A three hours' political debate was precipitated by a general political speech made by Mr. Shattuc of Ohio, many members on both sides being drawn into it.

In the Senate on Monday seven hours were devoted to debate on Porto Rican tariff bill. The House adopted a resolution by Mr. Payne, Republican floor leader, calling upon the Secretary of the Treasury for information as to the probable surplus existing revenue laws would create during this and the coming fiscal year. Under suspension of the rules bills were passed to open to settlement 418,000 acres in the Fort Hall Indian reservation and 2,500,000 acres in Oklahoma by ratifying the agreements with the Bannock and Shoshone Indians and the Kiowas, Comanches and Apaches to divide the northern judicial district of New York into two districts and to appropriate $100,000 for a military post at Sheridan, Wyo.

The Senate passed the Porto Rican tariff bill on Tuesday by a vote of 40 to 31. The House entered upon consideration of the substitute for the Senate Hawaiian territorial bill under a special order. The debate was in committee of the whole, and only three of the six speeches were pertinent to the bill. Mr. Knox (Mass.), chairman of the committee on territories, delivered a carefully prepared speech in advocacy of its passage. Mr. Robinson (Ind.) criticised a section in the bill, which, he said, continued in force labor contracts existing in Hawaii, denouncing it as legalizing a system of wage slavery. Mr. Mondell (Wyo.) spoke generally in support of the bill. Mr. Lane (Iowa), one of the Republicans who opposed the Porto Rico tariff bill, made a vigorous speech, reaffirming his position, and warning his Republican associates that the country would not support an unfair policy toward the Porto Ricans. Mr. Thomas (N. C.), Mr. Williams (Miss.) and Mr. Boutell (Ill.) discussed imperialism.

Peace was restored before the Senate convened on Wednesday and during the proceedings of the session there was only a reminder of the harsh language used just before adjournment Tuesday. The session opened with a lively and interesting discussion of the status of the Quay case, in the course of which Mr. Wolcott apologized for the language he had used Tuesday, disclaiming any intention of being offensive to anybody, least of all to his friend Mr. Lodge. The Colorado Senator made a vehement and eloquent appeal for early action upon the Quay case. He was supported by other friends of Mr. Quay, and it was decided finally to take up the case Thursday, under the unanimous consent agreement made on March 16. In accordance also with that agreement the Spooner bill was made the unfinished business, thereby bringing the Philippine question to a direct issue in the Senate. In the House there was an exciting scene as the climax of a discussion of the Kentucky situation when Mr. Wheeler, a Kentucky Democrat, and Mr. Pugh, a Kentucky Republican, faced each other from opposite sides of the main aisle and indulged in a wordy duel. Mr. Pugh charged Mr. Wheeler with misrepresenting certain facts. He was laboring under great excitement. Mr. Wheeler showed admirable temper, and, though quick to resent the fancied insult, awaited the explanation of Mr. Pugh, in which he disclaimed any intention of imputing to him personally a desire to distort the facts. Throughout the debate, which was precipitated by Mr. Boering, the other Republican member from Kentucky, there was an air of suppressed excitement. It was the first time the subject had been broached in the House, and intense interest was manifested. Mr. Lacey of Iowa concluded the debate with a general denunciation of the Goebel election law. This incident overshadowed the other speeches on the Hawaiian bill, many of which were irrelevant.

INDIANA INCIDENTS.

RECORD OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK.

Almost Suffocated in a Beer Vault—Marion Girl Found in an Ohio Convent—Diamonds Discovered in a Paper Mill—Children Burn to Death.

Sonney McWilliams, the oldest hotel porter in Muncie, who has amassed a snug sum from many years' service at the Kirby hotel, had a close call for his life the other night. He entered the beer cooler under the barroom in the hotel. The door was mysteriously slammed shut. It locked from the outside, and there seemed no possible means of escape from suffocation. McWilliams knelt and began a prayer when the thought struck him that if the beer was shut off an investigation might bring relief. With a mallet he pounded flat the lead pipes connecting the beer counter with the kegs, and shortly the door was opened. McWilliams was nearly dead when found.

Disappeared Into a Convent.

Miss Kittie O'Brien, a girl 17 years of age, disappeared from Marion Feb. 13, and no trace of her could be found by the officers. The friends of the girl have been searching for her and sent a detective to Columbus, Ohio, where he found her in a convent. Mrs. Lizzie O'Brien, the girl's stepmother, was arrested on the charge of kidnaping and her son was also arrested at Crawfordsville on the same charge. It is the supposition that a love affair is the cause of the kidnaping.

Found Many Stones in Tin Box.

Dock Boine, a machine tender at the Hartford City paper mill, found in a bale of old papers which had been shipped from England a small tin box which contained thirty-one large brilliant stones, believed to be genuine diamonds. The box was wrapped in parchment, on the inside of which appeared the address: "London office Paper Trade Journal, 440 Cannon street, London, England." The stones are of various sizes and are believed to be worth a fabulous sum.

Two Children Burn to Death.

Two children of William York, a farmer, living six miles west of Mitchell, were burned to death while playing in a field of broom sedge. A farm hand was told to burn the sedge and after setting fire to one side discovered the children and warned them to run. In their flight one dropped her doll and both went back to get it. The fire overtook them and they were terribly burned, both dying a few hours later.

New Church at Vincennes, Ind.

The magnificent new stone church in Vincennes, just completed by the Methodists, was dedicated with imposing services by Bishop McCabe, assisted by Bishop Moore, editor of the Advocate. The church complete cost $425,000, every cent of which is paid. Thirty-one new members were received on the same day.

TEN ACRES AND MARY.

I'm up an' away
At break o' day,
An' never of work I'm weary;
For I sing this song
As I toil along—
"I've got ten acres and Mary!"

Troubles enough—
For the worl' is rough,
An' things will go contrary;
But ever this song,
As I trudge along—
"I've got ten acres and Mary!"

No angel bright,
With wings of light;
Of a angel I'd grow weary;
But a woman true,
That's a jay to you—
"I've got ten acres and Mary!"

THE FACE HE SAW

TWO blind people who love each other.

He, an ungainly, stunted figure, with a very homely face; she, tall, thin, of yellowish complexion and of sickly appearance.

Benevolent people had placed them in a blind asylum years before. There they were brought up.

As children they had played together, and were contented and happy. The pleasures of the world were as strong to them as its daily miseries. They knew that quiet, comfortable house, its large garden—and nothing more. There they belonged. They could know nothing of what was going on outside. One thing only was clear to them and that was—that they loved each other.

A hot summer day. * * *

The two sat on a bench in the garden chatting.

"Paul, I am so glad."

"On what account, Anna?"

"Ah! Don't you know? To-morrow——"

"Yes. To-morrow the famous oculist will be here."

"And he will make us both see."

"If he is really able to accomplish that."

"You are joking. Of course, he will be able to do it. That is his business."

"Then, at last, I shall be able to see your lovely face. Of that I am glad."

"And of nothing else?"

"Nothing."

"Paul," said she, laughing quietly, "how do you know that I have a lovely face?"

"Because I have seen you twice already—in a dream. You had golden hair and wings as white as snow."

"Oh! if that were only true!"

"It is quite certain."

"Was I so beautiful?" she asked, seizing him by the hand: "so beautiful? But when I reflect, Paul, I think it would be even better for us to be true to each other than to be able to see. That would be lovely. Don't you think so?"

"I know not," he answered thoughtfully; and then both were silent. * * *

The eventful day had passed. The operation on the eyes had been performed. If not all a delusion, it must prove a success.

"Neither of you must take the bandage off the eyes for fourteen days!" Such was the doctor's order before he left.

On the next evening, after the sun had gone down, the two were again seated in the garden, clinging close to each other.

"Paul, when will we first see each other?"

"In fourteen days!"

"I know, but that is much too long. Eight days would certainly be long enough."

"Less time than that, perhaps; but we have the doctor's order."

"I cannot endure to wait so long. What if the operation has been a failure, and we have rejoiced in vain! What then?"

He was silent.

"For all that, we could——"

"Anna!"

"Only for a moment, dear Paul. It will surely not be wrong."

"You will, notwithstanding——"

"Only for a moment. We will put the bandages on again immediately. You need not be at all afraid. Please, please!"

"Rather let us wait. We have suffered many years. Let us endure it a few days longer."

"No, I cannot wait. If you love me, do it, or I will myself alone."

He hesitated a while, but at length answered calmly: "We will do it."

"When?"

"To-morrow morning early—here at this bench."

"Thanks. You will come at the appointed time?"

"Yes."

"Good-night."

"Good-night. I hope you will have a good sleep." * * *

Morning twilight.

Paul has ben long out of bed. He is in dread of the next hour. Anna, of course, is beautiful, but he? Who knows how ugly he may be? Perhaps he is handsome also, but he can never appear before her in this dreadful uncertainty.

"Off with the bandage!"

He tore it loose and threw it on the table. His eyes were still closed. He ran to the cupboard and searched there until he found a small mirror. He then went to the window, where he seated himself and waited. His heart beat violently; his head was in a glowing heat.

In feverish anxiety he sat there, his sightless eyes fixed on the little glass, which his fingers held in a firm clasp. It must now decide his fate. In a few minutes he would have certain knowledge.

Clear daylight came.

He felt the light, opened his eyes slowly and stared at the mirror, trembling all the while with torturing expectation. No, no, no! But see! What is that? Could that be himself? An old, pock-marked, ugly face! He? Those pale, sunken cheeks, that red, tousled hair, those decayed teeth, that long neck? It could not be possible. No; it must not be!

He closed his eyes, leaned far out of the window, opened them wide and looked again. His image was still there, unchanged. Still he would not believe it. In horror he kept on staring at the glass until it became clouded. Then a veil seemed drawn slowly over his eyes. It grew more and more indistinct; darkness gathered all about him, and suddenly everything was black. He saw no more.

Despair seized him. He thought he had become insane. He threw the mirror away, stamped with his feet and struck himself in the face. Anna would see him, and she would be horrified. She would forsake him—ugly and blind—and she would go away into the sunny world and forget him. He must remain behind, helpless and alone. All the happiness was gone forever.

He sank into a chair and sobbed like a little child.

Suddenly he started up. A well-known hand caressed his head.

"Is it you, Paul?" he heard her ask in a whisper.

"Yes," said he, breathing heavily.

"Paul, I looked for you everywhere in the garden and could not find you. Then I took off the bandage."

"And do you see me?" cried Paul in deadly alarm.

"I must say that I do not. No, no! It is just as dark as it was before. The operation was a failure. I see nothing whatever."

"And I nothing," said Paul exultingly. "I also took off the bandage, at once everything became quite dark."

"Now," said Anna with a sigh, "we must remain forever blind."

"It is better so," answered Paul with a happy heart; and he tenderly embraced his poor blind friend.

DIVORCES IN VARIOUS STATES.

Oklahoma the Only One that Believes in Making Separation Easy.

With the enactment of the law requiring one year's residence in North Dakota before a divorce can be granted, another State joined the decent majority of those which are not inclined to make things easy for people who wish to be separated from wife or husband.

Oklahoma is now the only State or territory in which only ninety days' residence is required.

The term of residence now required in other States is as follows:

SIX MONTHS.

Arizona, Idaho, Nebraska, Nevada, South Dakota, Texas and Wyoming.

ONE YEAR.

Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, New Hampshire, New Mexico, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Utah, Virginia, West Virginia, Washington and Wisconsin.

TWO YEARS.

Florida, Indiana, Maryland, North Carolina, Tennessee, Vermont.

THREE YEARS.

Connecticut, New Jersey.

FIVE YEARS.

Massachusetts (unless parties are residents at the time of marriage).

During the reign of the ninety-day residence law divorces were sometimes granted on curious grounds. For instance, a woman was granted a divorce because her husband did not bathe frequently enough, thereby causing her great mental anguish. Another man slept with a razor under his pillow, solely to frighten his wife, who was accordingly given a divorce. A third defendant made his wife climb a stepladder to drive nails in the woodshed; one woman complained that her husband treated her as a child; another got a divorce because her husband enlisted in the navy; a decree was issued to a woman whose husband cut off her bangs.

Kissing Our Boys Good-Night.

Oh, what a change comes over things,
What quiet fills the place;
The winter evening slowly drags,
The purple flames that race
Far up the chimney seem to shed
Less cheerful warmth and light,
When, putting on their little gowns,
We kiss our boys good-night.

We follow them as off they go,
With ringing laugh and shout,
To fondly tuck them in the bed
And turn the gaslight out;
And, clasped in one another's arms,
So warm and snug and tight,
They fill our hearts with worship
When we kiss our boys good-night.

And as they drift to Slumberland
We linger round their cot,
For lo! a strange enchantment
Binds us voiceless to the spot,
And life somehow grows sweeter,
And the vexing cares take flight,
When, bending o'er their sleeping forms,
We kiss our boys good-night.

Then, looking to the future,
Into whose mysterious years
They must go to meet life's issues,
Now with gladness, now with tears;
We pray that He may lead them
Ever in the path of right,
When no more beneath our rooftree
We may kiss our boys good-night.

A Scotchman's Self-Control.

Charles Mathews used to tell a good story in support of the truth of the remark about a Scotchman, a joke, and a surgical operation. When "starring" in Edinburgh, his landlord, who seldom attended any other public meeting save the "kirk," asked Mathews if he would oblige him with "a pass for the playhoose."

On this favor being readily granted, the "guid mon," as Ian Maclaren would say, donned his cheerful black suit, and witnessed Mathews' two great performances, Sir Charles Coldstream in "Used Up," and Plummer in "Cool as a Cucumber," both downright "side-splitters."

Meeting his landlord on the stairs as he proceeded to his own room after the performance, Mathews was cordially greeted by that gentleman, of whom he then inquired how he had enjoyed the entertainment.

"Aweel," said the Northerner, "it pleased me vara much, ye ken, and I conseeder you played unco' naturally; but, heigh, mon, I'd a hard matter to keep frae laughing."

A Novelist's Family.

BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF THE PARIS EXPOSITION GROUNDS AND BUILDINGS.

LAST OF THE "LONG HORNS."

Texas Stockman's Unique Contribution to the Paris Exposition.

Unique among the exhibits at the Paris Exposition will be the contribution of a Texas stockman, J. M. Doble, of Ramires, Live Oak County. His curiosity is the celebrated Dobie steer, than which there will be no exhibit more remarkable and yet so characteristic of the Lone Star State.

The Doble steer is known throughout South and West Texas. He is the rough and graphic standard of measurement of the West Texas stockman. "Big as the Dobie steer" is the hyperbole they use when describing a pair of horns. It is a hyperbole, for travel the wide plains over and another steer with a pair of horns such as has the Dobie steer cannot be found. He is the last of the old tribe of monster horned cattle of the plains that gave to Texas its additional nickname of "The Long Horn State." The steer measures 15 hands and weighs between 1,600 and 1,700 pounds. His enormous horns from point to point measure nine feet seven inches. The horns could easily be made to measure over 10 feet if taken off the steer, steamed, and straightened. When the steer is standing in a natural position on level ground the tip ends of his horns are fully six feet above the ground.

Time was, fifteen or less years ago, when the long horns were no curiosity in Texas, but to-day there are few reminders of the grand old herds that have been so closely interwoven with the history of the State. The steer in Paris will excite the wonder and command the admiration of all visitors to the world's great show.

FAMOUS DOBIE STEER OF TEXAS.

HOW TO ACQUIRE

A Contempt for Danger and Coolness in Time of Peril.

An elderly man and one much younger than he were walking along Fifth avenue a few days ago, moving in the direction of the depot. As they proceeded they conversed on the one topic which is now uppermost. The younger man had spoken of the dangers of war and said he thought that few of the enthusiastic recruits who were now spoiling for a fight understood what it was to be actually face to face with death.

"Well," said the old gentleman with a deal of feeling manifested in his face, "I don't know about that. I am getting along toward the close of life, of course, and perhaps I may view it differently, being naturally expectant of dying before long. But as a fact, when I sit down to think it over, death does not seem such an awful thing after all. It is a mere episode. We have to face it some time—why not once as well as another occasions? If people could only bring themselves to look upon these things in a proper light they would find that danger loses its power for ill and that peril need not make one afraid. What are these big guns which shoot destruction in time of war, slaying their thousands and their tens of thousands? Mere cylinders of steel and not to be dreaded. The thing is to teach one's self not to be afraid. You can acquire a contempt for danger just as you can acquire a language or a knowledge of astronomy. It is all training. I myself——"

At this very instant his glance fell upon the white surface of the pavement where he was about to set his foot. He seemed to stop in the middle of the motion, and leaped sidewise, crying in an agonized voice:

"Look out! He'll strike you, and if he does you're gone! Heavens above! How did the reptile get upon a city pavement? Get out of my way!" He pushed over two women and three men in getting away from the fatal spot, and climbed upon a flight of steps to watch while directing that somebody kill it.

"Kill what?" inquired a gruff man, who had been partially telescoped.

"Blacksnake! Venomous kind! Must have got here in a bunch of bananas or something from South Water street, and——"

"Blacksnake nothing, you old catapult. You want to get a new pair of glasses. That's nothing but a little crooked line of melted tar that leaked out of the street-repairers' kettle. Tame yourself and try not to get scared so easily as to break up the peace of the whole public with your elbows."

The old gentleman went away very quietly and did not look for his younger friend to resume his lecture upon self-taught courage.—Chicago Record.

Orang-Outang vs. Burglar.

Some two years ago a retired officer of the merchant service, living in the Rue d'Alesia, Paris, M. Duchesne, brought home an orang-outang from Borneo. Since growing to its full size the brute is a terror to the neighbors. Its master won't hear of its being chained up, contenting himself with shutting the animal in his bed room before going out. This was done yesterday, but unfortunately for him, Nicolas Bargeve, alias "The Devourer," had determined to make a professional call at M. Duchesne's apartment with intent to burgle. Now as this illustrious character had only been three days at large after completing his ninth term of imprisonment, he was naturally unaware that such a pet as the orang-outang was tolerated in these particular rooms. Consequently, when the burglar was suddenly pounced upon by two hairy paws, he was somewhat surprised, and his screams soon brought help, with the result that M. Bargeve was drawn out of the room by his feet, in a very ignominious fashion. He was taken to the infirmary, and it is reported that he has gone mad and now imagines himself to have been changed into an ape.—London Post.

Little Willie and Sister Grace.

They cut pa's trousers down for me; I don't get nothin' new;
I have to wear his old coats out, his old suspenders, too!
His hats and shoes don't fit me, but I s'pose they will some day,
And then they'll come to me instead of bein' thrown away!

My sister Grace is twenty-two
And she can sing and play,
And what she wears is always new—
Not stuff that's thrown away!
She puts on style, I tell you what!
She dresses out of sight;
She's proud and haughty and she's got
A beau most every night.

I never get new things to wear; I'm just a boy, you see,
And any old thing's good enough to doctor up for me!
Most everything that I've got on one day belonged to pa—
When sister's through with her fine things she hands 'em up to ma!

Artificial Willow.

One of the curiosities at Chatsworth, the Duke of Devonshire's place, is a weeping willow made of copper, and so dexterously fashioned that at a distance it resembles a real tree. It is actually a shower bath, for by pressing a secret tap, a tiny spray of water can be made to burst from every branch and twig of the tree, to the discomfort of any who may be under it.

They Reward Domestics.

When a German servant girl reaches her fortieth year in the employ of one family she is presented with a golden cross by Empress Augusta Victoria. Last year 144 of these crosses were distributed, only one of which went to a resident of Berlin.

Sensitive Gold-Weighing Machine.

A gold-weighing machine in the Bank of England is so sensitive that a postage stamp dropped on the scale will turn the index on the dial a distance of two inches.

Nine people out of ten who inquire sympathetically, "Can I do anything?" do not mean it.

Actions speak louder than words. Lots of men never say die—but they all do it sooner or later.

BARB-WIRE TELEPHONE LINE.

Three Towns in Indiana Connected by Using Ordinary Fence Wires.

One of the most novel telephone systems in the world is the "barb-wire" line, which connects the Indiana towns of Anderson, Pendleton and Ingalls. It is fifteen miles in length. Its inventor, builder and sole owner, Cassius Alley of Pendleton, now has six subscribers at $50 a year each. The time is not far distance when there will be tenfold this number. One clothing company at Anderson, with branch stores at Pendleton, and the Wagner glass works, with offices at Anderson and factory at Ingalls are using this barb-wire system in their business affairs exclusively. They use the line frequently. They can convert it into a private line by plugs so arranged that when one party is using the line he can cut out all others except in Mr. Alley's residence, which is used as a central station. Ordinary phones are used with no special strength of battery and there is very little trouble with the lines.

In constructing the line, Mr. Alley used the top strand of the barb-wire fence of the Big Four railroad, making the connections with the offices of his subscribers with ordinary telephone wire. In some instances where the posts had rotted it was necessary to paint the wire and posts with rubber paint to insulate the wire. This is fairly satisfactory and puts the line in shape to be used as well in wet weather as at any other time. The inventor expects to put in a newly invented form of glass insulator, which is very cheap and the only one yet found that can be used on a fence wire line.

On this line, wagon roads are crossed thirty-seven times and railroads six times. At these crossings the line is either carried through a gas-pipe conduit, with insulated wire or by building bridges, which is done by merely nailing a piece of timber fifteen feet long to the last fence post and extending high enough to allow clearance for traffic.

The whole line of fifteen miles was built at a cost of about $100, and the outfit for each house, consisting of receiver, transmitter, battery, call, etc., costs not over $10. The magnet bell call is used.

This barb-wire line is connected with the Independent long-distance telephone line at Ingalls, and in this way Indianapolis and Greenfield may be reached by the users of Mr. Alley's system.

The line has been in operation since December and has not been out of order except for a few hours, when a fast train on the railroad struck a cow, threw her body against a fence and broke the wire. A telephone communication, by this simple method, is placed within the reach of every community. Farmers who do not have regular telephone outfits and wires leading to their residences are supplied with a small instrument at a very small cost. This little contrivance is so arranged that it can be attached to the main barb wire at any point and thus the farmer is enabled to call up his city merchant, or broker, or lawyer just as well as if he had the ordinary telephone equipment.

BARB WIRE FENCE TELEPHONE.

PENETRATED SHREWD DISGUISE.

Prison Guard Was Interested in a Moving Grass Plot.

Green Casey, a convict at San Quentin, has won the admiration of all his fellow convicts at the prison for the novel contrivance he has invented in order to make his escape from the prison walls some time ago, and through Sheriff Langdon of Santa Clara County the story has leaked out.

Casey was a kind of trusty around the prison grounds, and while working in one of the grounds in the vicinity of the prison he took it into his head that he would like to escape, and was beginning to tax his mind as to the most advantageous way to suit his purpose. As he was strolling around on the green grass which grows in abundance around the prison an idea struck him that if he could imitate the grass by some means he could elude the watchful sentries and make good his escape.

Through the aid of his convict friends he procured some pieces of burlap, and with the aid of some rope made them into a long coat that would cover him completely when lying on the grass. He then secured some wheat from the prison stable and sowed it on the first layer of his coat. He cast it down carelessly at one end of the prison grounds, and watered it daily. In a few weeks the grass grew up through the sack coat, and before a great while the piece of burlap was conformed into a grassy lawn.

He was now ready to carry out his plans, and patiently waited an opportunity. At last he succeeded in getting his new contrivance across to the northwest of the prison, and in a few minutes was under his grassy coat.

Slowly he crept along with the cleverness of a worm, and from all appearances success would crown his efforts. But his progress was too rapid and very soon he heard footsteps coming in his direction. The moving grass plot which was slowly making its way up the hillside soon came to a sudden standstill as the eye of a guard had noticed the grass moving and came to investigate the phenomenon. A kick in the ribs apprised Casey that his plan had been discovered. The guard took Casey and a red shirt now covers his breast.—San Francisco Call.

OTTO OF BAVARIA.

Remarkable Story of the Insane Monarch and His First Love.

The following remarkable story is related about the unhappy King Otto of Bavaria. This last week he ate almost nothing for some days, although his appetite is usually unnaturally good. He sobbed, wailed and screamed uninterruptedly for hours, and even became at times dangerous. One morning, however, his physician and a keeper cautiously pushed aside the heavy brocade curtain which divides their bedroom from that of the poor monarch and found him with tears running down his cheeks, gazing into a little silver case which they had often seen in a drawer, the key to which King Otto wore on a fine steel chain round his neck.

As soon as the King perceived that he was watched he turned round and smiled so happily and naturally that the doctor, surprised, stepped nearer. Wearing the same joyful expression the King cried out to him: "Countess L. has passed a better night. She is now out of danger." He then carefully locked up the little silver box, which contained nothing but a few dried strawberries, and spent a very quiet day. He also enjoyed his dinner again.

This is the other part of the story. In 1867 there was a merry picnic in a wood. Among the guests was the lovely seventeen-year-old Countess L., with whom the young Prince fell madly in love at first sight. He sat next to her at lunch, paid her the greatest attention, and then disappeared with her into the wood. As the young people did not return, and it was getting late, the mother of the Countess became anxious, and sent men servants out in all directions. The culprits were found with their hats full of strawberries, which they were merrily eating. The next morning they were separated forever.

Prince Otto went with the King to Munich, and the youthful Countess was sent to the Convent of Misericorde, where she has remained up to this day. During the few days throughout which the King had shown such unfavorable symptoms, the girl whom he had loved in his youth was really lying dangerously ill in her cell. Somehow or other—how is not stated—the incurably insane monarch had become aware of the fact.—Berlin cable London News.

AFRICAN HORSES ARE HARDY.

Possess Remarkable Endurance and Power to Travel.

One of the very first things that strike the wanderer in the great expanses of the southern hemisphere is the strength and endurance of the horse. Though to look at they are the sorriest scrags I ever set eyes on, yet they appear to be possessed of a power of getting over the ground that is little short of miraculous and so astonishing in its persistence as to seem automatic. A very striking instance came under my notice only a few days after landing in Cape Town in 1863. I was sitting one Saturday afternoon on the stoop of Park's Hotel, which occupied the corner of Adderley and Strand streets, when a dust-covered horseman stopped and dismounted. His horse was taken to the stables and in the course of conversation in the bar I learned that he was a member of a legislative assembly for an up-country district. There was no railway communication with the interior in those days and he had ridden in from his home at Colesberg in less than six days, having started the previous Monday.

Now Colesberg is more than 500 miles from Cape Town and the country is very rough going, much of it being sand and other parts very mountainous. No English-bred horse, fed according to English methods, could have accomplished such a ride as this, more especially when we consider the temperature of the Cape Colony. I went to look at the animal on which the journey had been performed and found it to be a little roan schimmel barely fourteen hands and apparently as fresh as paint. Another very remarkable ride that came under my notice was performed by a Boer who lived a few miles from Graytown, in Natal. His wife was taken ill and a particular medicine, not to be obtained in Graytown, was imperative. So in the early hours of the night he started for Maritzburg, fifty-five miles distant, through an extremely hilly country and was back on his farm in sixteen hours. The remarkable thing in this ride was that this Boer weighed over seventeen stone.

In my own experience many instances of the wonderful staying powers of African horses have occurred. To mention one, in 1866, I had been appointed honorable secretary of the first athletic sports held in the Umboti country of Natal. They were to be held in Graytown on boxing day, which fell on a Monday. All preparations, etc., were concluded early in December, when I received an urgent request to go to the Transvaal to look after a friend who was lying very ill in his wagon with no attendants but a couple of raw kaffirs. I rode as hard as I could and found him among the kopjes of the Drakensberg, between Lydenberg and Wakkerstrom, very bad with fever, which he had contracted somewhere in the low country to the northwest. I tended him for some days until he was clearly out of danger and then suddenly remembered that I had to be in Graytown on Monday morning. I was then sitting on the wagon box drinking my morning coffee at 6 o'clock Saturday morning. Graytown was 220 miles away, but I was at my post there at 10 a. m. and in addition took a second prize both in running and jumping competitions.—African Life.

Soap Bubble Party.

Here is a Vassar soap bubble recipe which you must learn if you are ever going to have a soap bubble party. Take some white castile soap and shave it fine. Cover it with water and heat until the soap melts. Add a cupful of glycerine for every quart of water, and soon you will have a heavy mixture which reminds you of soap bubbles. At Vassar we used to take the gas pipe, such as you may use on gas lamps, oil stoves and the like. This pipe we would attach to the gas, and one of us would hold up the end of the pipe while the other poured in the soap bubble mixture. We had made the soap bubble mixture and the gas blew the bubbles. Instantly great air castles would form and would come spouting out of the end of that pipe as though by magic. Such big bubbles never were blown before, nor so fast! They would come out of the pipe at the rate of ten a second, and the room would be filled with bubbles in a minute. It seemed as though each bubble was as big as a foot tub and as light as a feather. We played battledore and shuttlecock with them, and had to bat them with sheets which we held taut so that the bubbles could bound on them.

Spring on the Farm.

The sweet, balmy breezes of springtime are melting the last fall of snow,
And soon the bluebirds will be singing to cheer on the man with the hoe;
The gentleman with the lone gallus, who down the corn-row slowly plods,
With a right-and-left whacking and smashing, to bust up the newly turned clods.
The ice has gone out of the streamlet, and green leaves peep forth on the trees;
The worm-fence is patched up in places, and new "gums" are placed for the bees;
The spring house has been fumigated, and bed clothes are aired on the line,
And the whole farm breathes out a warm welcome for the coming of spring's blessed time.
The colt is turned loose in the pasture,
painted over with rank kerosene;
The anvil rings out its wild clamor as the "plow p'ints" are made sharp and keen;
The boys dig for bait in the barnyard, for the creek water's muddy and warm,
For spring is at hand, rousing up this old land, and there's joy, life and work on the farm.

Soda Water to Appease Hunger.

Soda water is now prescribed as a palliative for hunger, especially for the abnormal hunger produced by disease. The seat of hunger is found in the solar plexus. By the use of water charged with carbonic acid gas the branches of the solar plexus distributed through the mucous membrane of the stomach are influenced in such a way that the abnormal irritation of the plexus, which is the foundation for the ravenous hunger often present in diabetes and certain forms of indigestion, may be greatly mitigated, if not wholly appeased.

Their Voices.

It is not generally known that the intonation of the Prince of Wale's voice is exactly the same as the German Emperor's, and a court official says that one has only to close one's eyes to imagine the one or the other giving directions when either is talking.

WILLIAM E. ROSE, Executor.

Dated March 22, 1900.

QUESTION ANSWERED.

Yes, August Flower has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers' and grandmothers' never thought of using anything else for Indigestion or Billiousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart Failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Sample bottles at O. P Barber's, Corunna.

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Hannah R. Moss is plaintiff and Silas Franks, Alice Franks and Frank P. Seiler, auditor of DeKalb county, are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of seven hundred and sixty-two dollars and ninety cents ($762.90) with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on Saturday, May 5, 1900,

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the door of the court house of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following described real estate, to-wit;

The southeast one-fourth [¼] of the southeast quarter of section thirty-six [36] township thirty-four [34], north of range thirteen east, in DeKalb county, state of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

—The farmers of Southern Indiana are said to be plowing up their wheat, and it is freely predicted that those of the northern portion of the state will plow up theirs when the ground is in condition for plowing. This condition of things is anything but encouraging to the farmers of our state. but the only thing that can be done is to face the situation bravely and make the best of it.

—We have just received of Col. C. G. Barns, Albion, Nebraska, a copy of his report to Governor Poynter on the condition and work of the Nebraska National Guard, he being Surgeon General of the state. It is a very interesting document and throws much light on the labors and duties of that important office. His experience during the past year has also enabled him to make some valuable suggestions for future work.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

R. B. HANNA FOR CONGRESS

Fort Wayne Man Nominated by Acclamation Today.

The republican convention to select a candidate for congress and delegates to the national convention from the Twelfth district was held here today and there was a good attendance from every county in the district. Chairman Leonard came up from Fort Wayne last evening; other prominent members of the party were here early to confer with him as to the details of the meeting. The delegates from the north came in at 9:58 over the Lake Shore, and other good delegations came in over the B. & O. and Wabash from Noble and Whitley. Allen sent the largest party, which was expected as Fort Wayne furnished a candidate for congress in the person of Robert B. Hanna. The forenoon was spent by those on the ground in "fixing" matters and after dinner the convention was called to order in the opera house by Chairman Leonard. Sol A. Wood of Angola was made president of the meeting, and Editor Williamson of the Columbia City Mail was secretary. The committee on resolutions reported, and then nominations were in order. Allen county named R. B. Hanna for congress in a not very strong speech by one of her delegates. DeKalb, Noble, Whitley, Lagrange and Steuben seconded the nomination as each was called, and on motion of C. E. Emanuel it was made unanimous. Mr. Hanna was called and spoke briefly but with ability. Judge Morris spoke a few minutes but could not be well heard. John L. Griffith of Indianapolis, candidate for governor, was called and made a brilliant and able speech. A. C. Robbins of Auburn and Charles L. Nichols of Lagrange were chosen as delegates to the national convention; the alternates are Harry K. Scott of Angola and Dr. Criswell of Churubusco. Henry I. Park of Kendallville was nominated for presidential elector.

Automobile Service.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has established Electric Automobile Service at Washington, D. C. in connection with the train service, being the first railroad to introduce this mode of transportation regularly to and from its railway station.

The Automobiles are of the latest electric pattern, absolutely noiseless in regard to machinery and running gear. They are provided with luxuriously deep cushioned seats, with electric lights and time pieces. Two small trunks can be carried on the supports at the rear of the vehicle, and the top of the cab provides ample room for small traveling bags and hand luggage.

The splendid streets of Washington are particularly favorable for this high-class transportation, and the vehicles can in safety reach a speed from ten to fourteen miles an hour on any of the streets, excepting in the business portion.

It has been arranged, when special service is desired, passengers on trains when nearing Washington from East will notify conductor before reaching Baltimore, and on trains from the West will notify conductor before arrival of train at Washington Junction.

The rates for this extraordinary service are extremely reasonable, and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, with its advanced ideas and methods, is to be congratulated in being the first to inaugurate regularly this latest invention in transportation service. 16

Got Her Insurance.

Auburn friends of "Cos" Altenberg of Little Rock will read with interest this item from the Little Rock Gazette of April 6.

In the United States court of appeals at St. Louis Mrs. Mary J. Gilbert of Little Rock, daughter of Mr. "Cos" Altenberg, won a suit involving $5,000 against the Travelers' Protective Association.

Mrs. Gilbert received judgment in the lower court at Little Rock for $5,075, having brought suit on a certificate of membership in the T. P. A. for $5,000, issued to her husband, David B. Gilbert, whose death was caused by accidentally taking an overdose of chloral-hydrate The point at issue in the case was that of the way in which the summons was served. The laws of Arkansas give the officers the right to serve papers in a case against certain fraternal societies on officers of subordinate lodges. The Travelers' Protective Association contended that the law did not apply in this case, but the court of appeals holds that it does.

A New Coin.

A new coin three-cent piece has been authorized by act of congress, to take the place of the old coin which was so much like a dime that its coinage was stopped. The new three-cent piece is ordered to be made of nickel, the size of the old bronze cent, only thicker. In the center is to be a hole one-fourth of an inch in diameter. This will make the coin easily distinguishable by sight or touch. It will be some time, however, before this new coin will be in circulation.

OBITUARY.

Thomas A. McCrum, was born in Richland township, DeKalb County, Indiana, on the 16th day of July, 1855, where he grew to young manhood. He was united in marriage to Miss Lovina Rohm on the 29th day of July, 1880. To them were born two sons, who are still living. About eight years ago they came to Auburn where they have since lived. For several years Mr. McCrum was employed in the Kiblinger carriage factory, and was an honest and faithful workman. He was an industrious and hard working man, trying with all his might to gain for himself and family an honest living. On the 28th of August, 1895, he joined the Ancient Order of United Workmen, of which he was a faithful and honored member up to the time of his death. Before coming to Auburn he was an active membr of the United Brethren church at Green's Corners, but since living in Auburn he never united with any church, yet retained in his heart a warm regard for the christain religion. Mr. McCrum was a kind husband and father, and has made ample provisions for the comforts of his family. After a brief illness from congestion of the brain, Mr. McCrum departed this life at the age of 44 years, 8 months and 23 days. He leaves to mourn his death a wife, two sons, three brothers and two sisters, besides many other friends. The funeral service was conducted from the Lutheran church this afternoon, April 12 at 2 o'clock. Interment took place in Woodlawn cemetery, J. D. Brosy officiating.

Spring Poetry.

We have heard it with our ears, seen it with our eyes, handled it with our hands, but, with snow blizzards the middle of April we dont want too much of it. Here is the only one we think of—a very old one.

The first bird of spring
Commenced to sing;
But ere he had sung the first note,
He fell from the limb,
A dead bird was him,
For the music had friz in his throat

—John Mansfield, a farmer living near Muncie, died in agony from inflammation of the head, caused by a bug which flew into his ear two weeks ago. The insect was removed in two pieces but too late to save the man's life.

is a food medicine for the baby that is thin and not well nourished and for the mother whose milk does not nourish the baby.

It is equally good for the boy or girl who is thin and pale and not well nourished by their food; also for the anæmic or consumptive adult that is losing flesh and strength.

In fact, for all conditions of wasting, it is the food medicine that will nourish and build up the body and give new life and energy when all other means fail.

Should be taken in summer as well as winter.

ONLY A DREAM.

Astral Body of Angola Editor Present When Beveridge Spoke.

The evening of the day following the magnificent speech of Senator Beveridge on the Porto Rican tariff bill in the United States Senate last week, we read the address carefully from beginning to end, as well as press reports of the insolence of many of his senior associates. During the night following we reveled in dreamland. We seemed to be with a party of Hoosier spectators in a gallery of the Senate chamber in Washington. The gallery was crowded with well dressed, intelligent-looking people, and nearly all the Senators were at their desks on the floor of the Senator chamber. For the most part the members of the most exalted legislative body in the world appeared to be on the shady side of life. Many were grayhaired, the locks of others were snow white, and not a few were bald. Some, however, appeared to be in the prime of life and vigorous manhood, and among these we recognized the cheery face of Senator Beveridge, the junior of Indiana's two representatives in that august body. The scene was delightful and inspiring—a great treat for eyes that seldom behold realistic pictures of that kind, and for ears that rarely listen to the utterances of men intrusted with such mighty responsibilities.

Presently Senator Beveridge arose and addressed the chair. He appeared slightly paler than usual, which we attributed to overwork and anxiety for his wife, who languished on a sick bed hundreds of miles away; but his voice was clear and musical, and his accent and manner indicated that he was thoroughly in earnest. His diction was faultless; and as he warmed to his subject his clean-cut ideas and logical argument held his audience spell-bound except for occasional outbursts of hearty applause from the galleries.

Senator Beveridge had hardly commenced speaking when our attention was attracted by a man who arose and, glancing haughtily over the chamber, strode away toward a cloak room with a swagger which seemed to say, almost as plainly as spoken words, "I own the earth!" His flouting manner was so conspicuous that we inquired his name, and an elbow neighbor said, "Why, that's Mark Hanna." Before Mr. Hanna was out of sight, others were following him, and ere long the Senate Chamber was more than half empty. In fact nearly all the republican members had retired—only nine of them remaining by actual count—and we innocently inquired if they had "gone out to see a man." "Oh, no," said our informant, "when Mark Hanna takes snuff, they all sneeze." It was apparent that Senator Beveridge realized the magnitude of their premeditated and deliberately executed insult, but he resolutely went forward in the discharge of his duty and the exercise of his privilege, expressing his views on a measure of grave importance, and giving reasons for the belief that was within him.—Angola Magnet, Rep.

End of the Term.

Judge Bratton cleared up the work of the March term yesterday afternoon, the following cases being disposed of:

State of Indiana vs E. W. and Starr Miner, criminal libel. Dismissed by the prosecution. This case is the one brought at the instance of former editor Ellis of the Clipper.

Julia Bice vs. Henry Bice, divorce. Decree to plaintiff, who is also given the custody of the daughter and possession of certain real estate.

In the case of Clarence and Samantha Enterline vs Monroe Enterline, for partition, the commissioners were discharged after making their report of the division of the property.

Cordelia Jones vs. Ezekiel Jones, divorce. Defendant failed to appear and decree to plaintiff.

The divorce case of Ella Williams vs. Josiah William possessed some sensational features, but after hearing the evidence the court granted a decree to the plaintiff with $400 alimony, payable in monthly installments of $15.

Death of G. W. Stahl.

At about 11:30 today, after a long illness, occurred the death of George W. Stahl, one of Auburn's oldest and most respected citizens, at the advanced age of 78 years, 7 months and 8 days. While Mr. Stahl's death was not unexpected it will be heard of with sincere regret by a wide circle of friends. Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been completed, but will be announced tomorrow.

Sheep for Sale.

Owing to a scarcity of feed I have concluded to dispose of my entire flock of sheep at private sale, consisting of twenty-nine head of ewes, one ram, and thirty-two head of lambs by their sides, ranging in age from two to eight weeks. Also several head of young cattle. Residence two and one-half miles south west of Jackson Center.—P. P. LOCHNER.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Osman Pasha, the hero of the Russo-Turkish war, was reported dead the other day. He is the one who commanded the Turks at the famous siege of Plevna, when the Turks and Russians lay within rifle range of each other for months, neither being able to drive the other from their rifle pits, and both armies living in the mud and dirt under fire. It was one of the most remarkable sieges in the world, after the siege of Jerusalem by the Romans. By sheer force of numbers, he and his Turkish soldiers were forced back, foot by foot, from one line of rifle pits to another, till the character of the ground rendered it impossible to hold the position longer. Even a Turk may be a great man and great soldier.

The oldest residence in Orange county, N.Y., is still standing and in use. It is built of stone, its builder and first owner being a stone mason from Ireland. We talked recently with a person who visited the old mansion a year or two ago, and who describes it as a queer but comfortable affair. All the wood work is put together with wooden pins, and even the doors are fastened that way. When the door is closed, a pin, such as farmers use to fasten a gate, is pushed into a hole in the wall, being slanted in the same way as our gates of the old kind. Many visit the quaint old residence to examine the details of its construction.

Princess Stephanie of Austria, was married again yesterday, at Miramir, in South Austria, to Count Lonyay. The poor woman has had troubles galore. She is a daughter of the king of Belgium, and had been married to Rudolph, crown prince of Austria, but he was found murdered one morning under very suspicious circumstances. Now the widow marries a man not of royal blood, and her father would like to disown her, and the emperor of Austria, her former father-in-law, wants to cut off her allowance and take away her title. But she for once marries a man of her own choosing and tells them they may call her Princess Stephanie or plain Stephanie, or Countess Lonyay, just as they please.

It is very gratifying to see different branches of the various churches coming nearer together. There used to be so many isms and divisions over unimportant details and what would seem to an outsider nonessential points. Several church bodies split into "North and South," and have been more recently agreeing to be better friends. It has only been a few yeas since the U. B. church divided on a bitter quarrel as to secret societies. But now there seems to be a growing together, as to these points. The M. E. folks send men to conference who are allowed to "suggest" a little, though they have no real power in the matter, yet their wishes are not always ignored. And the M. P. folks are also inclined to unbend a little. It would be wise if all churches could grow in liberality and realize that many of the points that so greatly disturb them in this world, will not be so prominent in the next. Much of this has passed away. And there was the scism in the M. E. church in 1830, when so many "protested" and finally separated from the parent church to form the "Methodist Protestant" church. We believe the chief trouble was in the selection of their preachers, the "M. P." folks, insisting that a congregation should have the right to choose ite pastor instead of giving that power fully into the hands of the conference.

Superbly Beautiful Carpets.

In the widely known establishment of the Foster Carpet and Furniture Company, Fort Wayne citizens boast that they have the largest and finest Furniture and Carpet store west of the Allegheries. The business was established at Fort Wayne in 1868, as a branch of their big store in New York City. For thirty-two years this great store has catered to the wants of the people of northeastern Indiana and western Ohio. As this is the season of the year when carpets are bought, attention is specially called to their extensive Carpet Department—the largest by far of any in Fort Wayne—where are gathered together the greatest display the firm has ever made in all the latest prize designs of Ingrains, Brussels, Velvets, Moquettes, Axminsters and Wiltons. Carpets and furniture should be bought to harmonize. They go naturally together. You can purchase both to better advantage at Foster's, at Fort Wayne, than you can even in the largest cities. On bills of $10 and upwards they prepay the frieght to all points within 75 miles of Fort Wayne.

Camp Fun.

The following letter was written home by an Indiana soldier during the rebellion, and is dated at camp at Helena, Ark., April 10, 1863, which is thirty-seven years ago last Tuesday. The writer, John Park, a brother-in-low of C. C. Buss, he being then in Co. C. of the 11th Indiana, Gen. Lew Wallace's old regiment. Here it is:

CHRONICLE OF THE 11TH IND. ZOUAVES.

1. Man that is born of woman, and enlisted as a soldier in the Eleventh Indiana is of a few days and short of rations.

2. He cometh forth at reveille; is also present at retreat, yea, even at tattoo and retireth apparently at taps.

3. He draweth his rations from the commissary and devoureth the same he striketh his teeth against much hard and is satisfied; he filleth his canteen with applejack and clappeth the mouth thereof upon the bung of a whisky barrel, and after a little while goeth away rejoicing in his strategy.

4. Much soldiering hath made him sharp; yea, even the seat of his breeches is in danger of being cut through.

5. He covenanteth with the credulous farmer for many turkeys and chickens, also at the same time for much milk and honey to be paid for promptly at the end of each ten days, and lo, his regiment moveth on the ninth day to another post.

6. His tent is filled with potatoes, cabbage, turnips, kraut and other delicate morsels of a delicious taste which abound not in the commissary department.

7. And many other things not in the returns and which never will return, yet, of a truth it must be said of the soldier of the Eleventh that he taketh nothing that he cannot reach.

8. He fireth his Minie rifle at midnight and the whole camp is aroused and formed in line of battle, and lo, his mess come bearing in a porker, which he solemnly declareth to resembled a secest that he was compelled to pull trigger.

9. He giveth the Proovst Marshal mucn trouble, often capturing his guard and possesseth himself of the city.

10. At such times lager beer flows like milk and honey. From his generous hand he giveth without stint to his own comrade, yea, and witholdeth not from the 24th Indiana or from the lean, lank, expectant Buckeye.

11. He even playeth at euchre with the parson to see whether or not there shall be preaching in camp on the following Sabbath, and by dexterously drawing from the bottom a jack, goeth away rejoicing that the service is postponed.

12. And many other things doeth he, and lo! are they not recorded in the morning reports of Company C? Yea verily.

Not A Square Deal.

"Jones, we want to hold a meeting of the Octagon club at your house this evening."

"I would be glad to oblige you, Brown, but we are not in shape to do it."

Pretty Children

"We have three children. Before the birth of the last one my wife used four bottles of MOTHER'S FRIEND. If you had the pictures of our children, you could see at a glance that the last one is healthiest, prettiest and finest-looking of them all. My wife thinks Mother's Friend is the greatest and grandest remedy in the world for expectant mothers."—Written by a Kentucky Attorney-at-Law.

MOTHER'S FRIEND prevents nine-tenths of the suffering incident to childbirth. The coming mother's disposition and temper remain unruffled throughout the ordeal, because this relaxing, penetrating liniment relieves the usual distress. A good-natured mother is pretty sure to have a good-natured child. The patient is kept in a strong, healthy condition, which the child also inherits. Mother's Friend takes a wife through the crisis quickly and almost painlessly. It assists in her rapid recovery, and wards off the dangers that so often follow delivery.

NEWS IN BRIEF GUSTS

BLOWN IN FROM ALL PARTS OF THE EARTH.

An Important Record of the Week As Told by the Telegraph—Latest from Foreign Shores—Crimes, Casualties, Fires, Etc.

Says Frick Will Sell Out.

A Pittsburgh dispatch says that H. C. Frick will dispose of all his holdings—something over $16,000,000—in the Carnegie Company just as soon as he can.

Officials of the Carnegie Company deny that there is any truth in the report that the company will take in the Cramps concern, either in part or in whole, or that any selling arrangement has been made whereby armor plates and structural material will be supplied the Cramps by the Carnegie Company. They say that if such a project is on it is locked up in the bosoms of Messrs. Carnegie and Schwab.

A rumor is current that Mr. Frick will buy out the Cramps.

Buried in the Ruins.

Without warning and with a rush and a roar, the four-story brick building at the corner of Second avenue and Wood street, Pittsburgh, Pa., collapsed, burying in its ruins a number of people, three of whom were take out dead, six were badly hurt and several others slightly injured.

Within a few minutes after the accident firemen and policemen had the place roped off, and the work of rescue was carried on systematically, and notwithstanding the great danger from the toppling walls the rescuers worked until all the buried were extricated.

The Kentucky Trouble.

Frankfort (Ky.) special: The attorneys in the contest cases for the minor State offices have prepared an agreement, which has been signed. Under its terms an agreed-upon case is to be made up and advanced through the State courts. The intention is to hurry the case through in time for it to be taken up by the United States Supreme Court with the case involving the title to the offices of Governor and Lieutenant Governor.

Navies Will Demonstrate.

Berlin special: The Berliner Tageblatt learns from Kiel that an international naval demonstration will take place at Taku. The German squadron, consisting of the cruisers Hertha, Gefion, Irene and the Kaiserin Augusta, and the gunboats Jaguar and Iltis, under Admiral Bendmann, is at present stationed conveniently, so that within a few days the ships can be concentrated in the Gulf of Pe Chi Li.

Bodies Seen at Sea.

Victoria (B. C.) special: H. B. M. S. Arethusa, which arrived at Esquimault recently, reports passing three bodies, evidently male Europeans, floating just off San Francisco, on the 7th inst. There was no wreckage in the vicinity, but it was presumed the corpses were from some foundered ship. There was a heavy gale blowing and it was impossible to investigate.

A Battle with Tramps.

After a lively fight in which numerous shots were fired, six tramps, trying to hold up a freight train at Hebron, N. D., were arrested and lodged in jail. They shot at the conductor and terrorized the train crew, but were rounded up by a posse of citizens with rifles. The only casualty was a wound in the knee received by one of the tramps, who will lose his leg.

Engine Toppled Over.

Bellefonte (Pa.) special: Harry Whipple, fireman, Calvin Temple, brakeman, and Albert Beamer, were killed in a railroad wreck near Clarence Station. The engine toppled over a bank on them.

Swindler is Punished.

A New York dispatch says: James Kellogg was sentenced to seven and a half years in the penitentiary for grand larceny in connection with the Dean Company swindle, operated three years ago.

Historic Church Burned.

The historic First Baptist Church at Concord, Mass., Unitarian, where the Provincial Congress met and was presided over by John Adams, was burned recently.

Eleven Were Drowned.

London special: As the result of the wreck of a fishing boat on the North Cornish coast three fishermen and eight life boatmen were drowned. The life boat went to the rescue of the imperiled fishermen and was upset in the attempt to save their lives.

Italy Tests New Rifle.

Rome special: The new automatic rifle has been successfully experimented with at the Bresela work shop and fired accurately seventeen shot a second. The navy will be armed with the new gun.

Mail Destroyed at East Liverpool, Ohio.

The East Liverpool, Ohio, postoffice was gutted by fire. Much of the loose mail and that in boxes was destroyed. The mail still in pouches was saved. The loss on mail cannot be estimated. Damage to the building will amount to about $1,000.

Epidemic of Yellow Fever.

The United States marine hospital service has received information that the yellow fever is epidemic in San Salvador. The surgeons of the service stationed at the fruit ports have been notified and will keep the officials advised of any development in the situation.

VALLEY BECOMES A MOUNTAIN.

Wonderful Upheaval of Earth Reported on the Nooksachk River.

A tremendous upheaval, accompanied by wonderful changes, occurred in the Mount Baker district of Washington recently. What had once been a valley and the bed of a river is now a hill seventy feet high. The noise of the upheaval was heard at Hamilton, ten miles away. A report of the occurrence was brought to Seattle by D. P. Simons, Jr. Simons says the noise of the upheaval sounded like heavy thunder. He and his party, who were examining timber lands, journeyed in the direction from which the sound came, and were astonished to see a huge mound of earth, nearly a quarter of a mile square, where formerly there had been a valley. In places the mound was seventy feet high. The Nooksachk river had been turned from its course, and ran around one side of a hill. Nearly in the center of this high bank of earth was a large lake. A forest had formerly occupied the ground, and trees which had escaped destruction rose above the water. There were cracks here and there in the mound large enough to ingulf a horse and wagon. There was a smell of sulphur in the air, and it is Mr. Simons' impression that the disturbance was caused by gases underneath the mountain. William Hadley, a trapper, whose wrecked cabin now stands in the center of the huge mound, was absent at the time of the upheaval and thus escaped death. His cabin was split in two.

RETAIL DISTRIBUTION IMPROVES.

Advent of Spring Weather Brings About a Change for the Better.

Bradstreet's says: "Favorable features continue in the majority in the general trade situation. The hopes for the advent of seasonable spring weather have been realized, and nearly all markets report an improved distribution at retail. This, as explained heretofore, is really the key of the general merchandise situation. The industrial situation is a rather spotted one. The price situation is encouraging, farm products easily leading in the upward movement. Wheat crop advices are on the whole favorable, except from the central wast. Nothing like the speculative interest in corn has been seen for some years past, and the price now is little below 50 cents at New York. Hog products are very strong statistically. Pork is 30 per cent and lard is 25 per cent higher than a year ago. The iron and steel situation shows some effects of the recent missionary work in aid of lower prices, but results as yet are rather in the shape of unsettled feeling than of actually lower quotations. Wheat, including flour, shipments for the week aggregate 3,836,963 bushels, against 2,962,349 last week. Corn exports for the week aggregate 4,361,591 bushels, against 3,193,638 last week."

VICTORY FOR STATE OF INDIANA.

Oil Company Cannot Legally Permit Gas to Escape into Atmosphere.

Justice White in the Supreme Court at Washington handed down the opinion of the court in the case of the Ohio Oil Company vs. the State of Indiana. The case involved the validity of the State law prohibiting persons from boring wells to permit the escape of gas into the atmosphere as opposed to the general interests of the community. The oil company alleged that the enforcement of this law was a violation of the Federal constitution. The State courts upheld the State law. The Supreme Court's opinion sustained that view. Justice White said that the oil company had apparently proceeded under a misconception of the law.

Mexican Women Fight a Duel.

A duel was fought in the outskirts of the City of Mexico by two women connected with prominent families of the capital. Pistols were the weapons and one of the participants was seriously wounded. The victor and the two seconds on the field of honor have been arrested. The affair has created a sensation.

Tire of Manitoba's Cold.

A party of forty Doukhobours has left Winnipeg for California, where they were taken by an American employment agency to work for 50 cents a day. They said they wanted to go to a warmer climate. The immigration authorities are becoming alarmed at the movement, as it is said the whole colony will leave in the course of two or three years.

Greatest Alaska Gold Find.

General Manager Hawkins of the White Pass Railway brings news of what he considers the greatest gold find ever made in Alaska. Seven men gathered nearly $30,000 since the first week in January from the bed of a hitherto nameless creek. It is a tributary of the Yukon, joining it a few miles below Closeleigh.

Modus Vivendi is Renewed.

Joseph Chamberlain, imperial secretary of state for the colonies, has notified the Newfoundland colonial cabinet that the British and French governments have renewed the Anglo-French modus vivendi covering fishery rights on the Newfoundland treaty shore until the close of the present year.

Robbed While Sleuths Watch.

While two detectives were stationed in Judge F. A. Cline's house in St. Louis to bag a burglar, the looked-for criminal mysteriously entered the house and got away with jewelry valued at $1,200. The police had been warned in an anonymous note that the house was marked for burglary while the family was at dinner.

Disaster from Fierce Flames.

At Proctorville, Ohio, the flouring mill of G. D. Pugh caught fire and from this a conflagration resulted which destroyed half the town, clearing squares of residences and business houses. But two stores of any importance are left. Loss $200,000. Insurance $60,000.

Coal in Wichita Mountains.

Anthracite coal of excellent quality has been found in the Wichita mountains. An El Reno coal merchant declares that the opening of the Kiowa and Comanche country will result in giving access to an immense coal field.

British Steamer is Sunk.

The British steamer Mexican of the Union Line, Captain Martin, which left Cape Town April 4, has been sunk in collision with a cattle transport. The Mexican's passengers returned to Cape Town on board the cattle boat.

Big Damage by a Cloudburst.

The country southwest of Austin, Tex., was visited by a cloudburst. The Nueces river and other streams were converted almost instantly into raging torrents that overflowed and swept away thousands of acres of growing crops in the valleys.

Fighting in Ashanti.

Tribal fighting has taken place in Ashanti. Gov. and Lady Hodgson are at Coomassie. The telegraph wires have been cut, communication stopped, and dispatches destroyed.

Russia and Corea Agree.

An agreement has been concluded whereby Russia disavows any design to obtain a port in the island of Quelpart and Corea promises not to concede the same to any other power.

New Plate Mirror Combine.

The American Plate Mirror Company was chartered at Harrisburg, Pa., with a capital of $50,000,000. This company is composed of well-known plate glass men. The new combine is looked upon as the beginning of a determined move on the part of the American plate glass men to wrest the trade in this country for plate mirrors from foreign manufacturers.

INDIAN UPRISING IN ALASKA.

Troops Quell Turbulent Redskins, Then Have to Prevent a Lynching.

The steamer Cutch, from Skaguay, reports that the troops at Haines' mission, on the opposite side of Lynn canal from Skaguay, were called out recently for the purpose of suppressing an uprising of 300 Chilkat and Chilkoot Indians. A few weeks ago nine Indians of these tribes were arrested at the mission for the murder last fall of Mr. and Mrs. Horton, Americans. As a result of the arrests 300 of the young Indians, all well armed, gathered at Haines' wharf, where several of the older natives spoke and advocated sweeping the whites off the face of the earth. The troops dispersed the braves. At night white residents of Skaguay, hearing of the uprising, determined to lynch the nine Indians held in jail for murder as a lesson to the natives. Then the troops had to guard the jail. All was quiet when the Cutch left. Col. Ripinski, United States commissioner at Haines, says the murder of the Hortons was due to an Indian's arrival from McNeil Island. He had been pardoned while serving a ten-year sentence for murder. As he wore good clothes and said he had been well treated the nine Indians thought his confinement had been a pleasure, and they were desirous of enjoying similar pleasures.

GIRL HANGED TO A MAPLE TREE.

Jury Decides She Was Murdered and Then Tied to a Limb.

A few days ago the daughter of Jesse Howard, a farmer living three miles east of Springfield, Ark., left home to go to the field, where she was shrubbing sprouts in their crop. The next morning she was discovered swinging from a maple limb dead. The limb to which she was tied was only about seven feet high and left her feet full on the ground, one knee resting on the earth. Her apron had been torn into strips and made into a hangman's rope. The coroner's jury decided that she had first been murdered and then hanged. Gov. Jones will begin an investigation at once. It is a strange coincidence that within a short distance from the maple to which she was tied stands a black jack, to which an old colored man was found tied with a short bridle rein about four years ago.

PARROT BLAMED FOR EXPLOSION.

Bird Escapes Injury, but Declines to Give Any Explanation.

When Charles Marks' house in St. Louis was blown almost to pieces by a terrific explosion there was only one living thing therein—a parrot. By some remarkable chance it escaped injury and was perched on a part of the wrecked wall when the police made an inspection. An effort was made to get an explanation from the bird, but the parrot would not talk. Since the event he seems to be nervously prostrated and his owner suspects that he is responsible for the explosion by tampering with the gasoline tank. On this point the parrot maintains a dignified silence.

Plan a Bridge to Arlington.

The Secretary of War has forwarded to Congress the report of a board of engineers and architects in favor of the construction of a bridge across the Potomac river, from Washington to Arlington, "as a memorial to American patriotism," in accordance with designs submitted by Prof. Burr, a distinguished bridge engineer of New York, at an estimated cost of $4,800,000.

O. W. Potter's Chicago Home Robbed.

Diamonds and jewelry the value of which is estimated at $40,000 were stolen the other night from the residence of Orrin W. Potter, 130 Lake Shore drive, Chicago, and no trace of the thieves was left. The robbery was committed while the Potter family was at dinner and the servants were all in the lower part of the house.

Rob the House of a Diplomat.

Senor Antonio del Viso, the Argentine charge d'affaires at Washington, reported to the police that his house had been entered and robbed of jewelry valued at $5,000.

Battle Fought at Meerkesfontein.

Gen. Dewet inflicted the third defeat on the British within a week at Meerkesfontein, killing or wounding 600, capturing 900 men and twelve wagons, and losing five Boers killed and nine wounded.

Politics Causes a Murder.

In a street fight at Huntington, W. Va., Shelly Sharitz was shot and killed instantly. The quarrel arose over the election. Shelly Sharitz was shot by Hall Ross, who fired into a crowd.

Carnegie and Cramp to Join.

Negotiations are said to be in progress for a combination of the gigantic new Carnegie company and the Cramp shipbuilding concern.

Switzerland Will Not Mediate.

The Federal Council of Switzerland has refused to mediate between the Boers and England, as requested by the former.

Mr. Gallinger presented an argument in the Senate on Thursday against the seating of M. S. Quay as a Senator from Pennsylvania. He devoted himself almost entirely to the constitutional phases of the question. Most of the day was spent in executive session on the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. In the House when 4 o'clock, the hour fixed for taking a vote on the bill to provide territorial government for Hawaii, arrived, less than half the bill had been covered and so many amendments remained that it was agreed to continue the consideration of the bill under the five-minute rule until it was finished. Several important amendments were agreed to, among them the following: To nullify all labor contracts in the islands, to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquor in saloons, to limit the land holdings of corporations to 1,000 acres, to substitute for the House provision relating to the appointment of judges and other officers of the island the Senate provision. The House provision lodged the appointing power in the Governor, the Senate placed it in the President.

Mr. Deboe gave notice in the Senate on Friday that he would move to refer the credentials of former Senator J. C. S. Blackburn as a Senator from Kentucky to the committee on privileges and elections. During the greater part of the season the Senate had under consideration the Indian appropriation bill. Mr. Sullivan delivered a speech in favor of the seating of M. S. Quay. The House passed the substitute for the Senate bill providing for a territorial form of government for Hawaii.

During almost the entire session of the Senate on Saturday an amendment to the Indian appropriation bill offered by Mr. Jones (Ark.) providing for the continuance of the Government's employment of the contract Indian schools, in certain circumstances, was under consideration. The debate took a wide range, the whole question of sectarian schools being gone over at length. The notable feature of the discussion was an eloquent speech delivered in support of the amendment by Mr. Vest. The amendment was pending when the Senate adjourned, the vote upon it disclosing the fact that no quorum was present. The House paid tribute to the memory of the late Richard Parks Bland of Missouri, popularly known as "Silver Dick" Bland, who was a member of the House for twenty-six years. Splendid eulogies of the life and career of the great champion of silver were offered by members on both sides of the political aisle. At the conclusion of the ceremonies the House, as further mark of respect, adjourned. A resolution was adopted calling upon the Secretary of War for information as to whether Charles E. Magoon, the legal adviser of the insular bureau, had ever rendered an opinion that, by the treaty with Spain, the Constitution was extended over Porto Rico and the Philippines.

After some further discussion the Senate on Monday rejected the sectarian school amendment to the Indian appropriation bill offered by Mr. Jones (Dem., Ark.) by a vote of 30 to 16. As has been the practice for two or three years, the free homes measure was offered as an amendment to the bill, but it was ruled out on the point of order that it was general legislation and therefore not germane to an appropriation bill. Without division, the bill was passed. The measure carries about $8,414,000. An unsuccessful effort was made to agree upon a date for a vote on the resolution relative to the seating of Mr. Quay as a Senator from Pennsylvania. During the last two hours of the session the Alaskan civil code bill was under consideration. An amendment offered by Mr. Hansbrough concerning the title to mining claims in the Cape Nome district provoked a warm debate. In the House the agricultural appropriation bill was under consideration and was made the vehicle of considerable desultory debate on irrelevant political topics. Good progress was made with the bill after the close of general debate, twenty-five of the thirty-seven pages being covered before adjournment.

In the Senate on Tuesday unanimous consent was given for a vote on April 24, 4 p. m., on a resolution relative to seating M. S. Quay as a Senator from Pennsylvania. Eulogies were pronounced upon Richard Parks Bland, late member of the House of Representatives. On motion of Mr. Cullom the Senate non-concurred in the House amendments to the Hawaiian civil government bill, and Senators Cullom, Lodge and Morgan were named as conferees. In the House agricultural bill passed substantially as reported. Objections to free distribution of seeds and vaccine were voted down. Mr. Hepburn said Nicaragua bill would be brought up for passage if he could effect it. A bill passed to create a commission to make a settlement with the Sioux City and Pacific Railroad of its indebtedness to the United States.

On Wednesday the Senate with little debate of importance passed the Pacific cable bill, a measure appropriating $3,000,000 for the construction of a cable line between San Francisco and Honolulu. The bill was unanimously reported by the committee on naval affairs, and that it was passed without serious objection is regarded as a compliment to the committee. During the greater part of the session the District of Columbia appropriation bill was under consideration. As passed it carries nearly $8,000,000. The House passed the Porto Rico tariff bill as amended by the Senate by a vote of 161 to 153.

Odds and Ends.

Ex-Congressman Owens, Newark, Ohio, is dead.

The bubonic plague is rapidly spreading in India.

Minnesota's schools cost about $5,000,000 annually, and that is one-third of the money raised by taxes in the State.

Lompoc, Cal., grows mustard for the whole nation. In that region 2,000 acres are cultivated to the seed, the industry employing about 200 farmers.

A victory for American ship owners is the Treasury Department's decision that American goods shipped to Skaguay in Canadian vessels must pay duties.

It was reported that the Prince of Wales intended to challenge for the America's cup, but that he was interfered with by the South African war.

Secretary Long issued the order constituting a general board "to insure efficient preparation of the fleet in case of war and for the naval defense of the coast."

The State Department at Washington has received an appeal for help from Alfred Robert, an American citizen, who claims that he is imprisoned and subjected to torture at Monterey, Mexico.

D. A. Tyson and ten others pleaded guilty at Savannah to wholesale frauds. For months they have been ordering beer and liquors by mail from wholesale firms, selling them in Southern blind tigers, and cheating the wholesalers out of their pay.

PORTO RICO TARIFF.

OXNARD BILL IS PASSED BY THE HOUSE.

Vote Stands 161 for Concurrence to 153 Against—Debate Limited to Four Hours, and Senate Amendments Are Not Read.

The national House of Representatives on Wednesday afternoon completed its record on the Porto Rican tariff bill by concurring in all the Senate amendments. The final vote was 161 in favor of the bill and 153 against it, with eleven members present and not voting. There were nine Republicans who refused to vote for the bill but voted against it. They were: Lorimer of Illinois, Warner of Illinois, Crumpacker of Indiana, Lane of Iowa, Henry C. Smith of Michigan, Fletcher of Minnesota, Heatwole of Minnesota, Littlefield of Maine, McCall of Massachusetts. These nine Republicans wiped out the Republican majority of eighteen in the House by voting against the party. The majority for the bill was made up of Democratic votes. Had all the Democrats voted against the bill, the nine Republican votes that went against it would have caused the vote to break even.

The Republican leaders secured, by one vote, the adoption of a rule allowing four hours' debate on the motion to concur in all the Senate amendments. The result was the adoption by the House of a civil government bill for Porto Rico, which was not read in its entirety in the House.

The contest over the bill began with the session of Wednesday. The committee on rules brought in a rule limiting the debate to four hours and fixing the time for the final vote on the motion to concur at 5 o'clock. There was forty minutes' debate allowed on the adoption of this rule. There was bad temper evident on both sides of the chamber in the beginning, and intemperate language was used by the leaders on both sides.

The rule was then submitted and was adopted by a vote of 158 to 142. Eight Republicans voted against it. They were Littlefield, McCall, Crumpacker, Lorimer, Warner, Heatwole, Lane and H. C. Smith. Mr. Fletcher of Minnesota voted for the rule, but afterward voted against the bill. Announcement of the result was greeted with applause, and the House then settled down to the debate upon the bill. Speeches in favor of the bill were made by Messrs. Watson of Indiana, Hopkins of Illinois, Dolliver of Iowa and Chairman Payne. Its passage was opposed by Congressmen Lorimer, Warner of Illinois, Crumpacker of Indiana, McCall of Massachusetts and H. C. Smith of Michigan.

BOTHA SUCCEEDS JOUBERT.

New Commander of the Boers Is a Good Soldier.

Gen. Louis Botha, the ablest by far of the Boer generals, is the new commander-in-chief of the Boer army, succeeding the late Gen. Joubert. Botha is a brilliant soldier and an able strategist. He was at Swartkop and Spion kop when Buller crossed the Tugela. He was in front of Ladysmith and Botha was fighting with a cunning which the conservative correspondents present say was unsurpassable. He covered the zone of fire in front of his lines with English dead and wounded, and he brought off his guns and men every time a retreat or change of base was necessary.

There are many other able soldiers among the Boers. Commandant Olivier performed a brilliant feat in landing his army of 5,000 men and a wagon train, twenty-five miles long, between the British lines and the Basutoland border, without losing a gun, a wagon or a man, although the British cavalry was scouting all over in an endeavor to reach his lines and cut off his retreat. That was strategy of a high order and military critics regard the retreat as one of the most masterly on record.

Tom Kelly is another strong commander. He ranks among the first, although little heard of yet. He is in charge of the Zoutpansberg department, and has 20,000 Kaffirs under him. He is a rampant Boer agitator and as fond of fighting as a Matabele warrior.

Then there are Gens. Smet, Schalk-Burger, Delarey, Franz Joubert, son of the dead commander-in-chief, Henning Pretorius, Meyer and a host of others, all of whom have already distinguished themselves. Besides there are many French, Russian and German officers, who are able strategists and artillerists.

DECISION IS AGAINST CLARK.

Senate Committee Favors Unseating of the Montana Member.

Senator Clark of Montana was declared illegally seated in a unanimous report agreed upon by the Senate committee on privileges and elections Tuesday. The report is understood to recommend that the seat of the Montana millionaire be declared vacant, owing to the testimony submitted before the committee, showing that corruption money was employed in securing his election. The unanimous report adverse to Senator Clark, a Washington correspondent says, was a surprise, inasmuch as it was generally believed that a minority report would be delivered by Chairman Chandler and Mr. McComas of the committee, which has devoted several months to an investigation of the charges of bribery and corruption preferred against the Montana Senator by his enemy, Marcus Daly.

The committee report embraces the salient charges of corruption brought out during the investigation. It declares that Senator Clark himself admitted spending a lump sum of money to obtain his election, justifying himself on the ground that this money was employed to defeat the schemes of the "political tyrant" of Montana, Marcus Daly. The report goes into the incident relating to the attempt to bribe the Montana Legislature and State Supreme Court.

WILL BE A BIG SURPLUS.

Secretary Gage Sends Financial Statement to Congress.

Secretary of the Treasury Gage sent to the House a financial statement Tuesday in reply to the resolution asking for the estimated receipts and expenditures of the treasury in all departments, and the estimated surplus for the years ending June 30, 1900 and 1901. For the current year the estimated receipts are: Customs, $223,000,000; internal revenue, $292,000,000; miscellaneous, $35,000,000; total, $560,000,000. Expenditures: Civil, $104,000,000; war, $135,000,000; navy, $55,000,000; Indians, $11,000,000; pensions, $143,000,000; interest, $42,000,000; total, $490,000,000. Estimated surplus, $70,000,000. For the year ending June 1, 1901, the total revenues are estimated at $577,000,000 and the expenditures at $495,000,000, leaving a surplus of $82,000,000.

POOR WHEAT IN THREE STATES.

Half a Crop Expected in Ohio, Michigan and Indiana.

The April report of the statistician of the Department of Agriculture shows the average condition of winter wheat on April 1 to have been 82.1, against 77.9 on April 1, 1899, 86.7 on April 1, 1898, and a ten-year average of 82.8. While the ravages of the Hessian fly in Ohio, Michigan and Indiana will probably result in not one of these three States producing more than half a crop, an exceptionally high condition is reported from the winter wheat States west of the Mississippi river and from the Pacific coast. The principal averages are as follows:

Pennsylvania	72	Kansas	99
Ohio	47	Texas	101
Michigan	57	Oklahoma	99
Indiana	51	Washington	106
Illinois	88	Oregon	100
Missouri	91	California	90

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS, TERSELY TOLD.

Two Brothers Are Stabbed—Violence Follows War on Saloons—Farmer Found Dead in Road—Wreck Averted by a Farmer's Prompt Action.

Fred and Stephen Titus, brothers, owners of a hotel and restaurant at the union station in Peru, were murderously assaulted about 3 o'clock the other morning by two unknown men. Fred was stabbed twice in the back, the blade penetrating the kidneys and lungs, and his brother was slashed across the back, the wound being eighteen inches long. Fred will probably die, while the injuries of Stephen are not necessarily fatal. The strangers, under the influence of liquor, entered the restaurant and refused to pay, leaving the place. About 3 o'clock Fred Titus was riding a bicycle on the station platform, when he was assaulted from behind and twice stabbed. Stephen, while endeavoring to raise his brother, was also attacked.

Mob Raids a Justice's Home.

For several months a bitter antisaloon war has been waged at New Waverly, culminating when Justice Reynolds secured a writ of ejectment against Samuel McCoy, the saloonkeeper. Friends of McCoy were very angry, and at 12 o'clock on a recent night went to the home of Reynolds and partly wrecked his house with stones and clubs. Every window was broken and the doors were smashed in. Justice Reynolds and his family held the fort and were unharmed. Before the mob left a placard in red ink reading, "We Are McCoy's Friends," was tacked to the house.

Farmer Averts a Wreck.

A long trestle on the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern Railroad, fifteen miles west of Seymour, was burned, having caught fire from a cinder dropped from an engine. The fire occurred on a piece of track over which trains make very fast time. Millard F. Welddel, a farmer, discovered the fire and secured his wife's red apron, with which he flagged fast freight train No. 98, and thereby averted the loss of life and the destruction of much valuable property.

Medium Locates a Corpse.

John Coleman, a well-known Shelbyville farmer, disappeared from his home Feb. 7 and every effort was made to locate him without result. Mrs. George Ross, a medium, was consulted by the family and stated that Coleman had been drowned and designated the spot where the body could be found. Search was made and the body found. Coleman had become entangled in a seine he was using.

Farmer Takes Carbolic Acid.

The body of Elmer Myers, an 18-year-old farmer, was found near Crawfordsville on the highway. It was found within 200 yards of the home of his fiancee, Miss Alice Hendricks, whom he had promised to wed the next Sunday. The young woman says they had no quarrel and she can think of no cause for the suicide. Myers ended his life by taking carbolic acid.

The receipts of the Anderson postoffice for the year ending March 31 will fall $5,000 short of the sum required to make it a first-class office.

MY SECRET.

When first assurance came to me
That thy dear heart was mine,
I wandered forth upon the lea
Alone, lest all the world should see,
My secret so divine.

But ah, the world has passed me by,
Nor read the secret, dear;
The poor old world, so dim of eye,
So dull of ear, 'twere vain to try
To make my feelings clear,
To those who cannot know as I
Thy heart when love draws near.

A SAILOR'S LOVE.

THE Gray Eagle went on her course, parting the waves of the Indian Ocean. She was a packet steamer in the employ of a great English company, and carried many passengers. Among these, standing on the promenade deck forward and looking across the broad expanse of water before her, was a beautiful girl, in the flush of her youth and beauty.

In the wheelhouse stood a young man, second mate of the ship, looking at Mabel Vane. He was young, with a bold, manly face, curling brown hair and beard and speaking gray eyes—a man, in grace of person, manly beauty and pure heart—a man worthy of the name. He was only a sailor, and had risen to his present rank from cabin boy, but yet he dared to love the daughter of the East Indian millionaire, Arthur Vane.

He loved her and had no hope—loved her as we worship a star which is far beyond our reach. Nothing was further from his thoughts than to insult her by telling her that he loved her; but to be near her, to see her often, perhaps to do some service which would win a smile from her—that was reward enough for Will Clay.

She never dreamed of his adoration; and he had heard her say among her friends that she liked him better than any other officer on board the Gray Eagle. She said it in the careless way of girlhood, and yet he treasured it in his heart. Standing there, watching the course of the ship and ready to give a word of warning to the wheelsman if it were needed, he never took his eyes from her long.

"GO BACK, YOU FOOLS!"

"Mr. Clay," said the man at the wheel as he gave it a half turn and rested there, "don't you smell smoke?"

"It comes from the galley."

"Perhaps so, but what are they burning rosin in the galley for?"

"Rosin," cried Will, raising his head quickly and sniffing the air. He caught the peculiar smell himself and leaped down from the wheelhouse. "Keep steady," he whispered to the man at the wheel. "There may be danger, but if there is, for God's sake, keep it quiet."

The man nodded quietly and took a firmer hold on the wheel. Will Clay crossed the deck without apparent haste, and yet with a fearful fear tugging at his heart. He caught sight of the captain coming out of the gentlemen's cabin and hurried up to him.

"There is something wrong," he whispered. "Don't you smell burning rosin, captain?"

The old sea captain suppressed a cry of horror. With fifty passengers on board, in the midst of the Indian Ocean, far from land, a fire was one of the most horrible things which could come upon a ship.

"Go forward and investigate," he said, in a low tone. "If you find that it is a fire, you know what to do. How are the boats?"

"All right, sir; you may trust to them."

They had good cause for fear. The entire forehold was filled with rosin, in boxes and casks, and if a fire started there it might as well be in a nest of fat pine. Will ran down to the lower deck, where he was met by a crowd of excited firemen and coal passers, who were rushing madly on deck. Quick as thought he seized the foremost and hurled him back.

"Go back, you fools!" he cried. "Where are you running to?"

"Fire!" whispered the man hoarsely. "Fire in the forehold."

"Suppose there is. Is it your duty to rush on deck and alarm the passengers, or get buckets and try to put out the fire? Back, there, all of you, for I will brain the man who dares to flinch a hair now! Stand back, I say!"

The men cowed before his superior will and saw that they might yet do something to save the steamer.

A guard was placed at the hatch, so that no one could come down, and the scuttle which led into the forehold was opened. No sooner was this done than a dense volume of black smoke rolled out, and the scuttle was closed again, for Will saw that nothing could be done in that way. The men ran forward with axes, but had scarcely gone a dozen steps when they felt the deck tremble under their feet and saw small jets of flame shooting up through the planks. A moment more and there was a sort of explosion, and the red flames leaped up suddenly and caught the planks above.

There was no hope of concealing the danger from the passengers now, for the steamer was full of smoke, and wild cries from the deck announced that the danger was known. They must face the most terrible situation known to the sea—the one of all others the most feared—fire! Women shrieked and fainted, strong men trembled and could not move hand or foot, and others ran wildly about the decks rendering no assistance. Mabel Vane, utterly bewildered by the sudden horror, felt a strong hand clutch her arm, and saw Will Clay, blackened by smoke and singed by flame.

"Go aft!" he said, hoarsely. "Stand on the port quarter and wait for me, and I will save you or die trying. Obey me, girl; I am your master now."

She looked at him in mute wonder and obeyed him in silence. He sprang away and began to fight the fire as he could, aided by the officers and crew and some few of the passengers who kept their heads. Among these was Arthur Vane, a handsome old gentleman, with an engaging face.

"You are a man, William Clay," he said, as the two hurled the contents of a greater water cask down the open hatch. "If we ever escape the company shall know that they have a man in their employment. If we don't, it is all the same. Have you seen my daughter?"

"I sent her aft just now, and told her that I would save her or lose my life. And I'll do it, too, because I love her."

"Love her—you!"

"Just now you said I was a man," said Will quietly. "Lay hold on that cask, you. What are you shirking for? Can't we talk and work, too?"

A strange smile came over the face of the old merchant and they hurled the cask into the water and assisted the man working at the fall in raising it.

"Don't think I'm a fool, Mr. Vane," said Will. "If I lived a thousand years and saw her every day I wouldn't tell her as much as I've told you. And what's more, you wouldn't have heard me say it if it had not come out before I thought."

Mr. Vane said not a word, and Will Clay was silent. They worked hard to save the steamer, but the flames gained upon them inch by inch, and drove them aft.

"Give it up, captain," whispered Will. "Get out the boats and provision them. Take time for all you want, and we will fight the fire."

The sailors worked with a will until they saw the boats drawing up to the gangway and the passengers taking places, when they left their work, and sprang for the boats. The passengers made a rush at the same moment, but as they neared the gangway they met Will Clay, a pistol in each hand, and his eyes flashing fire.

"Stand back there!" he cried. "Do you call yourselves men? Do you want to swamp the boats, and spoil your only chance?"

"Get out of the way!" hissed a gigantic Swede, raising his heavy hand. "Out of the way or I will crush you with a single blow."

A pistol cracked and the man fell back, shot through the shoulder. The crowd recoiled before this determined young man, for even in an hour like this men fear sudden death.

"Keep back, I say!" repeated the young mate. "Pass along those ladies first, for they go in the first boat."

The order was promptly obeyed, and then six of the crew, called out by name, went into the boat and pulled it away from the gangway, under command of the first mate. Boat after boat pulled up to the gangway, received its load and pulled away. There was no more rushing, for there was death in the eyes of the young mate and the captain, who had taken his place by his side.

"My daughter is not in the boats, young man," said Arthur Vane hoarsely.

"Miss Vane," cried Will, "you can come now."

Mabel, who had been standing apart, hurried forward. Mr. Vane stepped into the boat, and the last of the crew followed. Then a panic seemed to seize them and them pushed off, leaving the captain and the mate upon the doomed steamer, as long tongues of flame leaped out toward the boat. Through this fiery barrier the two men dashed and were seen striking out for the boat.

"Stop!" cried Mr. Vane. "You have left the captain and Mr. Clay."

The men looked at him fiercely, but the steady eye of the old man awed them, and the two were helped into the boat, the captain supported by the strong arm of his gallant mate. The boats pulled away together, while the columns of flame which shot into the air announced the fate of the Gray Eagle. They reached the islands safely after a week had passed.

There is a young man who sails a steamer from London to Alexandrie, whose name is Will Clay, and he is married. The name of his wife is Mabel, for Arthur Vane, having "found a man," knew how to make him all his own.—Exchange.

NUNS WHO NEVER SPEAK.

In the heart of the Pyrenees, near the city of Bayonne, though without the range of its vision, lies secluded the strangest convent in the world, the convent of the Bernardines, followers of the patron St. Bernard. The votaries who enter there spend their lives in an unending silence contemplating death and its sequel. They never speak a word to each other or to a living soul except at confessional, and they engage themselves by digging graves and studying skulls and otherwise concentrating their minds upon the theme of death. Yet great as are the hardships they suffer they probably house more distinguished persons than any other order on the continent of Europe. There are many princesses and countesses among them, many of the royal blood. Indeed, it is believed nearly all are of high degree.

The convent migrated nearly a hundred years ago. It was started by several distinguished ladies, who, scorning the world and all of its pomps, withdrew to the solitude of the hills. With their own hands they built a few cabins, wherein the only furnishings were a board and a straw pillow for each to sleep on, and the only decorations skulls and crossbones.

The fame of these holy women spreading throughout the country, applications to join them were numerous, so that in time quite a little group of cabins was visible on the hillside. Each person entering was required to have enough of a fortune to support herself in this fashion for the rest of her days, for no bread-winning was allowed among the Bernardines. They were there to mediate, to pray, to adore and to glorify God, and to atone in some measure by excessive mortification for the sins of the world. As their only diet was bread and water the entrance fee was not exorbitant. The primitive cabins of the Bernardines yet exist and are yet occupied, although a more imposing edifice has grown up around them.

At every few steps in the convent hangs some inscription in huge black letters which contains the word "Death." It is impossible to forget for one moment one's inevitable destiny. "Are you prepared? This hour may be your last. Reflect on death" is a sample of the inscriptions. Another one that I noticed was to this effect: "That you may not sin because you have beautiful hair, cut it off. Beautiful eyes and a beautiful face have caused much sin. Detest them, and think about Death."

The nuns' cemetery is within the convent enclosures and is the favorite resort of the Bernardines. Here they promenade, praying for the dead, and at 4 o'clock every day each one digs a shovelful of earth from her own grave. As the Bernardines are vowed never to speak a word, the Servants of Mary attend to all of their necessities for them.

"SALAMANDERS."

Curious Little Rodents Found in the Southern "Piney Woods."

In many places in the extreme Southern States, especially in what are locally known as the "piney woods," one of the most notable features are the constantly recurring mounds of yellow sand which everywhere dot and, it must be confessed, disfigure the monotonous landscape, says Popular Science Monthly. These piles of earth are usually nearly circular in form, fairly symmetrical in contour, from six inches to two feet in diameter and, save where they have been beaten down by rain or winds or the trampling of cattle, about half as high as they are broad. Often these sand heaps are pretty evenly distributed, sometimes so thickly as to cover at least one-fourth of the soil surface. If you ask a native the cause of this singular phenomenon, which you will perhaps at first be disposed to consider a kind of arenaceous eruption which has somehow broken out on the face of nature, your informant will sententiously reply "Salamanders!"

All this disfigurement is, indeed, the work of a curious little rodent, popularly so named and about the size and color of an ordinary rat. He is never seen above ground if he can possibly help it. He digs innumerable branching underground tunnels at depths varying from one to six feet, and these mounds of sand are simply the "dump heads" which, in his engineering operations, he finds it necessary to make.

After carrying the excavated earth to the surface this cautious little miner takes the greatest pains to cover up his tracks. No opening into his burrow is left. How he manages to so carefully smooth over his little sand mound and then literally "pull the hole in after him," is as yet unexplained.

FIGHTING FOR HOMES

DESPERATE CONFLICT WAGED BY YAQUI INDIANS.

Mexicans' Occupation of Their Land the Casus Belli—Outbreak Believed to Be Their Last Stand—Transvaal of America Involved in Fierce Contest.

The fact that Mexico is at war with the Yaqui Indians is known by means of the newspapers, but it has no special significance to the average reader who knows little about the Yaquis or their history. This history is a romance of an unconquerable race. When Cortes landed in Mexico the Yaquis were a powerful race numbering 300,000 souls. They occupied the northwestern part of Mexico, bordering on the Gulf of California on the west, and on what is now the State of Arizona on the north. In the early days, however, the tribe spread northward into what is now Colorado. For 300 years these people have been fighting the Spanish invaders and their Mexican descendants, and never have they acknowledged a master. Reduced now to a remnant of their former strength, numbering not more than 15,000, and occupying the mining region of the State of Sonora, their spirit of independence remains unbroken, their warlike nature is unsubdued. The world does not furnish many types of fighting men more difficult to subdue than these same Yaquis. They have much the same qualities of endurance, bravery and audacity that characterize the Apaches, but are further advanced in civilization.

In the Land of Sunshine, Verona Granville gives an account of a recent visit to the home of the Yaqui Indians in the State of Sonora, Mexico. The writer was surprised to find this people well dressed and up to date in their cooking utensils, agricultural implements and weapons. "A fine modern rifle stood in the corner of the first house I entered. All the family wore shoes, and the mother and three little girls wore neat, lace-trimmed calico dresses. They had just come from church, it being Sunday. Though we were invited to dine with the family, we declined, as our time was limited in the village. Many other huts were visited, and all were far cleaner and their occupants more intelligent than I had been led to expect from my reading about the Yaquis. Both men and women are above the average Mexican height. Many are extremely tall and all well proportioned. Their features are pleasing, their eyes large and piercing, their noses straight, and their teeth white as ivory. The carriage of a Yaqui woman would fire the heart of a Delsartean with unquenchable envy, so tall, so straight, so well poised is the entire figure, especially when the olla is placed on the head on returning from the well or river. The constant carrying of burdens on the head preserves an erect position of the torso, and the act of walking is performed from the waist downward—a method employed by the Greeks for beautifying the human form divine.

"The Yaquis are the backbone of the population of Sonora. They are the best workmen in the republic, commanding from ten to twenty per cent higher wages in many localities than Mexican or other Indian labor. There is not a lazy bone in the Yaqui body. They are a peaceable, law-abiding people when justly treated. From time immemorial they have been hunters, miners and tillers of the soil. They have the nomad instinct in less degree than almost any other Indian tribe."

Nevertheless the Yaquis have a record for fighting, as the Mexican authorities know to their sorrow.

"When oppressed they have simply risen to redress their wrongs. In their mountain fastness they could no more be conquered than the Scotsmen before the battle of Bannockburn. The Government at last recognized the futility of continuing the struggle to conquer them, and at the invitation of President Diaz, the old chief of the Yaquis, Tetablate, visited the City of Mexico, where the terms of a treaty of peace were agreed to. The signing of the treaty took place at Ortiz, a military station near Guaymas. It was an impressive sight, with hundreds of Indians, all carrying white flags, bearing the word paz (peace), surrounding the old chief and Col. Peinado. Tetablate gave his word that the life and property of all Mexicans and foreigners should be held sacred within his domain, and that he and his people would uphold and obey the laws of the republic. Col. Peinado promised on the part of the Government that certain lands claimed by the Indians should be theirs absolutely, to hold or to sell, and that they should be granted all the rights held by the Mexicans. The treaty was never violated by Tetablate, and he caused to be shot several Indians who killed an American prospector in the Sierra Madre near the Rio Aros."

The Yaquis excel the Mexicans in the mechanical arts, in carpentry, in mining, in working in metals, in weaving, in industry and in perseverence. They cultivate the soil and do most of the mining in a country which is rich in mineral wealth and which formerly belonged to the fathers of the Yaquis and which the Yaquis believe is rightfully their own at this day. They work for a mere pitance, about $2 a month, and work hard. They make no complaint on that score, but the oppressive taxes which the Mexican Government imposes upon them and the sovereignty which Mexico assumes are intolerable.

Cause of the Outbreak.

The present outbreak was brought about in the usual way. The Mexicans violated the treaty made with Tetablate and encroached upon Yaqui land. Immediately the Yaquis were in arms. The fighting blood which centuries of warfare and oppression have been powerless to cool, boiled under the sense of wrong. The Yaquis took the field. Several engagements have been fought. Chief Tetablate was killed, but his followers were only fired to avenge his death. Hundreds of Mexican soldiers have gone down before the Yaqui fire. Mexico realizes that the uprising is serious and it is making strenuous exertions to meet the crisis. The war on the part of the Indians has been conducted with marked ability and splendid dash and courage. The Yaquis have some idea of military combinations. To the cunning and daring of the Apaches they add the self-control and cool judgment which association with the whites and something approaching civilized modes of living have developed.

The Indians inflicted a terrible blow upon the Mexican forces near Guaymas, recently, killing 300 Mexicans and very nearly capturing the post itself. The latter disaster to Mexican arms was only averted by the assistance given the land forces by the navy.

This engagement assumed the proportions and characteristics of a battle and gave Mexico an idea of the gravity of the situation which it is facing. But the Yaquis had powerful allies. The cowboys of Arizona have an inveterate hatred of the "Greaser," and esteem it a special privilege when fortune puts it in their way to legitimately kill one of the obnoxious race. And the cowboy is liberal in construing the meaning of the term legitimate. Moreover, the cowpunchers dearly love a fight for its own sake, and when the Yaqui rebellion presented the opportunity not only for a fight but for a chance to get a shot at the hereditary enemy, numbers of the cowboys crossed the border and joined the Indian forces.

How much of the success of the Yaquis is due to the organizing ability and strategic skill of their white supporters cannot be known, but the tactics pursued by the Yaquis at Guaymas suggest a directing intelligence familiar with elementary military science at least. It is probable that some of the Rough Riders are with the Yaquis, putting into practice some of the things they learned about war in Cuba. Doubtless by means of the same influence the Yaquis came into possession of a Maxim gun, which was shipped into the mines in sections under the guise of a new style of mining drill. This engine of destruction was set up and it is said the Yaquis' natural talent for mechanics enabled them readily to master the gun's action and mechanical principles.

At all events, when Gen. Torres with 6,000 Mexican troops moved out of Guaymas to attack the rebels, he was treated to a disagreeable surprise. He had declared that he would end Yaqui rebellions once and for all by the simple process of extermination. With the forces at his command he could, he alleged, drive the Indians into a corner and then annihilate the tribe root and branch. But when Torres came upon the enemy he was himself glad to escape annihilation. He won the battle, it is true, but only by the aid of a naval landing party after the Mexican general was pretty nearly whipped out of his boots.

Contrary to all principles and practices in Indian warfare, the Yaquis were entrenched, and as the Mexicans advanced they were met by a murderous fire from the Maxim supported by modern rifles. The shock of the surprise and the mortality among the troops demoralized Torres' invincible army, which retreated precipitately upon the river, where the gunboat lay. Again the Mexicans charged, and again they were driven back by the destructive fire. The gunboat moved into position to bring its guns to bear upon the entrenched Yaquis, but the Maxim soon put the boat out of the fight, and it drifted helplessly down stream until it grounded on the hither bank.

The Final Struggle.

This temporary triumph proved the undoing of the Yaquis, as when the gunboat ran upon the bank a party was landed and making a wide detour flanked the entrenchments. Unable to bring the Maxim to bear on two points at once, the assailed in front and flank, the Yaquis were forced to retire into the mountains. They executed this movement slowly and in good order, saving their machine gun for future use. When the smoke of battle lifted 300 dead Mexicans were found upon the field. The Yaquis lost heavily also, but not so heavily as the assaulting column.

The battle of Guaymas has taught the Mexican Government what to expect. The extermination of the Yaquis for resenting Mexican aggression and breach of faith promises to be a herculean task.

BATTLE BETWEEN YAQUIS AND MEXICANS.

Has Lost Faith in Booker T.

Not long ago, when Booker T. Washington was in Chicago, he stopped for a day at one of the hotels. He was pointed out to William, an old waiter who has been at the hotel for a long time. William was delighted to get a glimpse of the great man of his race, and was never tired of telling about it after that. One of the regular boarders is a stanch friend of William and a liberal tipper.

"William," said the boarder next morning, putting on a serious face, "I met Mr. Washington yesterday and I asked him what he thought of tipping. He is opposed to it."

The boarder stood with his hand insinuatingly in his change pocket. William's face fell and settled into despairing gloom.

"Well, boss," the waiter said, shaking his head emphatically, "if dat is de poisihun ob Mistah Washington I'se unal'ably opposed to it."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

SERMONS OF THE WEEK

Faith.—Faith finds its natural expression in works, hence the injunction that "faith without works is dead."—Rev. F. M. Bristol, Methodist, Washington, D. C.

Sin.—Sin is the prolific cause of all the misery in this world, and the sovereign remedy is its complete removal.—Rev. N. Woodside, Presbyterian, Pittsburg, Pa.

God's Children.—We are God's children. The throne of grace is open to our pleading. Rich and inexhaustible stores of blessing are prepared for us.—Rev. O. C. Peyton, Maryville, Tenn.

The Wicked.—The wicked are allowed to live in order that our forbearance may be exercised toward them and our loving kindness made manifest.—Rev. Dr. Holderby, Presbyterian, Atlanta, Ga.

Self-Assertiveness.—The surrender of self-assertiveness leads to an experience more manifestly divine than any we have known before.—Rev. Dr. Raymond, Congregationalist, Schenectady, N. Y.

Christians.—Christians, who are God's jewels, were made of great value to God and to the world in which they live by being refined in God's furnace.—Rev. Dr. Landrum, Baptist, Atlanta, Ga.

Kindness.—We must understand that kindness is not a weak, sentimental emotion, but a strong, heroic principle, always bent on doing good unto others.—Rev. J. R. Henry, Presbyterian, Pittsburg, Pa.

Keep Pace.—Shall we not with sublime courage keep pace with the march of good manifest to-day? Alas for him who looks mournfully into the future.—William G. Ewing, Christian Scientist, Chicago, Ill.

The Church.—The church shall have life and it shall grow. Growth is life, and the growth of the church is the natural result of the life which Christ has given it.—Rev. P. C. Yorke, B. C., San Francisco, Cal.

Immortality.—Our glimpses of immortality come out of things visible. There are certain suggestions which take tangible shape which tend to prove immortality.—Rev. George P. Perry, Baptist, Troy, N. Y.

Indifference.—Arouse yourselves from the lethargy of indifference and be earnest in the fight for good. Insist that the public billboards shall be decently clothed.—Rev. Dr. Frohock, Methodist, Akron, Ohio.

Reform Society.—The only way to reform society is to reform the individual. Slavery has been lessened, but the sweatshop remains, and politics is not free from corruption.—Rabbi Krauskopf, Hebrew, Philadelphia, Pa.

Higher Civilization.—The people of Great Britain have ever been imbued with the idea of their mission to establish the higher civilization, and they have pushed on with confidence.—Rev. Dr. Carson, Presbyterian, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Bible.—The Bible presents a great combination. It is the union of Christ with the believer. By that union we become partners with Christ in the great divine "trust" for the glory of God.—Rev. C. F. Wishart, Presbyterian, Allegheny, Pa.

Inconsistent.—In religion, as in most matters, we are strangely inconsistent. We run to one or both of two extremes—we are often very particular about minor matters and utterly careless about some great things.—Rev. N. H. Lee, Methodist, Denver, Col.

In God's Hands.—We have no right to do as we like with anything, unless we like to do right. No man's life or death is at his own disposal. Our times are in God's hands. This is good morals, good law and good sense.—Rev. Ira Billman, Evansville, Ind.

War.—The war spirit has transformed Christianity. Jesus Christ proclaimed himself the Prince of Peace and on earth established the kingdom of peace. Christianity in its pristine purity was peace itself.—Rev. Dr. Wylie, Presbyterian, New York City.

Christ's Purpose.—Christ proposed to conquer the selfishness and hate and cruelty of the world with the simple principle of love, and, thank God, he is doing it. Since his advent into the world all changes have been improvements.—Rev. J. R. Fisher, Presbyterian, Newark, N. J.

Hope of the Church.—The hope of the church of the future is in the children. The church which best pleases Christ and which does most for his kingdom is the one which seeks to win for Christ every child in the parish. It is not enough that we look well after the children of our own families and homes. There are many homes in which nothing is done to save the children in them from the world.—Rev. J. R. Miller, Presbyterian, Philadelphia, Pa.

Problems.

"Henry," said the master of the house to the cook, "I heard a bass voice in the kitchen last evening!"

"My sister, sir!" replied the cook in some confusion.

"No, Henry, I believe it was the policewoman on the beat!" said the master severely.

More social permutations, albeit the Chicago custom of hiring men to do the housework becomes universal, may not be expected to obliterate such problems as find their elements in the human nature inherent.—Detroit Journal.

The Queen's Joke.

It is well known that the republicanism of Sir Charles Dilke, an English politician, is a matter of some grief to Queen Victoria, who was a friend of his father, and knew Sir Charles well as a small boy.

"How often," said the Queen, not long ago, "have I held that boy on my lap, and stroked his hair with affection!"

And then she added, with a smile, "Dear me! I must have rubbed it the wrong way!"

Fortune favors those who work as if they expected to succeed without it.

For Congress

I hereby announce my name as a candidate for congress of the Twelfth congressional district, subject to decision of the democratcic congressional convention.

SAMUEL M. HENCH.
Fort Wayne, Ind., Feb. 12, 1900

The Congressional Convention.

This will be held in Fort Wayne next Tuesday, April 24, and Hon. James M. Robinson will be re-nominated without any opposition. We believe this to be a wise course. We have always advocated keeping a good man there till he learns his trade and can be of still more use to his people. Mr. Robinson has proved himself faithful, and has labored all the year for his people, and for nothing else. He quit a good law practice when he started in on his first term, and has never resumed it, devoting all the vacations of congress to going among the people to learn their wishes. This course was to have been expected of him, as he is one of the people himself. Born in humble conditions, the son of a veteran who had lost health and strength in the service of his country, Mr. Robinson was a poor boy, and without means till his own hands earned it. He knew the pinchings of povetry and its struggles. He is still a worker—working for those who have put their confidence in him, and have given him a position in which he may serve them. These are a few of the many things that have endeared Mr. Robinson to the people, and for which they trust him and will stand by him. All the delegates of the district as far as we have heard are for him. Caucuses have not been packed, but the people have met and chosen their delegates without a struggle for or against anyone. The result has been Robinson men because all were for him. Allen county will no doubt place him in nomination; DeKalb will no doubt second his nomination. The other counties will follow, It will be a unanimous love feast. Mr. Robinson will come home at that time and be present to make a speech and meet and greet the people. And we have not the least doubt but he will be triumphantly elected.

Township Caucus.

The democratic township caucus was held here in the Kiblinger building Saturday, April 14, with a fair attendance. M. Boland was chosen chairman and Harry Trentman secretary. The chief business was the election of delegates to the several conventions. The following are the lists.

News from Angola.

SPECIAL TO THE COURIER.

The wife of Chas. A. Yotter, of the law firm of Best, Bratton & Yotter, died Sunday morning, after a long illness with consumption. The deceased was formerly Miss Gussie Best, a niece of Hon. D. R Best, and was about thirty-three years of age. She was a graduate of the Tri-State Normal College at Angola and prior to her marriage to Mr. Yotter had been very successful as a teacher, filling positions at Hicksville, Huntington and Minneapolis. She leaves a husband and little baby daughter, beside a large circle of relatives and friends. The funeral will be held at the M. E. church in Angola Tuesday at 2 o'clock.

The L. L. C. Annual.

All the annual L L C. meetings have been models of their kind and highly appreciated by those fortunate enough to be present. That of last evening, which was their eighteenth, was no exception. There were present including guests, something near fifty, all gathering in Mrs. Swineford's spacious private rooms in the hotel where they were received and entertained until all had arrived. Mrs. Ed Robbins sang two sweet solos to piano accompaniment by Mrs. Garwood, both to the delight of their hearers. Then Mrs. Swsnefsod announced the supper ready and all repaired to the spacious dining room and seated themselves at the numerous tables. It was an inspiring sight to see such a large company of congenial spirits. Then a brief and eloquent blessing was offered by Rev. T. M. Guild, and the serious business of the banquet was in order. The Swineford is noted for its tact and taste in this line, and the eighteenth L. L. C banquet was no exception. It was in five courses and at the close came responses to various toasts. The first was by James H. Rose, and was both sensible and witty. Mr. Guild spoke on the relations of club work and church, and gave a high compliment to club woman as an auxiliary in the field of Christian workers. It was an able little speech. Miss Nellie Buckley was the third speaker called and responded in a neat little address nicely given. Dr. Lida Leasure of Angola was called on and made the wittiest speech of the evening, and a very eloquent one as well. She is now an honorary member. Her former connection with the club and the meeting with so many old-time neighbors gave her inspiration, and she spoke eloquently and feelingly. Mrs. Geo. Schaab responded briefly, and several others were called on, who excused themselves in good natured terms. All agree that it was an enjoyable gathering.

Among the guests from abroad were: Mrs. M. E Olds, St Joe; Mrs. Klotz, VanWert: Dr. Lida Leasure, Angola; Mrs. Juliette Dickinson, Mrs. E. P. Dickinson, Mrs. B. B. Long, Mrs. Craig Day, Mrs. Herman Boozer and Mrs. F. W. Willis of Waterloo. All the Waterloo ladies except the first named came over in a closed carriage, giving them comfort and safety from the bad weather.

Like Velvet.

Our readers will be interested in knowing there is one medicine sold by the druggist, H. B. McCord, that possesses unusual merit. Krause's Little Liver Pills. They are a small, purely vegetable, gelatine coated pill, acting directly on the liver and bile without the irritation and griping common to most pills. They are gentle and natural in their action, as soft as velvet to all tender surfaces and a positive unfailing cure for Billiousness and Constipation. H. B. McCord.

The Reception.

There was a very large attendance at the lecture room of the M. E. church at the reception given Rev. T. M. Guild and wife last evening. It was a general outpouring of the people of all denominations, the M. E. folks of course predominating. The reception itself was held in the lecture room, which is quite large, the seats having been removed. The evening was spent in an unconventional way, and at convenient times, small processions filed down into the basement. Here they were treated to delicious cake and lemon sherbet; and had another good visit. Altogether it was one of the most enjoyable gatherings we have had. Mr. and Mrs. Guild no doubt felt gratified to receive such an ovation from friends and neighbors and were made to realize that their labors here had been appreciated.

A Testimonial from England.

"I consider Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the best in the world for bronchitis," says Mr. Wm. Savory of Warrington, England. "I has saved my wife's life, she having been a martyr to bronchitis for over six years, being most of the time confined to her bed. She is now quite well. Sold by H. B. McCord.

Joseph Cullers Dead.

Joseph Cullers, a well-known citzen of Auburn, died this morning. Some time ago Mr. Cullers was attacked by grip, which developed into typhoid fever, and for several days it was evident that his recovery was extremely doubtful. Mr. Cullers was a veteran of the civil war and a membr of the G. A. R., and the funeral services will be held at the house Wednesday at 2 o'clock, under the auspices of DeLong Post, of which he was a member. Rev. Markley will conduct the services, and interment will be in Woodlawn cemetery.

OBITUARY.

George W. Stahl was born in Pennsylvania, September 6, 1821; and died at Auburn, Indiana, April 13, 1900, aged 78 years, 7 months and 8 days. In early manhood Mr. Stahl moved to Ashland, Ohio, where he was united in marriage to Miss Nancy A. Carr, April 20, 1848. Mr. and Mrs. Stahl were the parents of two sons and five daughters, all of whom survive them. Early in 1851 Mr. Stahl bought the lot on which the family residence now stands. He cleared the ground and erected what was then one of the finest buildings in the county. Since the death of Mrs. Stahl, which occurred twelve years ago, he has made his home with the family of his daughter, Mrs. T. J. Cuppy, who with her husband and children have given him the care of affectionate hearts and willing hands.

In the death of Mr. Stahl, this community has lost one of its most exemplary and valued citizens. His life has been characterized by strict integrity, unceasing industry and genial kindness. The latter quality made his companionship eagerly sought, by a large number of acquaintances and friends. In a private conversation with a personal friend, some months ago, he said, "I am a firm believer in the doctrines of the christian religion, and trust in the Lord Jesus Christ for eternal salvation." His last illness was alleviated by the loving attention of numerous friends, including his daughters, Mrs. Urie and Mrs. Oakes.

The closing hours were calm and apparently painless. Of Mr. Stahl it may be said: He came to his grave at a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in its season. He was a good man, in life beloved, in death sincerely mourned.

The funeral services were held at the house Monday at 2 o'clock, Rev. Arlen officiating, assisted by Rev. Guild and Mrs. Mary Ehlers. There was a large attendance, including a number of the older residents of the town. The interment was in Evergreen cemetery.

Best Remedy for Rheumatism.

Quick relief from pain. All who use Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism are delighted with the quick relief from pain which it affords. When speaking of this Mr. D. N. Sinks of Troy, Ohio, says: "Some time ago I had a severe attack of rheumatism in my arm and shoulder. I tried numerous remedies, but got no relief until I was recommended by Messrs. Geo. F. Parsons & Co., druggists of this place, to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. They recommended it so highly that I bought a bottle. I was soon relieved of all pain. I have since recommended this liniment to many of my friends, who agree that it is the best remedy for muscular rheumatism in the market." For sale by H. B. McCord.

OBITUARY.

Alexander Davis was born in Wayne county, Ohio, March 27, 1849: died in Jackson township, DeKalb county, April 4, 1900. He was united in marriage to Lorena B, Smith January 11, 1877. In 1882 he became a member of the United Brethren church, being a faithful member and has remained in this relation with the church until the present time. While he has been a great sufferer for the last three years with that dreadful disease, cancer, he bore his affliction with a cheerful heart and a bright hope of reaching that land where there will be no suffering. He was a good husband, and an obliging neighbor. He leaves a companion, one brother and a host of friends to mourn their loss.

Funeral services were held at the Hopewell church, conducted by Rev. J. D. Snyder; interment at the Woodlawn cemetery at Auburn.

CARD OF THANKS.

We are requested by Mrs. Davis to return to her neighbors and friends, her sincere thanks for the favors and kind assistance rendered during the sickness and following the death of her husband.

NOTICE.

We, the undersigned, do hereby agree to refund the money on a 50 bottle of Downs' Elixir if it does not cure any cough, cold, croup, whooping cough or throat trouble. We also guarantee Downs' Elixir to cure consumption, when used according to directions, or money back. A full dose on going to bed and small doses during the day will cure the most severe cold and stop the most distressing cough. E. M. FISCHLER, F. E. DAVENPORT, HOWARD MCCORD.

Surprised.

April 12, 1900, a few of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. William Ludwig came in and announced to her that it was her birthday anniversary, bringing basket dinner, well gotten up and enjoyed by all there. As the time to adjourn came a fine rocking chair was brought in and presented to her. Then each one went away feeling it was good to be there.—ONE WHO WAS THERE.

A Surprise Dinner.

Anyone may find pleasure in writing a few lines about a school in which parents, teacher and children have so faithfully labored together during the past winter. Tuesday morning, April 10, the teacher at District No. 4, Fairfield township, called his school to order at the usual hour and commenced his daily work for the last day of the term. The children having brought empty dinner pails to school, so as to prevent their teacher from mistrusting that part of the program, were thinking more about the dinner than about their lessons, I fear. The lessons were very well learned, however, considering the circumstances. At about 11:30 a. m. a knock at the door attracted the teacher's attention from his absorbing work. He stepped to the door and on opening it, to his surprise, found the patrons of the district ready to enter. In a somewhat embarrassed and nervous manner, he said "Come in." They entered and seated themselves as best they could. The teacher soon understood it all and then proceeded with his work. The seats being somewhat crowded made it inconvenient for him to continue his classes, but he managed to hear all recite by having some stand on the floor. At noon the school was dismissed for dinner. A large table was set and the baskets of refreshments were brought in. Soon the table was loaded with a splendid dinner. A grander repast is not seen at the wedding of the king's daughter. After about a hundred had eaten, the table was cleared; preparations were made for the afternoon program which consisted of declamations, debates, instrumental and vocal music. The teacher, Homer Martin, now delivered an eloquent speech tending to teach the beauty of charity, character and higher life. J. H. Reincehl then made a few remarks, followed by a very impressive speech by Isaiah Wert.

The term's work has been such a decided success that it has gratified his people, for he has endeared himself to his community in general. It is a compliment to a deserving, hard-working and capable young teacher; one who has always done his duty carefully and conscientiously. A deeper interest has been excited among the patrons of the district than they have ever before felt. May the time soon come when such a loving relation between schools and parents may exist all over our land.

No Right To Ugliness.

The woman who is lovely in face, form and temper will always have friends, but one who would be attractive must keep her health. If she is weak, sickly and all run down, she will be nervous and irritable. If she has constipation or kidney trouble, her impure blood will cause pimples, skin eruptions and wretched complexion. Electric Bitters is the best medicine in the world to regulate the stomach, liver and kidneys and to purify the blood. It gives strong nreves, bright eyes, smooth velvety skin, rich complexion. It will make a good-looking, charming, woman of a run-down invalid. Only 50 cents at H. B. McCord's Drug Store.

A Biography.

Joseph Sewell, Sr., was born in Dorman township, Tuscarawas county, Ohio, on the 18th of May, 1827. My parents moved from there to Perry township, in said county when I was about one year old, and from there to Clay township, in said county when I was about ten years old, all in said county, Ohio. My occupation has been farming. I was married in the year 1848, to Merica Anne Pharis, in Clay township in said county, Ohio, on the 3rd day of February. We moved to Defiance county, Ohio, starting on the 14th day of October, and landed on Mudcreek, in Delaware township on the 1st day of November. I shall never forget that trip; we had to stay all night and nearly two nights in the black swamp. It rained nearly all the way—then the tug of war commenced. I entered 80 acres of land in Delaware township in section eleven, which was very heavily timbered, and one mile and a half from any house and no roads. I had to blaze the way to get to it. I went to work and cleared up 10 acres on that section, then I sold out and bought 90 acres in Washington township in said county, and cleared 54 acres of heavy timbered land. To us were born eight children, four boys and four girls. Mother was killed by a train at Butler, Ind., November 11, 1879, and four of the children, two boys and two girls have died since. I lived in Washington township about seventeen years, and in that time I have held the following offices: I was elected trustee of Washington township, said county, eight different times; assessor ten different times; supervisor, six different times; school director, twelve different times; was a member of the board of education the same length of time, and I was elected one of the commissioners of Defiance county for two terms. I moved to DeKalb county, Franklin township, Ind., April 24, 1871, and since then I have held several offices. I was elected trustee for one term, supervisor several times, director several times, county commissioner one term. I moved from Franklin township to Hamilton, Steuben county, Indiana, May 17, 1894. I was married to Maria E. Greenwood Jan. 20, 1881, who died August 31, 1898

BUTLER.

The first of April changes have been many. Removals into town and removals out of town and moving from place to place in town nearly confuses us.

Mrs Clark Brown is being slowly restored to health again.

Jacob Showalter is slowly improving, but is still poorly

The deliberate suicide of Martin Reese, son of George Reese, last week was an unusual occurrence. He was of unsound mind and seemed to have an idea of self murder fastened on his mind. His father was attending his duties about the Wabash depot when Martin came to him. His father requested him to go home and look after the dinner, they being alone. He said he wanted to go to the coal-dock first. His father seemed to have some premonition of danger and watched him, and saw him from some little distance mount the ladder leading to the roof of the great water tank of the Wabash roof raise the trap door in its roof and deliberately plunge into its icy depths. He hastened with all speed to the scene, but found him lifeless when he reached him. Much difficulty was experienced in removing the body from the tank, as its only opening is the small trap-door on top. It has been only a few weeks since his brother, a bright young man of about seventeen, was scalded to death in a a vat at the basket factory; hence much sympathy is felt for his parents.

Arthur Aldrich, one of the best hotel men in Northern Indiana, is very sick with heart trouble, and but slight hopes exist for his recovery.

Rev, Frech has been returned to the Butler station to the great satisfaction of his many friends. He is at this writing confined to his bed by illness, with his wife at the bedside of his sick mother at Decatur, Indiana.

M. F. Campbell and wife have been visiting her parents in Fort Wayne. He visited Churubusco and Columbia on business on his way there.

Caught a Dreadful Cold.

Marion Kooke, manager for T. M. Thompson, a large importer of fine millinery at 1,658 Milwaukee Avenue, Chicago, says: "During the late severe weather I caught a dreadful cold which kept me awake at night and made me unfit to attend my work during the day. One of my milliners was taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a severe cold at that time, which relieved her so quickly that I bought some for myself. It acted like magic and I began to improve at once. I am now entirely well and feel very pleased to acknowledge its merits." For sale by H. B. McCord.

Dyspepsia Relieved At Once

DR. STONE UPSETS ALL THEORIES.

This Celebrated Specialist in Diseases of the Stomach and Bowels Makes Some Positive Statements, the Truth of Which Any Sufferer from Stomach Trouble Can Prove For Himself in Twenty-Four Hours.

It is doubtful if there is any authority better qualified to speak on the subject of stomach or liver troubles than Dr. Sylvester Stone. For thirty years he has made a study of these diseases. Men of this standing do not speak hastily, and so when Dr. Stone makes the statement that most cases of dyspepsia can be relieved at once we are obliged to credit it. Dr. Stone's common-sense argument is this: That most of the stomach troubles are not diseases at all; the stomach is sound, its functions only are impaired. He also contends that most liver troubles are derangements of the functions of that organ which are brought about by disordered digestion. That is, the work of the stomach and liver are so closely united that the disturbance of one always disturbs the other. Any person who has suffered, maybe for years, from all the distressing symptoms of dyspepsia or indigestion may find it hard to believe that all this suffering might easily have been escaped; that they could have been promptly cured at any time. But Dr. Stone says they could, and what is more, he proves it.

Now take this list of symptoms of dyspepsia, you perhaps are familiar with all of them: Waterbrash, heartburn, palpitation of the heart, belching of food, bad breath, furred tongue, distress after eating, frequent headaches, dullness of mind, melancholy, dizziness, poor circulation, loss of appetite and bowel and liver trouble. Every one of these symptoms can be caused by disordered digestion. They do not indicate that the stomach is diseased at all. If no disease, the minute you overcome the derangement of function you give relief. Here is the secret of Dr. Stone's surprising success. He knows just what help is needed to put the digestive system in proper adjustment. He has been able to prepare a remedy that relieves at once, and every bit of the relief is part of a permanent cure. Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure consists of two prescriptions, both compound in tablet form and both put up in one package. One of these tablets regulates the liver, and the results from their use are truly remarkable.

A TYPICAL CASE.

Results are practically alike in all cases. We select our typical case as an example of all others. Mr. Jacob Zook is a pioneer and influential citizen of Elkhart, Ind. He is superintendant of the pattern department of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railway. Mr. Zook authorized the publication of the following open letter in the paper of his own town, with a view to making the merits of this remedy known to his friends.

The Stone Drug Co.

Gentlemen:—I have been afflicted for years with dyspepsia and have tried a number of so-called dyspepsia cures, but have only received temporary relief until I tried Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure, which I consider far superior to any other, and believe it a permanent cure.

JACOB ZOOK.

Elkhart, Ind., Nov. 28, 1898.

You need not suffer one day longer from stomach and liver troubles. Long standing cases will yield slowest, but every case will show early improvement. You are apt to feel like a new person after a few days' treatment. It is for you to choose whether you will suffer longer. You take no risk whatever in trying the remedy, for it is absolutely guaranteed. Every druggist who sells it is authorized to refund the money to any one who fails to receive the proper benefit. Price of the complete double treatment, 50 cents.

TRACK IS NOT CLEAR.

THERE WILL BE REPUBLICAN OPPOSITION TO M'KINLEY.

The Load of His Failures and Blunders Has Become So Heavy as to Scare Many Prominent Leaders of the Republican Party.

Washington correspondence:

There will be Republican opposition to McKinley's renomination. The load of his failures and blunders has become so heavy as to scare many of the prominent leaders of the party into a belief that his renomination would lead to an inevitable and overwhelming defeat next November. The Democrats hope and pray for McKinley's renomination. They want the campaign to be fought squarely upon the issues which McKinley has made. They may be briefly summarized as follows:

Subserviency to trusts and corporations; the establishment of the single gold standard and the perpetuation of the national debt in the interest of the national banks; imperialism and militarism, as typified in the attempt at seizure of the Philippine Islands and the placing of the military above the civil authority in Idaho; the continuation of the war taxes in order to furnish funds for gross extravagance and reckless expenditure; bad faith and broken national honor in dealing with Porto Rico; an extreme pro-British attitude not only as against the Boers, but also in connection with the Nicaraguan Canal treaty, the Alaskan boundary question, and every other issue between Great Britain and the United States.

The revolt against McKinley has not yet crystallized, but the initial steps are being handled with great shrewdness. It looks as though an attempt will be made to bring enough "favorite sons" into the convention to prevent McKinley's nomination on the first ballot and then to hold him down until a union can be effected upon some strong candidate. This is a favorite scheme of Republican national politics. It defeated Seward in 1860, Blaine in 1876, Grant in 1880, and Sherman in 1888.

The names which are to be brought forward are those of Governor Roosevetl of New York and ex-President Harrison of Indiana. The dark horses are to be ex-Speaker Reed, now a resident of New York; Senator Allison, of Iowa; and Senator Davis, of Minnesota. Senator Proctor, in alliance with the old Reed strength of New England, is relied upon to control the delegates of that section. Roosevelt and Platt can control New York, Quay still holds Pennsylvania, and is bitter at McKinley for the latter's evident desire to keep him out of the Senate. Harrison's friends can easily control Indiana, Allison Iowa, Davis Minnesota, while local interests and influences can be relied upon to make a fight in several other States.

In Texas and Tennessee headway has already been made against McKinley. The severest blow so far visible to the public eye comes in the resignation of Assistant Secretary Davis, of the Interior Department, who has just returned from South Africa and resigned his office in order to make a campaign of sympathy in behalf of the Boer republics. The administration's notorious pro-British attitude compelled him to this course. Mr. Davis is one of the most notable orators in the Republican party. He and his friends expect to be able to control the Missouri delegation in behalf of his candidacy for the Republican Vice Presidential nomination. It is obvious that Mr. Davis, with his pro-Boer sentiments, does not expect to be on a ticket headed by Mr. McKinley, with his strong pro-British sentiments.

Republicans in a Hole.

The chances are at present against McKinley's overthrow. Hanna has too powerful a grip on the party machinery and is in command of too large a corruption fund to permit the better element of the Republican party to have a voice in the convention. But there will be a bitter fight and feelings will be aroused which the ensuing campaign will not be able to allay. It makes no difference who is at the head of the Republican ticket, the country will hold the party responsible for the administration's blunders.

The passage by the Senate of the Foraker Porto Rican bill, with substantially the House tariff proposition attached as a rider, has caused several difficult questions to be put to the Republican majority. They are asked first and foremost, What has become of the President's declaration that it was our "plain duty" to give Porto Rico free trade with the United States. Senator Foraker said that the trusts would be the principal beneficiaries of free trade. Putting aside the obvious inference that McKinley is declared by his own party leader to be in favor of trusts, why then, should Senator Foraker have provided for free trade at the end of two years? The Republicans advanced the argument that the necessities of the starving inhabitants of Porto Rico made the passage of the bill necessary. Yet Senator Davis pertinently asked how it was that taxing both the products and food supplies of these starving inhabitants relieved their starvation.

Perhaps the most difficult question for the Republicans to answer is why Secretary Root, who was conspicuously an advocate of free trade with Porto Rico and who ordered his law clerk, Judge Magoon, to prepare an elaborate opinion to prove that the Constitution extended of its own strength over Porto Rico, should suddenly order the suppression of that lengthy opinion and order him to prepare another one taking the diametrically opposite view. Both opinions are now public, although strenuous efforts were made to suppress the former, which is undeniably the abler argument.

The Republicans had great difficulty in putting the Porto Rican tariff bill through the House a few weeks ago. That difficulty promises to be greatly increased over the Foraker bill. The House Republicans have been hearing from their constituents in an unpleasant way, and some fifty of them have felt impelled thereby to go home and attempt to fix up their fences. Aside from the increasing reluctance of many more Republicans to support the tariff a second time, it is going to be very hard work to bring enough of them back to Washington to vote even if a majority can be commanded for this thoroughly unpopular measure.

Squandering the People's Money.

The books of the treasury show that there has been received during the past forty years from bonds and other evidences of indebtedness, aside from the cost of issuing the same, the sum of $17,343,641,793.78. We have expended upon these bonds more than we have received from the bonds, the sum of $951,664,661.10. We have practically paid none of the indebtedness, although we have paid out $1,000,000,000 more than we have received. It would cost us to-day as much money to redeem our indebtedness as it would have cost us in 1866, when our indebtedness was at its highest point. We owe as much as we did then, when the cost of redeeming the bonds is considered, and yet we have already paid 56 per cent. more than the entire debt.

It is very difficult to determine the cost of issuing bonds and other evidences of indebtedness, but this was made the subject of an extended investigation by Secretary of the Treasury Lyman J. Gage, who states in his last report that the cost from the start has averaged 1 per cent.

If this is correct, and there is no reason to doubt it, there has been charged up to the ordinary expenses of government $85,935,002, which should have been charged to the expenses of the public debt. This must be added to the $951,000,000 named above.

This shows by the face of the treasury books that the excess of payments and the face of the indebtedness now outstanding is $3,025,504,099.02 more than we ever received from our bonded or other evidences of indebtedness.

The books of the Treasury Department show that $2,117,744,876 of bonds were sold for greenbacks which were worth at that time $1,612,908,202 and were subsequently redeemed in gold. This reduces the amount actually received for the bonds by the sum of $504,836,673. This must be added to the cost of the loans, which makes the net loss up to date over and above the amount received from the bonds and other evidences of indebtedness amount to $3,530,430,772.02. — Congressman Maddox of Georgia.

Cause for Rejoicing.

From various sources it was our privilege the other day to learn that President McKinley was much gratified to receive assurance that the Payne-Foraker iniquity would be enacted into law shortly, notwithstanding "plain duty," and that his satisfaction was exuberantly shared by those sterling friends of the administration, Messrs. Havemeyer, Oxnard, Spreckles and Duke. Every cabbage plant in the Connecticut valley will glow with emotion, and every rum blossom in Medford will take on a deeper hue when the awful menace of Porto Rican free trade is removed. In the mean time the Supreme Court of the United States will read over the original manuscript of Chief Justice Marshall's ruling in the Loughborough case, and prepare to show trusts and a yielding administration what it knows about the Constitution.—Washington Times.

How to Get Rid of the Surplus.

There are just two ways to get rid of the surplus that is so rapidly piling up in the national treasury. One is by repealing some of the war taxes. The other is by authorizing the deepening of the sacks of the campaign contributors that now have access to the treasury and by licensing a few more contributors and a few more extra-large sacks, Mr. McKinley's great heart beats warmly for the first plan. It is therefore not unlikely that his perverse hand will push on the second plan.—New York World.

WOMEN

TALKS TO NERVOUS WOMEN.

An obvious remedy for the nervousness born of hurry may be trite and commonplace, but it is sensible notwithstanding. Haste inevitably makes waste in human experience. Delightful as is the last nap on the drowsy pillow, difficult as it seems to waken a little earlier, to get the bath and the dressing and the little interval for quiet thought which should be the prelude to everyone's day, a very small sacrifice, a very trifling degree of resolution, will enable any person in normal health to secure an extra half-hour in the morning. That extra time, so easily secured, so precious in the gifts it bears in its hand, will make for you and me the world-wide difference between dignity and irritation, between composure and fussiness.

A woman should face the situation, whatever it be; discover, if there is any flaw, what has caused it, and then calmly and gently as her province is see about setting it right. Half our worries spring from some occult occasion which we may overcome, and much of our so-called nervousness, it is acknowledged, is born in worry. Some of it comes from subtle springs which are located deep in the fountain of our being, and these are often so incomprehensible to our friends that they survey our weakness with little patience. Generations of us, from Mother Eve down, have shrieked in every note of the gamut at such of our pet aversions as have crossed our pathway, and the woman of the twentieth century has in her brain the wayworn tracks made for her by her forebears.

From knowing that a course of action is unwise and inconsiderate to seeing what may be done to rectify it is often the step which costs most and counts for most. Every time when we remain silent, though the desire to speak beats insistently at the door of our lips, every time when, though ready to rush or to fly or to exclaim with vehemence, we are simply quiet, holding ourselves in with bit and rein, we make a real gain in self-restraint. And self-restraint in women marks the line of divergence between the untrained persons and the thoroughbred, between the gentlewoman and her of low estate. By every act of calmness she gains in the essentials which keep her spirit calm and free from agitation.—Margaret E. Sangster, in Harper's Bazar.

Will Go to Paris.

Miss Mamie Davis, who lives in Reno County, Kansas, devised the unique scheme by which four dozen pretty Kansas girls will see the Paris exposition. The girls comprise what is known as the "Paris Exposition Club." Miss Davis is the president. One day in May, two years ago, Mamie called for a convention of her girl chums at the town of Reno. "Girls, we must go to the Paris exposition, and I have a plan to save money. We don't need a new dress every few weeks, because our dresses wear out; it is just a change. Now let us change dresses with each other and save this 'dress' money our folks give us and put it into a common fund to spend on a trip to Paris. The girls, after much discussion, decided that they would all join the club, but that the whole scheme was to be kept a profound secret. And so the club was formed. The girls called upon their parents for the necessary funds to buy clothes just the same, but changed with their friends instead. Each girl saved on an average of $6 a month. In this way they have saved about $250 each, which they consider necessary to give them a good trip and an enjoyable one.

MISS DAVIS.

Avoid Contact with Sick Pets.

Dogs and monkeys are subject to tuberculosis and are said to be capable of communicating the infection to human beings. A large number of the canaries that die in captivity fall victims of the same disease. Parrots suffer from a malady peculiar to themselves. The bacillus that causes it is thought to originate pneumonia in man. Cats have been known to be the carriers of diphtheria, and possibly of scarlet fever and other infectious diseases. Great care should be taken during an epidemic to keep pet animals out of the reach of infection, or else away from the children, and at any time a bird or animal that seems ailing should be at once isolated.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Hints for the Sleepless.

If you cannot sleep at night, get up and walk around your room a few times. A long drink of cold water will effect a cure, and taking a bit to eat—half an orange or apple or small cracker—often will result in the desired sleep.

Try to compose your face when you go to sleep and practice to keep it that way. More wrinkles are bred in slumber than the average person has any idea of. The short, stout woman will find, too, that it helps her to lie at full length, rather than curl up. On awakening in the morning she should push her feet down and hands up as far as possible, if she would increase her height.

To Make Friends.

The trouble has been that while we all acknowledge the desirability of making friends we have made the mistake of thinking the ability to do so was a gift of nature, like a fine figure or a beautiful face, and that one could no more be blamed for lacking one than the other. Yet, when we ask ourselves what it is that we like in our friends the answer is simple enough—kind words, kind deeds, sympathy with our joys and sorrows, a gentle forbearance to our faults.

We hear mothers say that their children cannot get along with other children, and are avoided by their playmates. It is passed over as a childish folble and they let the golden opportunity slip to correct a fault that may mar the child's whole life. It is the time and chance to teach the golden art of making friends. The child who is taught to play fair, instead of monopolizing whatever is the point of vantage in the game; the child who is punished for being rude and overbearing, and selfish to other children, the child who is taught the divine grace of sympathy to others may not be clever or talented but he will have a personal popularity that will stand him his whole life long in place of more brilliant qualities.

Won by Persistence.

Miss Eleanor Jay Robinson is the young woman to whom James Lowell Putnam, of Boston, proposed twenty two times. It is pleasant to record that he finally won. Miss Robinson is one of New York's most aristocratic young women, and her fiance is distinguished in Boston. He has loved her five years, and friends say that Miss Robinson took no interest whatever in him until after the twelfth proposal. After that she began to marvel at his persistence and gradually she learned to depend upon him and to look for his proposals as she did for a bunch of wood violets every morning on her breakfast tray.

MISS ROBINSON.

Scrubbing the Face.

Seventy-five per cent. of the women I encounter look at me in holy horror when I insist on their scrubbing their countenances with a scrubbing brush; not such a brush, I hasten to add, as one uses for the kitchen floor, but with a camel's-hair face-scrubbing brush.

If you want a good complexion you must first have a clean skin. Hot water, pure soap, and a scrubbing brush used every night before going to bed; a thorough rinsing so that every particle of soap is washed out of the pores (for it is just as injurious to clog the pores with soap as any other matter); a little toilet cream if the skin is chafed or irritated; time and patience—and you have the secret of a fair, fresh skin, despite all and every argument to the contrary, says the New York World.

To cure blackheads use the camel's-hair face-scrubbing brush with warm water and a pure hygienic soap. Immerse the brush in warm water, rub the soap on until you get a good lather, scrub the face for a moment or two, rinse thoroughly with clear warm water, then apply a good cold cream or skin food. All this should be done at night, just before going to bed. If you have the correct brush it may make the face a little tender for a day or two.

A Good Example.

After all, the cheerful spirit is but an example of "that brave attitude toward life" of which Stephenson wrote. It is a courageous bearing of inevitable burdens, a determination not to fret and not to add to the sorrows of the world. The gospel of happiness is one that every woman should lay to her heart. What it means to a man to come home to a cheerful wife, only he knows who has to fight the hard battle of life. A complaining wife can kill the last bit of hope and courage in a troubled heart, while a cheerful helpmate gives new life to begin the fight all over again. The mother who allows her children to grow up moody and discontented, subject to blues and sulks, is failing in her first duty. She is handicapping them in the race of life. The sunshiny man or woman has everyone for a friend, for this troubled old earth must borrow its mirth. "It has troubles of its own," and some of the disagreeable, jaundiced countenances we meet on life's highway are enough to turn honey into gall and wormwood.

Use of Going to Church.

The average American week is one intense effort to get beyond the limitations of the week just gone. Every nerve and force of body and brain have been under the stress of excitement and rush. Six days are enough for the severe tension, and break many a one down in the process. Let the struggle be stopped every week by one perfect day of rest. The church is essentially a place of rest. Every part of the service furnishes relief from the burdens and cares of the week. The music brings calm and refreshment. The hymns lift one above the plane of the secular and commonplace. The lessons from the Bible, and the preaching on topics connected with present and future accountability, lead one into a new field of thought, and give a sense of responsibility and a serious significance not at all suggested by the activities of business. The Sunday service inevitably develops the mind and broadens the areas of knowledge.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Russian Peasants.

The lowest types of modern European civilization are probably the Russians. While writers and travelers vary as to the future of Russia, nearly all are agreed as to the utter degradation at present of the Russian peasant. He is always on the verge of starvation, and is absolutely improvident, while his gross and complete ignorance is combined with the most extravagant superstition. Like all low natures he is thoroughly distrustful of reform, and as a climax to his infirmities he is a confirmed drinker. Middle class in Russia there is practically none. The small shopkeepers combine exorbitant charges with shameful usury; manufacturers and producers are nearly all foreigners, and the larger trade of the country is chiefly in German hands. Education may after the lapse of several generations remove the inherent dullness of this people, but it will be no easy matter to root out evils which are the growth of centuries of serfdom and distress.

TELEPHONE ENTERPRISE.

Much interest has been manifested during the past few years in the subject of competition in telephone service. It had been evidently expected in many quarters that the old Bell Company and its associated licensees would be outdone, and in many sections driven out of the business. The independent movement has now had several years in which to accomplish results, and while there are many exchanges and quite a number of toll lines, yet the fact is, we are informed, that instead of being driven out, the old company has largely increased its patronage, having during the past two and a half years nearly doubled its list of subscribers in the State of Indiana.

It has been found by independent companies that the difficulties in giving good service have been so many, and the expenses of building and maintaining proper lines has been so far beyond calculations that in many instances the owners have found the venture so unprofitable that they sold out to the old company.

The Bell Company seems to be fully alert to the necessities of the situation and amongst other things during the past year has adopted the plan of sub-licensing the use of its instruments for exchange of toll line purposes, where it did not already have plants or lines of its own. There are now between forty and fifty exchanges formerly operating independently, which have been equipped with the Bell Company's instruments, together with several hundred miles of toll lines.

The arrangement allows those sub-licensed exchanges and toll lines connection with the Bell Company's metallic circuit system, including the long distance company's lines, so that the new comers are placed on the same footing as regards service as the old Bell exchanges.

We learn that one of the largest independent system, which was among the first to come in under this new arrangement, made a most flattering showing during the year 1899, the figures being as follows:

Calls from sub-licensee to Bell Co. points	6,703
Revenue	$ 775.23
Calls from Bell Co. points to the licensee's points	4,296
Revenue	$ 425.63
Total business for the year, calls	10,999
Revenue	$ 1,200.86

This represents the sub-licensee company's pro-rata share of the earnings on the increased business acquired by means of its connection with the Bell Company's lines; this increase on toll business alone paid all of the expense for rental of the Bell Company's instruments, etc., and left a nice balance besides, in addition to which the sub-license company's earnings for exchange service, etc., increased from about $400 per month at the beginning of the year to $935 for the month of December, its total earnings for the year being $10,801.

From this it is evident that the Bell Company is not only extending its business but it is giving what the people demand, namely, a satisfactory service, and that connection with its lines is for an independent company a most desirable thing.

FUTURE OF BUSINESS WOMAN.

Retirement of Women from Business a Cause for Congratulation.

Edward Bok writes in the Ladies' Home Journal that women, having proven themselves incapable of meeting the demands of modern business, are rapidly being replaced by men. "Naturally, the question arises in the mind: What will become of these women? The answer is that they will go back whence they came—into the home as domestic helpers. This is a distinct cause for congratulation. It means the withdrawal of a vast number of women from duties for which they were never intended, and from a commercial atmosphere which, in reality, is distasteful to the sensitive feminine mind and fine womanly temperament. It can be most definitely stated that the vast majority of women in business to-day have absolutely no taste for it. They are there simply because necessity drove them to it. They have done themselves little good; and let it be said in all possible kindness, and yet perfect frankness, they have done business even less good. With here and there an exception, women have seldom risen above subordinate positions, and argue the question as we will the standard of wages has unquestionably been perceptibly lowered. This alone has kept numberless young men from marriage. Again, it has certainly done the health of women no good; on the contrary, it has filled our rest-cures, sanitariums and hospitals to the doors. It has been an unnatural condition of affairs. But, like all movements, it has worked its good upon the home. Upon that it has had a most salutary effect, and it is impossible to overestimate its far-reaching and beneficial influence in that respect. As in all other things in life, we move in a circle, and we generally return to the point whence we started—back to first principles."

A HINT FOR SPRING.

When Housekeepers Are Brightening the Interiors of Their Homes.

Now that the backbone of this remarkable winter is broken, housekeepers are remarking the dingy look of the home interior. The question of new wall coverings is up. Paper is dear and short lived; kalsomines are dirty and scaly; paint is costly. The use of such a cement as Alabastine, for instance, will solve the problem. This admirable wall coating is clean, pure and wholesome. It can be put on with no trouble by anyone; there is choice of many beautiful tints; and it is long lasting.

Circumlocutory Revenge.

THE TEEMING WEST.

The Prairie Lands of Western Canada Being Filled with Excellent Settlers.

The salient fact that presents itself in taking a birdseye view of the Canadian West is that of intense activity in every department. Whether the glance be turned upon the district east of Winnipeg, the Red River valley south or north, the Dauphin and M. & N. W. district, the southwestern, or whether it take in the great central division along the main line of the C. P. R. stretching away out to the Rockies and from there bending north and south to Prince, Alberta and Edmonton, McLeod and Lethbridge—whether the examination be made in any of these directions the same activity, growth and hopefulness is observable.

The Canadian West is not only a good place to locate permanently, but it is also a good place to invite their relatives and friends to come to. This is the spirit that seems to animate the West at the present time, and its effects are to be seen on every hand. To enumerate the towns where handsome and substantial blocks and residences have gone up this year would be simply to give a list of the towns and villages along the railway lines. And this movement has not been confined to these centers of population, but in many cases it has been overshadowed by the improvement in farm buildings.

So far as one can see, this is no passing phrase, no repetition of any temporary boom following a period of good crops and fair prices. It is a movement more spontaneous, more general, more marked than anything that has gone before, and seems to indicate that the great West, like Samson bursting the encompassing bands, has awakened to a period of activity and development that will surpass anything we have known in the past and which will only be paralleled by the opening out of some of the most fertile of the Western States of the Union.

Look at some of the figures. Over a thousand schools in Manitoba, and the number going up by leaps and bounds. Something like five hundred schools in the territories, Winnipeg as representing the gateway of the West, the third city in the Dominion in regard to bank clearings, postal business and probably in regard to customs, the customs returns at Winnipeg running about thirty to forty per cent greater month by month than in the fiscal year of 1897-8, the largest previous year for actual business entries, when over $900,000 was paid through the Winnipeg office for duty. The C. P. R. and Canada Northwest land sales together run over $1,500,000 for the year. These, and a thousand more signs, show how the West has leaped into new life.

This is an inspiring and cheering spectacle, but it brings with it great responsibilities. The business men realize this, the banks realize it, and have spread their agencies through every bustling little town clear out to the coast, the churches realize it, and one denomination alone has opened an average of about thirty new stations in each of the past two years, and will increase this in the year now entered upon, the Government departments realize it, and there is talk of redistribution and additional members. The educational branches realize it and new schools are springing up everywhere. Over 12,000 settlers came in from the United States alone last year, and these, with the people who came in from the East, prove the most vigorous Westerners. They lose no time in developing their farms, in filling their grazing lands with stock, and in every district are to be found evidences of thrift and prosperity.

Development of a Hero.

Onward came the frantic steed!
People, shrieking, fled its path;
From constraining forces freed
On it came—a thing of wrath.

Bildad heard the noise and ran;
Saw the terror clear the street;
Something stirred the little man—
Thrilled him to his very feet.

Bildad's courage did not flag—
All the danger clear he saw;
Click! he'd caught the rushing nag—
Caught it with his camera!

BLUES

That's Nerve Exhaustion

The truth of the matter is, your nerves have been poisoned and weakened with the impurities in your blood. The thing for you to do is to get rid of these impurities just as soon as you can.

You want a blood-purifying medicine,—a perfect Sarsaparilla,—that's what you want. You want a Sarsaparilla that is the strongest and best nerve tonic you can buy, too.

That's AYER'S

"The only Sarsaparilla made under the personal supervision of three graduates: a graduate in pharmacy, a graduate in chemistry, and a graduate in medicine."

$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

"During last year I was suffering from nervous prostration. For weeks I grew worse, became thin, could not sleep, had no appetite, and was in a wretched condition. After taking several kinds of medicines without result, I took Ayer's Sarsaparilla with more than pleasing results. My appetite returned, I slept soundly, my strength and weight increased, and now I am well and strong without the slightest trace of my old trouble. Indeed, I would hardly believe it possible for medicine to bring about such a change in any person."—CLARA MEALEY, Winter Hill, Somerville, Mass., Dec. 21, 1899.

JOHN HOWARD PARNELL.

Quarreled with His Sister About the Queen's Visit to Ireland.

The visit of Queen Victoria to Ireland provoked a controversy in the Parnell family. Anna Parnell, sister of the late Charles Stewart Parnell, was displeased and said the country should wear mourning for the event. Her brother, John Howard Parnell, on the other hand, was enthusiastic over the royal visit and scores his sister sharply.

John Howard Parnell has none of the brilliant qualities of his brother, yet he has taken some part in Irish politics. In 1873 he and Charles Stewart Parnell came to this country, intending to locate here. In Georgia they bought peach-growing lands and settled down to fruit farming. Returning to Ireland to prepare for removal to this country, they found the home rule party in bad condition and its leader anxious that John should enter Parliament for the purpose of galvanizing it into new life.

He declined to permit his name to be used, but suggested that his brother, Charles Stewart, might make the fight. In this way it came about that the younger Parnell remained in Ireland and made history for his country while the elder returned to Georgia to become the first successful shipper of peaches from that State to the Northern markets. During the years that John Howard Parnell lived on his peach farm he was noted for his eccentricities. He hardly spoke to his neighbors, and when he did it was in monosyllables. He had a large library, in which he spent much of his time when he was not hunting.

He led this life year after year. When disaster came to his distinguished brother he refused to discuss the matter except to express confidence in his ability to triumph over all his foes. Upon the death of Charles Stewart, John returned to Ireland and was elected to Parliament. He attempted to make himself leader of the Irish party there, but lacked the qualities essential for leadership.

COULD NOT REACH HER MONEY.

Dilemma of the Girl with a Lunch Bill and a Back-Buttoned Waist.

She had listened to a long and impressive lecture concerning the wickedness of tempting thieves and pickpockets by carrying a well-filled pocketbook in the open hand the night before, and had resolved to be no longer guilty in this direction. So only just sufficient money to carry her through the morning's shopping, as she supposed, went into the purse which she carried; the rest of her worldly wealth she disposed of in a different manner. Then she went down town, proud with the consciousness of having proved herself strictly humanitarian and up to date.

By the time the shopping operations had been completed the sum of money in her purse had been reduced to very slender proportions. Quite forgetful of this, however, the fair student of social economy entered a fashionable lunch-room, and, being hungry, ordered an expensive luncheon and ate it. But when the time came for paying for the same rolled around a clear and astonishing nervous shock came with it.

In her pocketbook rested in lonesome state a dime, a nickel, and two pennies, while the check for the luncheon footed up to three figures. All the other money which she had about her reposed in the little money bag of chamois skin which hung around her neck, beneath her outer clothing, and the bodice which she wore was buttoned up the back!

An intimate friend who providentially passed by at that moment rescued the unfortunate young woman from her uncomfortable predicament, and also loaned her a nickel to ride home on. But the bag of chamois skin went flying just as soon as she reached her own chamber, and this particular student of social science has gone back to carrying all the money she possesses in her pocketbook, for good and all, she says.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Land of Many Thirsts.

The Egyptian never travels without his goolah. He fills it with filtered water, and in the morning can command a pint or more of water cooled by evaporation through the unglazed clay. This precious fluid he does not waste on unsatisfied thirst. Taking off the long white wrap and the piece of cloth that covers his head during sleep, the native pours the water over his head, neck and hands. The European, with all his instinct for cleanliness, seeks first to relieve his overmastering thirst. There are in Egypt as many thirsts as plagues, but the dust thirst is the worst. Every pore is sealed; the throat is a lump of dry clay, and one feels what it must be to be a mummy.—London Standard.

A Benefactor.

"James," whispered the good woman, "there is a burglar in the parlor. He stumbled against the piano in the dark. I heard several of the keys struck."

"All right!" said James, "I'll go down."

"Oh! James, you're not going to do anything rash?"

"Certainly not. I'm going to help him. You don't suppose he can get that piano out of the house without assistance, do you?"—Philadelphia Press.

NOT A SINGLE RELIGION.

Hindooism a Multiplicity of Sects with Only Caste in Common.

Hindooism is not a single religion, but a huge encyclopedia of distinct and independent worships; it is not a unity either of thought or custom, but an immense multiplicity of sects and their observances, says the Contemporary Review. It may be described as the amalgam of all the religious ideas and usages of all the Indian peoples through all their past. To no two classes in no two places is it exactly the same thing. Its one permanent and distinctive feature is its social order; where caste is Hindooism is, where caste is not Hindooism will not condescend to be. Grant this fundamental institution, and it will be tolerant beyond the wildest Occidental dream of toleration. It spreads not by the conversion of individuals, but of tribes or peoples. Its unit is not the person, but the family; for the individual it has no place, with him it can do nothing, and for him it does not care; but the family, or the aggregation of families which we term caste, is to it all in all. It is more by his fulfillment of his domestic duties, his fidelity in his paternal functions and obligations, than by his ritual conformity that a man's orthodoxy is judged.

Hindooism is neither a philosophy nor a partisan worship, nor a belief, nor any specific theology, but merely caste. Of course, caste may carry with it most of these other things, but not in any uniform or authoritative shape. There are various philosophies, but they are concerns of the school; there are many worships, but they are affairs of the temple or the shrine; there are an infinity of beliefs, but they are conditioned by time and place; there are a multitude of theologies, but they belong to the sect.

The one thing inviolate and universal is caste; it fixes the lines within which a man must walk, the customs he must observe, the social laws he must obey, the means by which he must earn his living. It is at once ubiquitous and invincible, has lived amid the laws and divisions of states, keeping the people one while the kingdoms were a multitude; it has continued and spread in the face of linguistic and racial differences and has thriven by means of the agitations and controversies that have in Europe created heresies and schisms. But the one thing caste will not allow to be touched is the family; its omnipotence lies in its power to isolate the individual and reduce him to a condition of more absolute helplessness than could ever be experienced by any solitary in a teeming world which has no place for him, and where he is known of no man. This is a power which may grow, but which could not be made; which the conversion of individuals may do more to confirm and define than to change; and which can be dissolved only by a process as gradual and as inexorable as the process which formed it.

Government Mines in Prussia.

The Prussian Government owns and works seventeen collieries, eight lignite mines, fourteen iron mines, five metalliferous mines other than iron, and three rock salt mines, together with five iron works and eight works for smelting the other metals, six salt works and five quarries, which have an output of a total value of more than $30,000,000 yearly. Besides the above, the Prussian State owns one colliery, that of Ibbenbuhren, in the Osnabruck district of Westphalia, the collieries of Deister and Osterwald in the Clausthal district, and half the Obernkirchen colliery in the same district.

His Worst.

"Colonel," said the romantic maiden who doted on hearing thrilling stories, "what was the most agonizing half hour of your life?"

"It was the one I spent the other day reading a bundle of letters I wrote to my wife before we were married," the grizzled warrior answered.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Chronic Nasal Catarrh poisons every breath that is drawn into the lungs. There is procurable from any druggist the remedy for its cure. A small quantity of Ely's Cream Balm placed into the nostrils spreads over an inflamed and angry surface, relieves immediately the painful inflammation, cleanses, heals and cures. Drying inhalants, fumes, smokes and snuffs simply develop dry catarrh; they dry up the secretions which adhere to the membrane and decompose, causing a far more serious trouble than the ordinary form of catarrh. Avoid all drying inhalants, use Ely's Cream Balm. It is reliable and will cure catarrh, cold in the head and hay fever easily and pleasantly. All druggists sell it at 50 cents or it will be mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., N. Y.

FAIR WOMEN SPEAK.

Pe-ru-na Works Wonders for the Gentler Sex in Catarrhal Ailments.

MRS. COLONEL HAMILTON.

That Pe-ru-na has become a household remedy in the home of Mrs. Colonel Hamilton is well attested by a letter from her, which says: "I can give my testimony as to the merits of your remedy, Pe-ru-na. I have been taking the same for some time, and am enjoying better health now than I have for some years. I attribute the change to Pe-ru-na, and recommend Pe-ru-na to every woman, believing it to be especially beneficial to them." Mrs. Hamilton's residence is 239 Goodale street, Columbus, Ohio.

Mrs. Margaretha Dauben, No. 1214 North Superior street, Racine City, Wis., says: "I feel so well and good and healthful now that pen cannot describe it. Pe-ru-na is everything to me. I feel healthy and well, but if I should be sick I would know what to take. I have taken several bottles for female complaint. I am in the change of life and it does me good."

Have you catarrh of the head, throat, lungs, stomach or any other organ of the body? If so, write to Dr. Hartman at once. He will send you directions for treatment without charge. Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O.

MISS ANNIE WYANDOTTE.

Miss Annie Wyandotte, queen of the operatic stage and dramatic soprano, says:

"FIFTEENTH ST. AND JACKSON AVE.,

"Dr. Hartman:

"Dear Sir—Pe-ru-na has been my salvation. It has given me back a beautiful voice, a gift of God; it has brought me once more to my old profession. I can talk now, and sing, where before. I could scarcely whisper. Can you wonder at my delight? I wish every person who is suffering as I suffered might know Pe-ru-na. Only those who have been afflicted can ever know the intense satisfaction and gratitude that comes with a complete cure. My voice was completely gone. April 15 I felt so elated over the restoration of my voice that I inserted an advertisement in The Star for vocal pupils. The advertisement, which cost me 65 cents, brought me five pupils, and that was the beginning of my present large class. Yours gratefully,

"Annie Wyandotte."

A congestion, inflammation or ulceration of the mucous membrane, whether of the head, stomach, kidneys or other organ, is known to the medical profession as catarrh. It is known by different names, such as dyspepsia, Bright's disease, female complaint, diarrhoea, bronchitis, consumption and a host of other names. Wherever there is a congested mucous membrane there is catarrh, acute or chronic.

MISS CLARA STOECKER.

Miss Clara Stoecker says: "I had chronic catarrh for over a year. I tried many remedies, but found no relief until I saw an advertisement in the paper of your treatment for chronic catarrh. I tried it and I think I am now well. I recommend Pe-ru-na to all my friends who are afflicted with catarrh." Miss Stoecker lives at Pittsburg, Pa.

Mrs. Margareth Fritz, Wilcox, Okla., writes: "I extend my sincere thanks for the good advice you have given me. I do not believe I would be living now if it were not for you. I had suffered with flow of blood for four months, and the doctors could help me but little. They operated on me three times. It was very painful and I only obtained little relief. I was so weak I could not turn in bed. Then I applied to Dr. Hartman. I did not know whether he could help me or not, but I followed his advice, and used only three bottles of Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin. Now I am well and as strong as I ever was, thanks to your remedies." Pelvic catarrh has become so frequent that most women are more or less afflicted with it. It is usually called female disease.

Law in the Philippines.

The law which relates to the property of married persons is entirely in favor of the wife. Property of a bride is never by any chance settled on a husband, and if he is poor while she is well off he can only become at most an administrator of her possessions. After death the property goes to her children and blood relatives, unless she has executed a deed in her husband's favor under the eyes of a notary. A married woman bears her maiden name, with the prefix "de." Children bear the names of both parents. After the marriage ceremony the husband symbolically endows the bride with all his worldly possessions. It is clearly a case, so far as the wife is concerned, of "what is yours is mine and what is mine is my own."

A Practical American Mother.

An amusing story showing how practical are our cousins is going about in Washington. A young diplomat has lately appeared to pay considerable attention to a beautiful debutante. The lady has a mother whose name in fashionable New York inevitably suggests cotillons and the leading thereof. The eager swain's ardor was, it is said, considerably damped the other day, when, on an indirect reference to his intentions regarding the daughter, the mother cut short his panegyrics with, "Well, Mr. ——, she would be a very expensive young woman to support."—London Leader.

DOES IT PAY TO BUY CHEAP?

A cheap remedy for coughs and colds is all right, but you want something that will relieve and cure the most severe and dangerous results of throat and lung troubles. What shall you do? Go to a warmer and more regular climate? Yes, if possible; if not possible for you, then in either case take the only remedy that has been introduced in all civilized countries with success in severe throat and lung troubles, "Boschee's German Syrup.,' It not only heals and stimulates the tissues to destroy the germ disease, but allays inflammation, causes easy expectoration, gives a good night's rest, and cures the patient. Try one bottle. many years by all druggists in the world. Sample bottles at O. P. RABER'S, Corunna.

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Hannah E. Moss is plaintiff and Silas Franks, Alice Franks and Frank P. Seiler, auditor of DeKalb county, are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of seven hundred and sixty-two dollars and ninety cents ($762.90) with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on Saturday, May 5, 1900,

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the door of the court house of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following described real estate, to-wit;

The southeast one-fourth [¼] of the southeast quarter of section thirty-six [36] township thirty-four [34], north of range thirteen east, in DeKalb county, state of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

JOHN H. HATHAWAY,
Sheriff of DeKalb County, Indiana.

Rose & Rose, Atty's for Plaintiff.
Auburn, Indiana, April 11, 1900.

Notice of Administration.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned has been appointed by the judge of the DeKalb circuit court, of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Mahlon Rakestraw, deceased, late of said county.

Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

Wednesday's Daily.

—Mrs. Ezra Foltz is quite low with lung fever.

—Miss Saloma Warstler has returned to her work at Leyda's restaurant

—Stephen Brown, son of our friend, the late Burton Brown, came to this forenoon to place himself on our 1901 list.

—Thomas Dilgard, for some time employed by the B. & O at Wellsboro, has returned to Garrett. We hope he has a good job here.

—The most enthusiastic people at the opera house last evening were two young couples from Garrett. It was to them a season of unalloyed enjoyment. They visited, smiled—and we came near saying spooned,—the entire time. There is no place so enjoyable as a good opera house.

—Married, this afternoon at 1:30 at the home of Mrs. Julia Hodge on north Cedar street by J. D. Brosy, Jacob F. Koehlinger and Minnie Krueger. Mr. and Mrs. Koehlinger left on the afternoon train for Fort Wayne where they will spend the week with the groom's parents. They will make their future home in Auburn, as Mr. Koehlinger has charge of DeKalb County for the Michigan Mutual life insurance company. They are a worthy couple, and we welcome them to our city.

Thursday's Daily.

—E. D. Beadle, Auburn, has a 45 foot windmill for sale cheap. 13tf

—Henry Lochner is now one of our 1901 men and has thanks.

—The state liquor dealers league will meet in Peru July 11 and 12.

—Mr. Till, brother of Lester Till, has moved into the Colvin residence on South Jackson.

—The new Indiana national guard now numbers twenty-two companies of infantry and three of artillery.

—Robert McCrum of Huntington has been here this week at the bedside of his brother, the late T. A. McCrum.

—Miss Ashton, who has been here sometime with her cousins, the Keeran sisters, has returned to her home at Newark, Ohio.

—The Schaab carpet store has the most unique window display we have seen. It shows what ingenuity can do with ordinary materials.

—Krause's Cold Cure will break up your cold. It is not necessary to stay in the house while you are being cured. For sale by H. B. McCord.

—Phil. Myers offers for sale his property on Joseph street. It is a nice home with a good lot of small fruits. See him for price and terms. 16

—The Porto Rico tariff bill passed the House yesterday by a vote of 161 to 153. If we can't do anything else with our new possessions we can tax 'em.

—Jacob Recktenwald of Keyser was a caller today on business matters. It is a pleasure to do business with a man who attends as carefully to it as he does.

—W. A. Goodrich has moved back to Morenci, Mich., where he lived so many years. But he has been doing a good deal of fixing up on his Fairfield farm for the past year.

—Thos. W. Carter of Ashbury, N. C., had kidney trouble and one bottle of Foley's Kidney Cure effected a perfect cure, and he says there is no other remedy that will compare with it. Accept no substitute. H. B. McCord.

—NOTICE:—We have the most beautiful line of commencement program samples we have had heretofore, and at prices as reasonable as ever. Make your selections early. We take pleasure in showing samples. We recently purchased type especially for this class of work. w-Aug. 1.

—Capt. W. R. Myers, formerly secretary of state, has written a lecture on "Abraham Lincoln," and expects soon to take the lyceum platform. For nearly thirty years Capt. Myers has been among the foremost democrat campaigners of the state, and is a forceful and eloquent talker.

—At the grand lodge meeting of the Degree of Honor, held at Indianapolis this week, Mrs. R. C. Baxter of this place was chosen as grand lady of honor. The A. O. U. W. grand lodge met at the same time and re-elected T. D. Neal of Frankfort as grand master workman by acclamation. The next meeting will be held at Shelbyville.

—Ex-recorder Williams and his father-in-law, Geo. Ruffner, were here yesterday. Mr. Williams has moved to his farm west of town, the old Thomas Cochran place on the hill. This will make him a fine home. Mr. Ruffner moved to this county in 1853. Passing through Auburn about 3 p. m. it took him till 9 p. m. to get to the Grogg farm in Richland, though he had a good team. We should not complain of bad roads now.

—The lay electorial conference of the North Indiana Methodists passed a resolution at its meeting Friday declaring that inasmuch as the women "divide the burdens and responsibilities of the church and perform their full share of all the work, they have equal right to share in its distinction and honor, and that neither prejudice nor assumed fear of constitutional infractions should hereafter debar them from equal admission to all representative bodies of the church."

—A man named Stout fell into a cistern in the south part of town this morning. He was working near it, and took a tumble. Green Lahnum and Mrs. Snell fished him out. Being pretty stout they got Stout out, for Stout was not stout enough himself to get out. And he was far from stout after getting out. Stout is now stout in his refusal to repeat the dose this cold weather. So if any other stout people want to help Stout out, they needn't apply to Stout. In brief, Stout's out.

Friday's Daily.

—Attorney Lesa of Waterloo was in town this afternoon.

—John M. Stonebraker of Corunna has been granted an additional pension.

—Think of three inches of snow falling April 11 and being still on hand April 13.

—I. B. Madden squared accounts with the Old Reliable yesterday. And he is now a 1901ster.

—Lemuel Campbell of Butler is now entitled to write "1901" after his name on the COURIER list.

—The Lagrange Standard has entered its forty-fourth year and continues to improve with age.

—Chris Ashelman has a number of orders for tree pruning and grafting, at which he is an expert.

—Little Florence Buss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Buss of North Auburn, is reported quite sick.

—Mr. Aber had a busy day in Woodlawn cemetery Tuesday, caring for three burials and seven removals.

—The officers of the Home Telephone company have decided to place a toll station at Waterloo, Ind., in the near future.

—Samul Lutz, one of our old Waterloo neighbors made us a call today. He is still pretty sound and lively for a man of his years.

—Mrs. William Stafford is quite sick at her home south of the South End flouring mill and her recovery is extremely doubtful.

—If you want to sell or buy, or have lost or found anything, let your wants be known through the columns of the COURIER for quick results.

—There will be a great street carnival at Marion, Ind., June 4 to 9, given by the Elks of the state who hold their annual meeting there at that time.

—The total loss to the creditors and stockholders of the Butler canning company, through the stealing by W. H. Curtis, will foot up nearly $17,000.

—Editor Sheffer of the Angola Herald is now a grandpa and thinks he is the "only pebble on the beach." He'll get over it with careful nursing—of the baby.

—See the COURIER for supervisors's notices to teamsters in regard to hauling over gravel roads. They are 9x12 and printed in bold type on heavy card board.

—The fish law is causing no end of trouble and complication throughout the state and it is probable that the next legislature will be asked to repeal or amend it.

—And now they are talking up a ticket like "Bryan and Dewey," and a republican exchange says that combination would make his party "sit up," whatever that may mean.

—If troubled by a weak digestion, loss of appetite, or constipation, take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Every box warranted. For sale by Howard B. McCord.

—Mrs. Reuben Loutzenhiser an old and respected resident of Waterloo, was buried at that place yesterday. She was 79 years of age and died Tuesday after a long and painful illness.

—The frame-filers in the bicycle factory at Butler went out on a strike yesterday. They asked an increase of twenty-five per cent in their wages, which the company refused to concede.

—The Garrett Herald says the B. & O. hauled 65,000 loaded cars and about an equal number of empty ones over the Chicago division last month. This is a remarkable record for a single track road.

—H. P. Albaugh, President of North Manchester college has resigned, owing to political and religous differences with the trustees of the institution which is under control of the German Baptist or Dunkard denomination.

—We may have mentioned it at the time, but not being certain, we recall now, that an Auburn teacher, Mrs. E. M. Richards, was secretary of the Northern Indiana Teachers' Association that met in Logansport, March 29.

—J. D. Leighty, United States pension agent in Indianapolis, is preparing for the quarterly disbursements, which will begin May 1. The number of Spanish-American war pensioners who have been added to the rolls since January 1 is unexpectedly large.

—Lewis Weygant and wife are the parents of another girl born the first of April. As the second of April is their wedding anniversary it looks as if it came near being an April fool especially as they had four girls already and like Grover Cleveland were singing the familiar tune "Boy wanted."

—Mrs. S. C. Snyder and her son Ore, reached home yesterday afternoon, after a stay through the winter at Los Angeles. This reminds us that they were to come last month, but were informed of our second winter and waited. In spite of all, however they struck home in our third winter.

—It is rumored in railroad circles that the Wabash has arranged to absorb the Wheeling and Lake Erie railroad with all its branches. This would give the Wabash an entrance to the Ohio and West Virginia coal fields and with the building of the Toledo and Montpelier line would give them a coal line to Chicago.

—Speaking of the visit of several Columbia City people with Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Imhoff of this city on Wednesday last the Commercial says: They report having feasted upon the fat of the land, and having had a most enjoyable visit with those estimable people. The editor of the Commercial knows from personal experience that Mr. and Mrs. Imhoff are most royal entertainers. Better people than they are hard to find.

Saturday's Daily.

—Daniel Houk of near Spencerville made the COURIER a pleasant business call today.

—Geo. Dawson of Richland again placed the COURIER under obligations yesterday.

—Miss Jennie Stonebraker will spend Sunday in Fort Wayne with her sister, Mrs. E. B Johnson.

—John Thomas of the COURIER force has gone to Hamilton to spend Easter with his parents and friends.

—There should be no excuse for coining half-cents. The things have been tried and proved a nuisance.

—Go to Sheffer & Chaney for Michigan Lake Salt, a car load just received. Guaranteed not to get hard in the barrel. oct.26w-tf

—The aged mother of Isaac Hague died at Waterloo yesterday afternoon. We have not learned the day of the funeral.

—W. H. McIntosh was able to be up town today for the first, but he is still weak. We hope the good weather will benifit him.

—WANTED:—Black Walnut logs for timber. Highest cash prices paid for same. Address, The Sanders & Egbert Co., Goshen, Ind. 8

—Miss Jennie Ryerson returned to Goshen today and expects soon to go back to Chicago, from which place she goes to California in a month so so.

—You cannot always tell whether your goods are all wool or mixed goods. It makes no difference if you use Putnam Fadeless Dyes. They color everything. Sold by F. E. Davenport.

—A. R. Bass of Morgantown, Ind., had to get up ten or twelve times in the night, and had severe backache and pains in the Kidneys. Was cured by Foley's Kidney Cure. It's guaranteed. H. B. McCord.

—Dr. George Rock of Sherwood Ohio has associated in the practice of medicine with Dr. W. H. Nusbaum. Dr. Rock has practiced ten years at Sherwood. He is a graduate of the regular school of medicine.

—The family of Rev. C. C. Cissell at Fort Wayne, were poisoned the other day, though so far none are dead. Large quantities of arsenic were found in the coffee, the overdose having saved their lives. No clue as yet.

—Russell Guilford has purchased one of the popular gasoline engines manufactured by the Garrett Gas Engine Co., and has placed the same in the basement of the new county building, where he will have his workshop.

—Frank Nelson closed a very successful term of school in the Magginis district yesterday and the patrons made it a very successful occasion. A fine picnic dinner was served and Mr. Nelson was the recipient of many nice presents.

—If you have a kettle of hot lard and a baby in the house, place the grease where the little one is toddling so that it will be sure to tip it over on its head and save you the trouble of oiling its hair. That is the way a lady at Warsaw did last week, and she is sitting up now caring for her poor little burned baby.

—The following marriage licenses have been issued since our last report: Simon Hose and Jennie Mabus; Lorin R Cole and Louisa Kiplinger; Albert H. Peters and Della Kester; Jacob F. Koehlinger and Minnie Kruger; Chas. Ashley and Jessie V. Sweet; Edward Baird and Emma Freed; Isaac E. Winebrenner and Bessie M. Chapman.

—The Goshen Daily Democrat has this item which will be read with much regret by those of our readers who know the young man mentioned: "Hugh Harter, formerly of this city, who is a student in the medical department at the University of Michigan, has had a great deal of trouble because of his sight which has been badly affected. He is unable to read and it is feared he must abandon his studies."

—Perry Fitch, a well-known resident of the county and a brother of Dr. D. N. Fitch of this city, died at his home in Butler township this morning, aged about sixty years. The deceased had long been in poor health, having been confined to the house since last October. The funeral will be held at Huntertown Monday at 2 o'clock. Mr. Fitch was widely known and his death will be deplored by many friends.

The Eminent Kidney and Bladder Specialist.

The Discoverer of Swamp-Root at Work in His Laboratory.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell. Then the richness of the blood—the albumen—leaks out and the sufferer has Bright's Disease, the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root the new discovery is the true specific for kidney, bladder and urinary troubles. It has cured thousands of apparently hopeless cases, after all other efforts have failed. At druggists in fifty-cent and dollar sizes. A sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling about Swamp-Root and its wonderful cures. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. and mention this paper.

Pepsin Syrup Co., Monticello, Ill.

GENTLEMEN:—I had been a great sufferer from indigestion and stomach trouble until about two years ago when I began using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. I have found it the only remedy to give me permanent relief and I cheerfully recommend its use to anyone in need of such a remedy. Very respectfully yours,—EDWARD WAREHAM. H. B. McCord, the druggist.

—If there was ever a more discredited man than Ex-Consul Macrum, we should like to know of him. His examination before the congresssional committee showed the administration was to blame in selecting such an utterly trivial and shallow fellow to represent the United States abroad.

—Constant coughing will, if neglected, inflame the entire mucous membrane lining the air passages. Lichty's Cough Cure is the only medicine to be relied upon to give quick relief and allay inflamation. It is soothing in its effect; it is pleasant and agreeable to take; children like it. Sold by H. B. McCord.

—If Governor Taylor is arrested for murdering Goebel, can he pardon himself, and will he do it before or after conviction? Kentuckians have always been credited with seeing double, but nowadays they are worse twisted up than that.

—LaGrippe coughs often continue for months and sometimes lead to fatal results after the patient is supposed to have passed the danger point. Foley's Honey and Tar affords positive protection and security from these coughs. H. B. McCord's.

—There are in Cleveland over 4,500 railroad employes, and a movement has been inaugurated to form a bank where railroad men are thrifty and disposed to save money can safely place in it sums of $1 or over.

Not a Cast Iron Stomach.

Of course you haven't. No one need have. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a remedy prepared on purpose for stomach troubles, weak stomach, sour stomach, big stomach or little stomach, or any irregularities caused from indigestion or constipation. They can be permanently and thoroughly cured by the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is made in three sizes, 10c, 50c and $1.00 and is sold by H. B. McCord.

Latest News of the Day.

In our troubles, there has been some more incidents in the Philippines. Gen. Montenegro, Philpino leaader who was trying to reorganize an army became discouraged at the task and when likely to be surrounded by Americans, surrendered his whole force. Several other fights have resulted in our favor. In Mindanao, the second island in size, 1,200 Tagalogs attacked a battalion of the 40th regiment. Our men lost several, but drove the enemy off with as supposed, a loss of over fifty killed, besides a number of wounded who were taken prisoners by our men.

The first political party has been organized in Hawaii. To show how hard it is to work up a political party there, it should be said that a couple or more "voters" met and tossed up a coin to see whether they shoud be a democratic or a republican party. And the coin decided they should be republicans, and so the republican party in the Sandwich islands is fairly started.

In Cuba, the registration provided for in the treaty with Spain, has been completed. Over 66,000 Spaniards have registered their names in the list of those who wish to remain subjects of Spain. The political parties in the island are having trouble already. They do not seem able to understand how politics can be run without quarrels.

United States and Turkey are on the point of a quarrel. The Turkish government, as usual with it, fails to pay damages where it promises to do so. During the Armenian troubles of 1895 the Turks destroyed the American missionary colleges at Harpoot and at Narash. They agreed to pay $90,000 for this piece of vandalism, but have not paid a cent. It looks as if we would call our minister home and break off relations with the Turks.

There was a state election in Louisiana the first one under the new constitution. The vote was light, owing partly to the general high water, and partly to light registration. Many negroes are disfranchised by an educational clause in the new constitution. The republicans had two tickets in the field in most counties. The democratic majority was about 50,000.

In Kentucky, the Frankfort grand jury has returned indictments against the supposed murderers of Goebel, five as principals and five or more as accessories.

Costa Rica and Nicaragua say they are willing to cede to us a 12-mile strip of land on which to construct the Nicaragua canal, giving us a lease of 99 years, or 999 if we desire. In return they wish us to give them either an annual rent or else a per cent of the tolls of the canal, or they will take a fixed sum for the sale price.

The Paris Exposition starts up very slowly. Many exhibits and even some buildings are not ready. It was noticed that when the exposition was opened the other day, that the big statue of George Washington sitting on his horse, was covered with some big U. S. flags. The fact was, only the horse was in place, G. W. himself, or rather the the pieces of which he was to be made, was in some freight car, on some sidetrack along the railroad from Havre to Paris. Men had been out hunting for this car, but were not able to find it. So they fixed up a sort of frame on Washington's big horse, threw over it a big flag, and the ceremonies went on without many noticing it. There is a lot of trouble about exhibits being lost along that short line of railway, only 143 miles long. As the trouble has only been on a short time, it looks as if the several men now looking for lost cars, ought to have found them easily.

Brooklyn democrats are trying to boom Van Wyck for president.

The Spanish minister at Washington is mad because the committee managing the Chicago Dewey Day, sent him an invitation to attend. For some season or other the Dons seem to dislike Dewey.

The Monitor Factory.

C. K. Bristol and F. W. Dunham are the new men at the Monitor Windmill factory at the Junction. Both are men of experience in their different lines, the former as a hardware man and the latter as a mill man. Both seem to be careful business men. Mr. Bristol has been here some time, in charge of the plant, but Mr. Dunham is still at the old home in Cecil, Ohio. They give some attention to windmill trade especially in the way of windmill supplies and repairs and expect to increase this part of their business. They make a specialty of tanks for house or barn and are also makers of the V toothed harrows of which so many are coming into use. Hubs and spokes are also given a good deal of attention at their plant. They have manufactured all the timber they could get, though it has come in pretty slow. Farmers with hub timber to sell will find a market for it at the Monitor establishment at the Junction. We hope to see this establishment resume its former prominent activity.

Maud Miller.

Maud Miller, in the summer's heat,
Raked the meadow thick with wheat.
The Judge rode slowly down the lane,
Smoothing his horse's chestnut mane.
"With wheat at a dollar per," said he,
"This maid is about the size for me."
Then he smiled at her and she blushed at him,
And over the meadow fence he clim,
"Will you marry me, sweet maid?," he said,
And she told him "Yes," and they were wed.
Alas for maiden, alas for Judge.
For old designer and wheat-field drudge.
Lord pity us both and pity us all,
For Maud didn't own the wheat at all.
And the Judge remarked when he learned the cheat:
"Don't talk to me about dollar wheat."

Shearing Festival.

On Tuesday, May 1, says the Columbia City Commercial, a sheep shearing festival will be held at Purdue university, on the college farm, and under the auspices of the university. The purpose of this festival is to give exhibitions of shearing, both with shears and shearing machines and sheep dipping. A professional hand shearer will take part in the work and give an exhibition and several shearing machines will be exhibited and operated. Several breeds of sheep will be shorn during the day. Prizes will be offered to amateur shearers over 21 years of age, and also to boys under 21 years. Competition is invited. The State Wool Growers' association at its last annual meeting accepted an invitation to be present at this festival, so a large attendance is anticipated.

Have their Troubles.

That they have troubles over board of health laws the other side of the globe, very much as we do, is shown by the following clipped from the "Freedom" of March 10, published at Manila, P. I.

Dr. Joaquin Torrejon, a veterinary surgeon, was fined $50 and sentenced to 60 days imprisonment for violating the local laws pertaining to glanders. He had been doctoring a team affected with the disease and it appears that he deceived the owner in regard to the matter besides not reporting it to the sanitary department. The doctor has been making preparations to return to Spain. His carelessness or his effort to evade the law has interferred to a great extent with his plans.

Rummage Sales.

A note from Chicago, tells a queer thing that happened at a charity "rummage sale." A lady wearing a hat that cost her $12 50 was assisting at one of the sales counters, and at another counter, they were selling ladies' hats, cheap things they had picked up for the occasion. When the lady began work, she carefully laid her hat away taking the precaution to remove an emerald pin that cost her $8. When she went to go home and looked for her hat, it was gone. One of the saleswomen had sold it for 75 cents, not noticing the difference. The lady was at her post again next day with a new hat, but it was noticed that she wore it all day.

Porto Rico.

The Porto Rican bill is now a law, unless the supreme court decides it to be unconstitutional, as there is to be a case in court soon to see whether the tariff clause is proper. At present, a governor is appointed by the president as is always done in our territories, the chief difference in this case, being that he has to have a set of cabinet advisers more than half of whom must be Porto Ricans. Chas. H. Allen, assistant secretary of the navy, has been appointed the first governor, and has started for his new field. F. M. Hackett, a New Hampshire lawyer, will succeed Allen in the navy department.

Kansas Gold Fields.

A dispatch comes from Galena, Kansas, that they are in a whirl of excitement. It has been learned that gold, assaying from $15 to $1 per ton, has been discovered within two miles of the corporation limits of the city. Denver prospectors have purchased several hundred dollars worth of land in the vicinity of the gold field. People predict that within the next 30 days Galena will be a mining camp of not less than 60,000 people.

A Hearing Before the House Insular Committee.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Union Signal:—The House Committee on Insular Affairs gave a hearing on March 30 to representatives of the temperance and prohibition societies of the United States upon the alleged growing evil of the liquor traffic in the Philippines and insular possessions.

Facts were brought out which showed conclusively that since the occupancy of the Philippines by the Americans, drunkenness, which was practically unknown in Manila, has become prevalent, and that the hitherto innocent natives, who were formerly very abstemious, are rapidly falling into the bibulous habits of the Americans.

Testimony was adduced to the effect, that when the Americans reached Manila there were only five or six saloons selling light wines, while now there are four or five hundred saloons where American customs prevail, and beer and whiskey are sold.

Rev. W. F. Crafts was the first speaker, bringing out these statements, and quoted former Consul O. E. Edwards as saying that "the use of intoxicants in the tropics means insanity;" and the recent order of General Otis for one thousand pairs of manacles, showed the truth of this assertion, and that the increase of insanity among the troops was due to the use of liquor.

He quoted President Schurman of the late Philippine commission, on the growth of the liquor business; a native said to him: "You have brought us the blessings of civilization, and you have lined our most beautiful street, Escolta, with five hundred saloons.' That is truly the worst thing we ever have done; had we allowed them to go on with their cock-fighting and stopped our own saloons, it would have been better."

Bishop Thoburn's testimony was also given, and portions of the treaty of 1892 relating to selling intoxicating liquor to native races were read.

Rev. J. B Dunn, representing the National Temperance Society, and the Presbyterian Union followed. He read extracts from the secular and religous press, blaming the President for the "saturnalia of debauchery" existing in Manila, alleging that he could prohibit the importation of liquors into the Philippines. He also quoted from journals of the liquor trade, that "beer and whiskey go with the flag into our possessions."

Rev. E. C. Dinwiddle, of the Anti-Saloon League, said the military authorities could have controlled the situation, but that failing to do so, the advocates of temperance now come to Congress. He quoted from the "Wine and Spirits Gazette" that the receipts of the principal saloon in Manila were about $700 a night; another newspaper was quoted to the effect that the receipts of one canteen were $17000 in one day, probably a pay day, and that one agent of brewery had sold 5,000 barrels of beer in one day.

Rev. Dr. Fiske, of Washington D. C., was the last speaker. He spoke in a most impressive manner saying, "I stand appalled to see that the first Americans institution to get thoroughly grounded in Manila is the American saloon. Is that the way to give civilization to the Filipinos?"

Indiana Authors.

The States Press, 31 South Broadway, Aurora, Ill., has in course of preparation a book of short stories and poems by Indiana authors. It is the intention to make this book as complete as possible and every effort is being made to secure representative litterary matter for it. The volume will be printed on good quality book paper, handsome and appropriate cloth binding with aluminum title stamp and will retail at $1 50. A large sale is already assured. Poems should not exceed thirty-two lines in length. Prose work may range from 500 to 3,000 words and consist of fiction, descriptive or historcial sketches, etc. The address of the author should be placed on every manuscript. Anything of general interest will be gladly considered. Many of our readers do creditable literary work and would do well to take advantage of this opportunity. All work offered will be promptly passed upon and will not be used in any way until terms satisfactory to the author have been made. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned if postage is inclosed for this purpose. This company also publishes music and will write the accompaniment to good, catchy words.

What It Cost.

The commission sent to the Philippines last year to investigate the conditions there, and if possible bring about peace, was a pretty costly affair. The president has just sent to congress an itemized statement. The commissioners received $10,000 each and were allowed, after their return, a per diem expense which amounted to $5,285 for the three commissioners. The secretary received $5,860. In addition the expenses were: Transportation, $13,687 household expenses at Manila, $9252 49; for official services, including translators and interpreters, $31,701; for office rent, $2,698.63; stationery, etc., $2,367; telegrams and cablegrams, $5,547; miscellaneous expenses, $4,266; making a total of $117,185.89. The president says the naval and military members of the commission received no compensation. He recommends that congress make some provision for them.

Tried to Saw Out.

A few evenings ago Sheriff Hathaway heard what he thought was an unusual amount of singing in the jail, and a quiet investigation developed the fact that two young men recently arrested for setting fire to Wabash cars at Butler were making the noise to cover up an attempt to break jail. In some manner they had procured a file and a saw made of a case knife, and when the sheriff surprised them at their work they had sawed about half through one of the iron bars of an outside widnow. It is not known where they secured the tools, but it is supposed they were furnished by friends on the outside.

Jacob Nusbaum Passes Away.

Jacob Nusbaum, whose illness we noted yesterday, died at the home of his son, Dr. W. H. Nusbaum, about 5:30 last evening, aged 69 years, 6 months and 27 days. Mr. Nusbaum had for many years resided at Middlebury, and with his wife came here a short time ago for a visit. Beside the bereaved wife he leaves three sons—Dr. Nusbaum, J. H. of Warsaw and Cyrus of Ottawa, Kansas, and two daughters, Mrs. Culp and Mrs. Kreeke of Toledo. The remains will be taken to Middlebury tomorrow by Undertaker Cutler and the funeral will be held at that place Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Looking Ahead.

There is a story generally current, that the selection of J Frank Hanly as chairman of the republican state convention means a good deal in the future. It is said the president has been consulted. And according to this program, Hanly is to do all he can to elect Griffiths governor. Fairbanks is to resign his place in the senate to become McKinley's next secretary of state, as a stepping stone to the presidency in 1904. Griffiths is then to appoint Hanly to Fairbanks' seat in the senate, to which his chances of selection in 1903 would thus be immeasurably advanced.

Like Velvet.

Our readers will be interested in knowing there is one medicine sold by the druggist, H. B. McCord, that possesses unusual merit. Krause's Little Liver Pills. They are a small, purely vegetable, gelatine coated pill, acting directly on the liver and bile without the irritation and griping common to most pills. They are gentle and natural in their action, as soft as velvet to all tender surfaces and a positive unfailing cure for Billiousness and Constipation. H. B. McCord.

Sheep for Sale.

Owing to a scarcity of feed I have concluded to dispose of my entire flock of sheep at private sale, consisting of twenty-nine head of ewes, one ram, and thirty-two head of lambs by their sides, ranging in age from two to eight weeks. Also several head of young cattle. Residence two and one-half miles south west of Jackson Center.—P. P. LOCHNER.

The Conscience Fund.

The treasury department has received an envelope containing $623 from a conscience-smitten person. No note accompanied it, the wrapper merely being labeled "Government funds." It was mailed on Big Four train No. 2, some place between Indianapolis and Cleveland, last Sunday. No effort will be made to locate the sender.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Back "before the war," there was not so very much money in circulation and many a man did not get in a year, much as he now needs to pay his taxes. Silver money was mostly foreign coins, especially the silver dollars, which were Mexican or Spanish. Smaller coins were partly American, Spanish and Mexican, mostly Spanish. There were some franc and some 5-franc pieces, which were French money. The gold coins, after the discovery of gold in California, were mostly American, and became rather common at last. But there were later, considerable silver money from Germany, the "gulden" brought over by the large influx of immigrants then turning their faces toward the new world. At that time Germany sent many of her better sort of middle class people and each family had a strong sack, with a pretty heavy load of "guldens." These pieces were worth then about 36 cents each, though they varied a little in the different provinces. This money was seen only in certain localities where the Germans settled, and soon found its way back to the Fatherland or to Uncle Sam's mint. The Spanish coins, had many of them been many years in use, especially the quarter dollars, or "two-real" pieces. On the reverse side of these, were the Spanish arms, prominent in which was the figure of two pillars, entwined with a garland, and some other attachments. When the coin became worn these pillars grew dim, and when almost obliterated, the coin became reduced in value, passing for only 20 cents. A man in business had to scrutinize each quarter or "two shillin' piece" he was offered, or he would allow 25 cents for a coin worth but 20 cents. And some coins were bogus, as at present. There were various other things to be considered, so that it was found necessary to have a coin manual or "detector" to assist in keeping on the safe side. But the detector was of still greater use in keeping tab on paper money. There were banks of all degrees, from those whose bills were at par to those that were utterly worthless. The "detector" had a full list of the banks and the value of a dollar of each. It was enough to set a business man crazy. Yet merchants and similiar dealers often made money more rapidly than they do now. They sold at a better profit, and if in a community that was good pay, they prospered.

Speaking of counterfeit or bogus money, reminds us of a story, and probably a true one, that comes to us from far off Siam. The merchants there are often greatly bothered by bad coins, mostly in silver. The imitation is so ingenious and the methods of detection so uncertain, that this condition became a great burden on business. We quote a part of the statement recently given to the public:

"In this dilemma some Siamese merchants called to their help someone who was always thought not so smart as a man—a monkey. And these "large apes of Siam" proved such a success at their new vocation that the custom of employing them for the purpose of detecting bad money has become universal. The ape cashier of Siam holds his situation without a rival.

He has a peculiar method of testing coin. Every piece is handed to him and he picks up each bit of money, one at a time, and meditatively puts it into his mouth, tasting it with deliberation. If the coin is good he declares the fact plainly. He takes it from his mouth and carefully places it in its proper receptacle beside him. He has pronounced judgment and everyone is satisfied that the judgment is correct.

But if the coin is bad the cashier makes known his verdict in an equally unmistakable manner. He throws it violently from his mouth to the floor, shaking his head with as much disgust as the merchant himself might feel at being imposed upon. With loud chattering and angry gestures he makes his displeasure known at being presented with a bad piece of money. The merchant himself could not express it better.

Now, how does a monkey know what a man cannot tell? Ah, that is his secret. He never reveals it. Perhaps he is afraid if he should make known all the mysteries of his profession his occupation might be gone and people would once more prefer men for cashiers in place of the extraordinary apes employed by the merchants of Siam."

'Tis Not True.

We cannot cure everything. We only cure Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation, Sick Headache and Stomach troubles. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin does the work and you can get it in 10c, 50c or $1.00 sizes of H. B. McCord.

In Memoriam

On Thursday, April 19, 1900, the old friends and neighbors of Mother Seiler assembled at Fairfield Center to pay their last tribute of respect before her interment beside her husband, who preceded her by twelve years. The church was well filled with friends and relatives. Rev. D. S. Oakes of Kendallville, Ind., a former pastor of her church, and an old family friend, delivered the discourse from the text, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Mr. George Frederick, an old neighbor and brother in her church, concluded with a few remarks. Dr. J. H. Seiler, her youngest son, sang "Some Sweet Day, By-and-By," accompanied by his sister-in-law, Mrs. Fannie Seiler. At the grave, her three sons, Cyrus, Frank and John sang one of her old favorite songs, "My latest sun in sinking fast."

Of the immediate relatives there were present, Mrs. Caroline Gallatin, only daughter, of Martinsville, Ill.; Cyrus Seiler, oldest son, Elkhart, Ind.; Mrs. Fannie Seiler, Shelbyville, Ind.; Frank P. Seiler and wife, Auburn, Ind., and Dr. John H. Seiler and wife, Akron, Ohio.

Lucetta Seiler, was born in Lebanon county, Pa., April 26, 1820, and died at the home of her daughter, Caroline Gallatin, Martinsville, Ill., April 16, 1900, aged 79 years, 11 months and 16 days.

In 1828 she emigrated with her parents to Stark county, O. Oct. 4, 1838, she was married to John Seiler, and moved to West Lebanon, Wayne county, O., where they remained until 1863, when they moved with their family to DeKalb county, Ind., three miles southwest of Ashley, which has been their home ever since.

The first death in the family was that of her husband, April 16, 1888, (just twelve years to the day, prior to her death) and her son Michael, who died March 27, 1898. To mourn her loss she leaves one daughter, three sons, two sisters and two brothers. She has ten grandchildren living, two dead, and seven great-grandchildren. She was a woman of positive faith in God and a strong Christian character, self sacrifice, devotion to her family, sympathetic, a helping hand were some of her strongest traits.

Father and Mother Seiler's house was always open to friend or stranger, and ministers and their families were always welcome to their hospitalities. The fire on their family altar was never allowed to go out, but morning and evening they paid their obligations to Almighty God, with their family and all else who were under their roof.

In 1866 they transferred their membership to the Evangelical Association at the county line where they remained till their demise. After Father Seiler's death there was soon manifest a gradual senile debility which continued to the end, which was calm and peaceful. About six years ago her family thought best that she make her home with her only daughter, Mrs. Gallatin, who cared for her with such love, tenderness and unselfish devotion to the end which only a woman with the grace of God can bestow.

To Be Explicit.

When a man is referred to now as "a veteran of the war" it is necessary to specify the war—civil, Spanish or Kentucky.—Denver Times.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

is a food medicine for the baby that is thin and not well nourished and for the mother whose milk does not nourish the baby.

It is equally good for the boy or girl who is thin and pale and not well nourished by their food; also for the anæmic or consumptive adult that is losing flesh and strength.

In fact, for all conditions of wasting, it is the food medicine that will nourish and build up the body and give new life and energy when all other means fail.

Should be taken in summer as well as winter.

HISTORY OF A WEEK.

PEOPLE, PLACES AND THINGS OF THE WORLD.

News of Crimes and Criminals; Accidents, Fires, Etc., from North, South, East and West; Sandwiched with Minor Affairs.

AFTER THE TURK.

United States Insists That Turkey Pay Damages for Armenian Outrages.

Washington special: Diplomatic relations between the United States and Turkey may be broken off any day, as a final demand for the immediate payment of damages for the Armenian outrages was sent to the Turkish Government Wednesday. Its language was couched in unmistakable terms. It does not threaten war, but emphatically states that unless the claim is speedily settled, diplomatic relations will be severed. No specific time is set. Payment is demanded "immediately."

Men skilled in diplomacy say Secretary Hay will not gain the end desired if he gives the Turkish Minister his passports, because the Sultan will not pay the $90,000 claim. Turkey would banish all our diplomatic and consular representatives, and there would be no redress for damages to American lives and property. The United States cannot force payment of the claim by seizing Turkish ports, because all are held by European bondholders. It would mean to fight all Europe.

End of Yaqui Rebellion.

Tucson (Ariz.) special: Information comes to the Star from Hermosillo, Sonora, Mexico, that Gov. Torres has settled the Yaqui trouble in his State. The Yaqui force has been broken up and the Indians are returning to their homes. Gov. Torres has adopted the policy of Gen. Miles in the removal of the Apaches to the Atlantic seaboard from Arizona. The Governor is sending the Yaquis far into the interior of the Republic of Mexico as fast as he can gather them. Fifteen hundred have been sent and others will follow as fast as they can be taken. The taking of the families of the renegades in the fields is giving good results, as the renegades follow their families.

Germany and Our Meat.

Berlin special: The agrarian newspapers reproduce a letter from a German employe of the Chicago stock yards, whose name is not given, in which the concerns of Armour & Co., Nelson, Morris & Co. and Swift & Co. are charged with conducting meat inspection in a farcical fashion. A number of alleged facts are cited in corroboration and the writer says the adoption of the German meat inspection bill would be a blessing to both countries.

Went Through a Bridge.

An east-bound fast freight train went through a bridge near Cochran, Ind. Engineer George Crane and Fireman Frank Reynolds were killed and Brakeman C. W. Hook was probably fatally injured. The bodies of Crane and Reynolds are still under the wreckage of the engine and five cars. One of the wrecked cars was loaded with whisky and it caused such a fire as to burn the bridge as well as the wreckage.

Lord Russell a Bigamist.

The cabled announcement in the marriage columns of the London Times of the wedding of Earl Russell to Mollie Cooke, at Reno, Nev., April 15, has created a sensation in London, as it appears that Earl Russell, according to the English law, is still legally married to the first Countess Russell, who is now performing at the Trivoli Music Hall.

Give Chicago Corps Mausers.

According to a dispatch to the London Daily Mail from Lorenzo Marquez, nearly half of the members of the Chicago ambulance corps, when offered Mausers on their arrival at Pretoria, tore off their Red Cross badges. Adelbert S. Hay, United States Consul, notified the Transvaal Government that he must report the circumstance to Washington.

Wire Mills Open Again.

Pittsburgh special: Suspension of the wire mills of the American Steel and Wire Company in this district, over which there was much anxiety, has been brief. The wire departments of the works are in operation again, while the nail mills will probably be idle for some time.

Rusie Sued for Divorce.

Mrs. Susan Rusie, wife of Amos Rusie, the big New York pitcher, has brought suit at Indianapolis for divorce. She charges that Rusie has mistreated her and he has been drinking. Property rights are involved in the case. She asks $5,000 alimony.

Wants To Be a Congressman.

It is reported in Washington that Webster Davis, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, who resigned that he might aid the Boer cause, purposes to run for Congress.

Masonic Temple, Fort Wayne, Ind.

May 1—"The Belle of New York."

Thirteen Drowned.

Bingen special: A boat on board of which were twenty members of the Catholic Students' Association, while crossing the River Rhine from this place to Ruedessiem, was capsized and thirteen of its occupants were drowned.

England Interested.

London special: Keen interest is manifested here in the threatened action of the United States against Turkey, particularly in view of the Sultan's recalcitrancy in connection with the increase of the customs duties.

Shippers Must Pay the Stamp Tax.

The United States Supreme Court has decided the cases involving the stamp tax as it applies to express packages, the question involved being whether the shipper or the carrier shall pay the express charges on packages. The opinion was in favor of the companies.

Steel Mills Closed.

Because of a tremendous decrease in the demand for its finished products, the American Steel and Wire Company announces the immediate closing down of twelve of the largest of its producing mills. Ten thousand employes in various parts of the country are made idle.

DUN'S REVIEW OF TRADE.

Heavy Wholesale Business in Dry Goods—Money Abundant in New York.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: "Iron furnaces in blast April 1 produced 289,482 tons weekly, against 292,643 March 1, but unsold stocks increased 2,280 tons. A mistaken inference, possibly fatal to many in its consequences, is that stocks held by consuming concerns must be running down. As they contract for their supplies months ahead, and such supplies, whether delivered and not consumed or awaiting their orders at furnaces, would not be reckoned in unsold stocks, the surplus owned by consumers may be heavy. The boot and shoe industry also falls behind in output. A heavy wholesale business has been done in dry goods. There is some uncertainty in cotton goods as to retail distribution. Supplies of money are abundant in New York, the banks have again gained largely, rates are low and commercial demands narrow, and the interior is better prepared than ever to do without aid. Failures for the week have been 193 in the United States, against 188 last year, and 41 in Canada, against 22 last year."

KILLED BY EXPLOSION OF GAS.

The Chicago Pipe Company Main Throws Michael Ellison 150 Feet.

Too much pressure and a piece of defective gas pipe in the mains of the Chicago Pipe Line Company at a point four miles southeast of Logansport, Ind., was the cause of a terrific explosion in which Michael Ellison, Jr., was instantly killed and five other men received injuries from which it is doubtful if some recover. Ellison was stooping over a "T" when the pipe gave way, and he was found 150 feet away, his bones broken and probably having met instant death. George Morrison, in charge of the work, found himself sprawling on the ground thirty feet away, with gravel and dirt blown into his skin, his whole body wrenched and most of his clothes torn and tattered, but no bones broken. The "T" weighs 1,000 pounds, and it was carried fifty feet, taking off the top of George Nelson's hat and a small bunch of his hair, otherwise not injuring him.

PAGO PAGO HARBOR IS PRAISED.

American Port in Samoa Said to Be Safer in Storms than Apia.

The Navy Department at Washington has received a report from Capt. Tilley, commanding the United States steamship Abarenda, showing that the harbor of Pago Pago, which is now being equipped as a United States naval station, is far superior to that at Apia, Samoa. Writing from Pago Pago, island of Tutuila, Capt. Tilley says: "While I was in the port of Apia with the Abarenda under my command a heavy gale came on very suddenly and I was obliged to proceed to sea at once. In less than half an hour the anchorage at Apia was unsafe for any vessel. On the 10th inst I entered this port, and although it was still blowing a gale outside, I found the harbor as smooth as a pond." Capt. Tilley then shows that freight can be discharged or taken on at Pago Pago at any time, no matter what the weather is outside.

Many Hurt in a Riot.

Gathering trouble at the Merchants' Loan and Trust building in Chicago came to a climax when the men stopped work the other evening. Cheered on by a richly attired woman, a mob of several hundred union pickets, strike sympathizers and others hurled themselves upon a thin line of non-union workmen. After police officers had been summoned from all the nearby stations and had quelled the disturbance, several were found injured.

Plan for a Farmers' Trust.

All the farmers of the world in a sort of international trust to restrict the production of wheat and raise prices is the plan which it is hoped to carry into effect at the international agricultural conference in Paris July 9-16. It is proposed to ask the farmers of the world to reduce their wheat output by 20 per cent, and not to sell a bushel for less than $1.00.

Fire in a Tenement House.

Fire was discovered in the tailor shop of Hyman Bellar on the first floor of a five-story tenement house in New York. A panic followed the alarm and many narrow escapes were reported. The firemen broke into the rooms occupied by Hyman Bellar and rescued Bellar, his wife, his 10-months-old baby and his 3-year-old daughter.

Opium and Cigars Seized.

San Francisco custom house officials found in the forepeak of the oriental steamer Doric fourteen tins of opium of the finest quality, 1,600 cigars and 140 silk caps that had been stowed away with the intent to smuggle them ashore. The officials also seized 5,850 cigars on the Government transport Sheridan.

Indiana Strike Ends.

The representatives of the Indiana miners and operators have signed the wage scale for the year ending April 1 next year. The miners waived the weekly pay day as provided by the new Indiana law, pending a decision of the court of last resort on its constitutionality, and will be paid semi-monthly, as in the past.

Counties May Be Sued for Damages.

An important decision of the Ohio Supreme Court was handed down in the "Click" Mitchell lynching case brought up from Urbana. It holds the Smith act for the suppression of mob violence to be constitutional. The law was written by Albion W. Tourgee, the well-known jurist and novelist, and provides that counties which permit mob violence shall be liable for the damage to life and property resulting.

TORTURED AND THEN MURDERED.

Frightful Treatment of American Prisoners by Panay Filipinos.

The Manila paper, the American, tells a terrible tale of burning at the stake and other tortures inflicted upon three American prisoners in the hands of insurgents at Panay Island. It relates how Privates Dugan, Tracy and Hayes of Company F, Twenty-sixth infantry, fell out of the ranks during an expedition into the interior of Panay and started on a search for "tuba," the native wine. They fell into the hands of the insurgents. They were taken to the town of Calinaga, where they were imprisoned until the occasion of a big "fiesta" in the village, when they were led out to the public square and tied to stakes. The Filipinos decided not to put them to death at once. Accordingly slow fires were lighted and their feet were roasted, while natives under the direction of a local Filipino "padre" swarmed about them, jabbing them with knives and cutting strips of flesh from their bodies. Them red-hot irons were applied, cruelly searing them. When the victims had all but lost consciousness they were released from the stakes and dragged through the streets by the now frenzied mob. Finally one of their tormentors was ordered to slay them, which he did with his "bolo."

CHIEF OF POLICE MURDERED.

Vancouver Official Hacked to Pieces by Chinese He Would Arrest.

Chief of Police Main of Stevenston, B. C., was killed and his body hacked to pieces by a gang of Chinese thieves whom he attempted to arrest single handed. Chief Main started for a Chinese shack a mile from Stevenston, armed with a search warrant for stolen goods. As he had not returned two days later the citizens of Stevenston became alarmed and organized a searching party. The body of the chief was found buried, with many wounds in the head and neck, while both legs had been hacked off with an ax. In the grave with his master was the body of a little dog killed to destroy all trace.

PARIS FAIR OPENED.

INTERNATIONAL SHOW IS FORMALLY INAUGURATED.

Exhibition Buildings Still Unfinished and Exhibits Not Yet Installed—The United States Makes a Most Creditable Showing—Chicago Strike Growing.

The world's exposition at Paris was formally opened Saturday, although many buildings have not been finished and many exhibits are not in place. The exposition will be the largest and most attractive ever held in Europe.

For a fortnight or more work on the exposition has been pushed night and day by armies of masons, plasterers, painters, glaziers, carpenters and other workmen, and while in some respects the exhibition which opened its doors officially Saturday is far from being completely in order, it probably approaches that condition at least as nearly as the Columbian exposition did at its official opening of '93. Correspondents say that if the end of next month sees all the exhibits in place and the fair fully inaugurated in all its splendor, the authorities may be congratulated on their success.

The exposition is planned on a vaster scale than any previous one, with the single exception of the Columbian exposition. American visitors will not, as at some previous fairs, have any occasion to blush for the exhibit this country makes at Paris. With the exception of France itself we have the greatest number of exhibits, numbering nearly 7,000 in all, while Germany, the next in number, has only about 3,000, and England only about a third as many as Germany. The United States pavilion also will probably carry off the honors as one of the gems of the fair. Its interior decorations alone cost $30,000. Altogether, the United States section is likely to be the most creditable display this country has ever made across the ocean in that picturesque bazaar of nations called a world's fair.

As far as recorded there are 30,000 exhibitors from France, 0,564 from the United States, 2,500 from Belgium, 2,000 from Germany, 2,000 from Italy, 1,500 from Russia, 1,400 from Norway and Sweden, 1,000 from Austria, 600 from Great Britain and 600 from British colonies. Up to this time the United States has shown more interest in the exposition than any other country except France.

The exposition opens with about 50,000 exhibitors on the books, against 17,000 at the World's Fair in London in 1851, 4,100 at the World's Fair in New York in 1853, 23,954 at the World's Exposition in Paris in 1855, 28,653 at the World's Fair in London in 1862, 50,226 at the World's Exposition in Paris in 1867, 70,000 at the World's Fair in Vienna in 1873, 30,864 at the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia in 1876, 40,366 at the World's Exposition in Paris in 1878, 55,000 at the exposition in Paris in 1889, and 65,422 exhibitors at the World's Fair in Chicago in 1893.

The World's Fair in London in 1851 occupied twenty-one acres; that in New York in 1853, thirteen acres; that in Paris in 1855, twenty-four acres; that in London in 1862, twenty-three acres; that in Paris in 1867, thirty-seven acres; that in Philadelphia in 1876, sixty acres; that in Paris in 1878, 100 acres; that in Paris in 1889, 160 acres; that in Chicago in 1893, 633 acres. The grounds of the present exposition in Paris are greater in extent than the grounds of 1889, but do not compare in extent with the grounds of the Columbian exposition in 1893.

Political controversies and complications, wars and rumors of wars, and the prejudices of the French people against England and Germany have militated somewhat against the exposition of 1900, but it will be undoubtedly the greatest exposition in the arts, sciences and manufactures ever seen on the continent.

THE GREAT LAKES.

They Are Becoming Greater, Commercially, Every Year.

The fact that navigation on the lakes is about to open and that the greatest "season" ever known is confidently predicted by those familiar with the traffic makes some facts, which the treasury bureau of statistics has just presented in one of its monthly publications, especially interesting.

Statistical statements kept during a considerable term of years at St. Mary's Falls canal show that the tonnage of vessels engaged in commerce passed through the canal increased from 914,735 registered tons in 1872 to 21,958,347 tons in 1899, the increase having been over 2,000 per cent, as against an increase of 100 per cent in the total foreign commerce, and 200 per cent in exports. In 1871 the number of bushels of wheat passing through the canal was 1,376,705, while in 1899 the number was 58,397,335. Flour increased from 136,411 barrels in 1872 to 7,114,147 barrels in 1899, while grain other than wheat increased from 445,774 bushels in 1872 to 30,000,000 bushels in 1899.

In lumber, metals and minerals the growth of transportation on the lakes is quite as striking as in breadstuffs. The percentage of freight carried by Canadian vessels, which in 1887 was 7 per cent of the total, was in 1898 only 2.2 per cent.

The cost of transportation per ton per mile has fallen from 2.3 mills in 1887 to 79-100 mill in 1899.

PARIS EXPOSITION FACTS.

THE Paris exposition originated in a motion of M. Jules Roche, Minister of Finance, who, in July, 1892, proposed the plan to President Carnot. On July 13 of the same year the President issued a decree announcing a "universal exposition of works of art and of industrial and agricultural products" in 1900.

Eight years have been consumed in the preliminary preparations and in the actual construction of the buildings.

The total cost of the exposition proper has been $27,000,000 (135,000,000 francs). Of this sum the government gave 20,000,000 francs, the city of Paris a like sum and the remainder was raised by an issue of popular bonds.

It is estimated that 60,000,000 people will visit the show and that strangers will spend about $200,000,000 in Paris during the time of the exposition.

About $10,000,000 has been invested in side shows and amusement enterprises outside the grounds.

All the buildings, including the Paris "Midway," occupy an area of 300 acres.

Space allotted to the United States, 200,000 square feet.

Appropriation of the United States Government, $1,210,000.

Duration of the exposition, from April 15 to Nov. 5, 204 days.

Number of classified exhibit groups, 18.

Number of buildings, including pavilions of foreign states, 65.

Foreign powers co-operating, 42.

Number of regular exhibit buildings, 23.

General admission to the grounds will be 1 franc (20 cents) between 10 a. m. and 6 p. m. At other hours the admission will be 2 francs in order to prevent too great crowding. But tickets may be purchased outside the grounds at much cheaper prices.

CHICAGO STRIKES INCREASE.

Mayor Harrison Blames Both Unions and Contractors.

Frank Riepol, a non-union Chicago laborer employed by the Western Electric Company, was probably fatally injured by four men, supposed to be union pickets, who assaulted him, one after the other, as he was gong home from work. The men were not arrested. The Building Contractors' Council announce that the men employed on the Western Electric building will be housed and fed in the same manner as those employed on the Merchants' Loan and Trust building.

All of the prominent members of the Contractors' Council are protected by police. Many are also carrying revolvers. Police Inspector Hartnett supplied them. It is claimed that the police heard of a plot to assault some of the members of that body. Officers in citizens' clothes are closely following these men to protect them from injury.

An attempt by the contractors to bring labor from other States to work on Chicago buildings was foiled Monday when the union pickets intercepted twenty Italian workmen imported from New Orleans and persuaded them not to go to work at the Western Electric building. The men when they arrived at the building were met by a delegation of their countrymen, and after a parley were led away. The prospects of working behind a stockade and in fear of violence from union pickets was also a factor in getting them to desert.

Mayor Harrison says that the labor unions, contractors and material dealers are all wrong, but that the workingmen have the least to answer for. The Mayor says that the reports of labor troubles are keeping people away from Chicago. He adds: "It is argued that the labor unions constitute a 'trust.' Why, the material men and contractors have been the parties who have formed the 'trust.' Today not a single thing is bought by the city but we run up against a combination controlling the needed article. I know men who have sent orders from outside points and had goods reshipped to this city at a cost less than they would have to have paid in a direct purchase. This thing has gone so far that we have ordered city purchases shut off as far as possible. We will try the Eastern markets."

HILLIS IS NOW OUT.

Noted Preacher's Resignation Accepted by Chicago Presbytery.

Newell Dwight Hillis is no longer a member of the Chicago presbytery or the Presbyterian Church. The name of the Brooklyn preacher, who dared to renounce the confession of faith of that church, was erased from the roll of the presbytery at its weekly meeting Monday morning. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst of the Madison Square Presbyterian Church, New York, has joined Dr. Hillis in his opposition to the Westminster confession of faith and in his sermon Sunday he said things which provoked comment.

Apparently these two divines are far from being alone. There are frequent accessions to their ranks, it being announced in Cleveland Sunday, by way of illustration, that Rev. S. P. Sprecher and Rev. Paul F. Sulphen, delegates to the Presbyterian general assembly, would favor the adoption of a shorter creed. The demand for a new creed is pointed out by some as showing the trend of modern thought in the church, and it is evident that those favoring the action will be satisfied with no minor changes. They will ask for a new creed—a short one—and the question will be one that will make the coming conference of unprecedented interest.

"PORTO RICO" THE WAY.

Official Spelling of Name of the Island Settled.

The name of the oblong little island in the Caribbean Sea should be spelled "Porto Rico" now. This has been the official legal spelling since President McKinley made the Porto Rican bill a law by spreading upon it his signature. Before that moment "Puerto Rico" was the proper official spelling, for until then the decision of the board on geographic names was the only authoritative criterion to go by. "But," said Prof. Gannett, chairman of the board, "if Congress passes a Porto Rican bill, and that bill becomes a law, and in that law the spelling is 'Porto Rico,' the latter will be the legal spelling."

The Senate on Thursday, by a vote of 15 yeas to 33 nays, refused to substitute the Nicaragua canal bill for the Spooner Philippine bill as the unfinished business, and by a vote of 22 yeas to 23 nays refused to displace the Spooner bill for the Alaskan civil code bill. Listened to a speech by Mr. Burrows against the seating of Mr. Quay and to a speech by Mr. Jones of Arkansas in response to an attack upon him by Congressman Dolliver during the Porto Rico debate in the House. The House adopted a resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to designate depositories in Porto Rico, Cuba and the Philippines for the deposit of Government funds. Passed a Senate bill which will permit the dependent mothers of soldiers and sailors of the Spanish war, even though they married Confederate soldiers, to receive the benefit of the general pension law. Devoted the remainder of the day to debate on a resolution for a constitutional amendment empowering the Legislatures of the States to decide whether United States Senators shall be elected by the Legislatures or directly by the people. A substitute was offered giving the States no option, but providing that in all States the people shall vote directly for Senators.

The Senate held no session on Friday. The House by a vote of 240 to 15 passed resolution for constitutional amendment providing for election of United States Senators by popular vote. Attempt of Mr. Hepburn of Lowa to set aside May 1 for consideration of the Nicaragua canal bill was defeated by objection of Mr. Burton of Ohio. Rest of the day devoted to consideration of private pension bills. There were several sharp attacks upon Mr. Talbert (Dem., S. C.) for his course in delaying action.

On Saturday the Senate passed eighty-three private pension bills. The Alaskan civil code bill was under consideration for some time, but finally went over until Monday. In the House after an hour of routine business the session was devoted to hearing eulogies on the late Gov. Oliver P. Morton of Indiana in connection with the acceptance of his statue, which has been placed in Statuary Hall at the capitol by the State which he served. The speakers included Messrs. Steele, Miers, Crumpacker, Overstreet, Griffith, Hemenway, Brick, Alexander, Faris and Watson of Indiana, Grosvenor of Ohio and Cannon of Illinois. Fifty-three private pension bills were passed.

On Monday the House joint resolution in favor of a constitutional amendment providing for the election of United States Senators by the people was laid before the Senate and after debate was referred to the committee on privileges and elections. During almost the entire session the Senate had under consideration the Alaskan civil code bill. The amendment providing for the mining of gold along the beach in the district was perfected, after a discussion lasting nearly four hours. In the House consideration of the naval appropriation bill began, its provisions being explained by Mr. Foss, the acting chairman of the naval committee.

The Senate on Tuesday heard Senator Hoar speak against the retention of the Philippines, and then resumed consideration of the Alaskan civil code bill. In the House the second day of debate upon the naval appropriation bill was confined closely to the subject matter of the bill. The questions of armor plate and the building of warships in Government yards attracted most attention.

The Senate on Wednesday passed a resolution introduced by Mr. Mason appropriating $25,000 for bronze medals, to be distributed by the Secretary of the Navy among certain officers and men of the North Atlantic squadron who participated in naval engagements during the war with Spain. Devoted the rest of the day to consideration of the Alaskan civil code bill. The House debated the naval appropriation bill under the five-minute rule. A motion to strike from the bill the contingent fund of $500,000 for the Navy Department was defeated. Conference report on the urgent deficiency bill was adopted.

INDIANA INCIDENTS.

RECORD OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK.

Mistaken for a Panther—School Teacher's Horrible Suicide—Hurt in Row Over Politics—City Must Pay for Brick Paving—Kicked to Death.

William H. Green, a young man of Peru, was shot under peculiar circumstances in the woods two miles south of there by a companion, who mistook him for a panther. During a few weeks past a full-grown panther has been seen by different parties, and always accompanied by two well-grown cubs. On recent night Green, with twenty other young men of Peru, armed with guns and reenforced by forty-odd farmers of the neighborhood, attempted to effect its capture. Green was lying behind a log, and hearing a noise, raised himself to a stooping position, when he was shot.

Lebanon Loses a Suit.

After Lebanon City put up a stubborn fight against receiving the brick pavement on Pearl street, charging inferior workmanship and material, in a long-drawn-out trial at Frankfort, in which a number of expert witnesses were introduced and the jury took a railroad trip of thirty miles to view the work, judgment was rendered against the city. The costs in the case have exceeded the assessments, with a threatening suit for damages.

Cut to Pieces by His Guest.

At Osgood Jefferson Davis Brayden and a man named Morgan got into a drunken row over politics, and Brayden, who was at Morgan's house, attacked Morgan with a knife. Morgan's wife rushed to his assistance and her thumb was cut off by Brayden. Morgan's head and face were badly cut and a long gash two inches deep was inflicted in his side. Brayden after a fight with Marshal David Rick was arrested and taken to jail at Versailles.

Commits Suicide by Fire.

Mina Beadle, a school teacher at Tyror, committed suicide by pouring kerosene over her head and clothing and then setting fire to herself. She was instantly enveloped in flames, which burned her so severely before assistance arrived that she died in great agony an hour after the deed was committed. Miss Beadle had made two previous attempts at self-destruction.

HAWAII

Now, do believe me, in this lovely land,
Bewitching beauty smiles on every hand,
And soothing fragrance from the balmy air
Invites a languor, dispossessing care;
While from the torrid sunshine of the day,
We seek seclusion from the fearful ray,
And dreamingly await with fond delight,
Approaching shadows of most welcome night.

Hawaii.

How beautiful the grandeur, how sublime
The luring loveliness of this favored clime,
Where wild born beauty in profusion lies,
And nature does her best to please the eyes.

Hawaii.

The radiant daytime and the twilight night,
The shady woodlands and the valleys bright,
The wealth of colors, ever-changing, new,
Attract attention and command the view,
The ostentatious birds so well supplied
With gaudy costumes and with lavished pride,
The fragrant blooms, bewildering and fair,
The pleasing perfume of the languid air,
All, all inspire my soul to lofty flights,
And as I soar my humble muse indites.

Hawaii.

JUST A HINT OR TWO.

MRS. WESTON, widow of 23 years, was seated upon the piazza of her pretty summer cottage reading.

The afternoon was warm, and she was attired in a dainty white muslin dress. She was a very pretty widow. Her husband, Col. Weston, had been dead two years, and she had just returned from an extended trip abroad.

People remarked that she did not fret much about her loss.

Why should she? Not likely the pretty schoolgirl of 18 married the millionaire Colonel for love.

The front door-bell rang, and she had barely time to twist her hair up when Paulette, the French housemaid, announced Walter Courtenay.

She turned to greet him with eyes sparkling and cheeks aglow.

"Oh, Walter!" she exclaimed, rapturously. "I am so glad to see you. Be seated." He grasped both her hands and pressed a kiss upon her fair forehead. "Walter!" she cried, "you forget I am no longer a schoolgirl. You must not do such a thing again."

He was a tall, handsome fellow. He and Mrs. Weston (Constance Keith) were born and bred in the old town of Lynne, and although he was the son of an earl and she only a vicar's daughter they had always had a very friendly feeling toward each other. She often recalled the many happy times they had together, when he in boyish admiration told her she was the most beautiful girl under the sun and the only girl he could make his wife. But when he was sent to college, and old Colonel Weston, who had always admired her, asked her to become his wife, she forgot all about Walter and accepted the Colonel. But Walter did not appear to fret much, for it soon became known that he was engaged to "Fifi Clark," a star opera singer. So there was still that friendly feeling between them.

"Pardon me, Connie," he said, seating himself in a cozy rocker, "but I was so delighted to see you I could not help it. It's about a year since I last saw you, I think."

"A year and two months," corrected Connie. "Do you think I have changed?"

"You are prettier, if possible."

"Silly as ever; tell me about yourself and everyone. You are my first visitor since I returned home. Are you married to Fifi yet?"

"No; let us change the subject. Do you think I look well?"

"To tell the truth you don't look well."

"Nor I don't feel well either. You see, Connie, I——" His voice quivered, his face flushed.

She took both his hands in hers and said gently: "Come now, Walter, you must tell me all. You know you can trust your old schoolmate, your truest friend."

"Oh, it's nothing, Con, only—well—heart trouble."

"Yes," said Connie, smiling. "I understand—a woman."

"Oh, hang it! If you must know, the fact is I've been jilted."

"By Fifi?"

"Yes."

"How did it happen?"

"She found out I had little money and threw me over for a millionaire Chicago pork packer. My folks are delighted, but I shall not survive it," he said mournfully."

"You really loved her?"

"I adore her."

"Still?" said Constance.

"Yes, and always will. The light is all gone out of my life now. I shall never be happy again."

"Is there no one else you could ever learn to love?" she asked, hopefully.

"No, there is no one else."

She swallowed the lump that arose in her throat, and said: "It was real cruel of Fifi."

"She's like all other women; it's money they are after," he said gloomily.

"Oh, indeed!" said Constance, with a pout.

"Forgive me, Connie; I mean all excepting you."

"I wish I could comfort you, Walter. But are you sure this love you speak of is naught but a temporary infatuation, and when the girl who loves you for your own true self comes along you'll forget all about Fifi?"

"I think not, Connie; but no such girl will ever come along."

"Why, there are lots of girls, Walter."

"Name some."

"No, I sha'n't, but I have one in mind who loves you for your own true self."

"You're joking, Con."

"You know I never joke, Walter. I shall tell you her name in a month."

"A month!" cried Walter.

"Yes, a month from to-day. I shall give you that time to think what girl of all your friends has seemed to think very highly of you; one who has known you many years; one who is not 'after money.' Of course you will think of the one I have in mind, then go and propose to her, and I'll wager she'll tell you she has loved you many months."

"Has she ever spoken well of me to you?" asked the unsuspecting young man. "She has told me that she loved you; that you were her ideal of perfection in man, and the only person she could ever make her husband."

"Then my happiness is not a thing of the past," he said.

"The future will tell," she answered.

"Is she rich, Con?"

"She is far from being a beggar."

"Young?"

"Comparatively."

"Pretty?"

"People call her very pretty."

"Then my happiness is complete. Only for you, Connie, I'm afraid I'd become a rusty old bachelor." And as he bade her "good-afternoon," he was so happy he looked as if he would have liked to repeat his former offense of kissing her, but he dared not—yet.

When he had gone Mrs. Weston leaned back in her chair and laughed merrily. "It's not leap year, but then I had to give him a hint or two," she told herself.

A month later Constance sits in her luxurious drawing-room waiting to receive him. She wears a pale-blue dress and a single Jack rose (his favorite flower) in her hair.

She hears his step up the pathway; the bell rings, and he stands before her. "Well," she exclaims after a minute.

"I give it up, Con. I find there is no one I can ever learn to love as I did Fifi unless—don't laugh at me, Con—it's you yourself."

"Of course it's me, you dear old goose."

And it was not for hours afterward that Courtenay discovered what a fool he had been.—Boston Post.

WAS RUINED BY A HEADLINE.

Serious but Amusing Typographical Error that Cost a Man His Paper.

Amusing typographical errors in newspapers that have at times added to the mirth of nations were under discussion by a small crowd of newspaper men in a favorite resort one morning last week. Among the numerous stories that were told the following was the most amusing example of the callousness and recklessness of the old-time "traveling comp."

"I was working on a Detroit paper in the early '80s," he said, "when I got a chance to buy a sheet in a small town back in the State. Of course, I constituted the entire editorial staff, but I took up from Detroit a printer whom I meant to make my foreman. With the exception of requiring a two days' drunk each week, and one more day to sober up on, he really had few faults—for a printer—and I was glad to get him.

"For quite a time after we got established everything went well. Business was good, I had the indorsement of the right people in the town, and flattered myself that at last I had secured just the position suited to my eminent abilities. Here came my undoing.

"I had been there nearly three months when the daughter of the most prominent citizen of the town died. She was a leader in all church and society events, and extremely popular. The obituary notice I got up for the occasion was about the best I could do. It really was fine, and with it I wrote a 'splurge' head that I think was all right, too.

"The paper was printed Thursday night and that morning I was summoned to Detroit. I left most explicit instructions with the foreman and supposed I could trust him. Naturally I was out early next morning to get a copy of my paper. I got it, and never came so near fainting in my life. That scoundrel had given the obituary notice the most prominent place in the sheet, as I told him, but I had written the headline 'One More in Heaven.' He had made it 'One More in the Oven.'

"There was nothing to be done. I got back as soon as possible, but my foreman had gone and left no address. I put in the day explaining, offering to print the whole issue again, and did everything I could to square the thing, but I was done for in that town, and sold out soon afterward.

"The scoundrel who ruined me had the impudence to write and say he had had a few drinks that day and 'misread my writing.' I have never seen him since, and maybe it is just as well."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Spread of the English Language.

Writing on the decline of the French language, M. Jean Finot points out that at the end of the last century French was the language spoken by the greatest number of civilized people, whereas now it stands fourth. English is spoken by 116,000,000, Russian by 85,000,000, German by 80,000,000, and French by 58,000,000.

Unexplored Regions of the Earth.

Throughout the entire world there are about 20,000,000 square miles of unexplored territory. In Africa there are 6,500,000 square miles; Arctic regions, 3,800,000; Atlantic regions, 53,000,000; America, 2,000,000; Australia, 2,000,000; Asia, 200,000; and various islands, 900,000.

THEY ARE TRYING TO PROVE THAT SLEEP IS A MATTER OF HABIT.

An experiment that is as strange as it is interesting is being tried by an organization of students in several American universities, which has for its purpose the lengthening of working hours. This experiment is based upon the belief that sleep is, to a large extent, a matter of habit and that it can be lessened materially if proper care of the system is taken. They believe that rules can be devised by which they will be able to reduce the sleeping hours to a minimum consistent with continued health and they are working hard to bring this condition of things about.

Although there is probably no necessary connection between a lack of sleep and a brilliant career it is nevertheless a fact that many of the most eminent men spent less hours in their beds than most of us. It is no unusual thing for Edison to work thirty-six hours continuously at a single problem and seldom does he do more than snatch an hour or two of sleep when exhausted nature proves too strong for him. Humboldt, the great German philosopher, rarely spent more than four hours in bed, and Littre, who lived to be 80, thought that to spend more than five hours a day in sleep was shameful self-indulgence. Jules Verne is another believer in the virtues of little slumber. Although he reads until late into the night, he is at his desk at dawn in summer and by 6 o'clock in winter. Lord Wolseley, like Bismarck and Von Moltke, has always got along very nicely with little sleep and the list of men who have made a name in the world in spite of the fact that they have been almost strangers to their beds might be almost indefinitely extended.

The theory upon which the members of the association are working is that it will yet be possible for them to gain such complete control over the body as to keep part of the system at rest while the other part is engaged in its labors. In this way any unnecessary waste of vital energy would be avoided.

They are also trying to discover how sleep may be made most advantageous. They believe that people do not sleep wisely; that in ignorance they pass many hours in slumber and yet extract from that sleep the minimum of rest. For instance, it has been found that if the bed is not constructed properly one cannot get the best results from the hours of repost. It is, of course, bad to sleep upon the back, but it is even worse to sleep in such a position that the stomach is as high as the head and the feet lower than both. In the same way if the spring of the bed yields to the weight of the body too readily, the sleeper will be in a kind of hollow whether he lies on his back or his side. If he lies on his back his feet are too high, and if he lies on his side the spine is so badly curved that the sleep is actually a detriment to the health rather than an advantage.

In order to obviate this it should be seen that the springs are so constructed that they are stronger at the center than at the head or foot. Then, the mattress should be moderately hard and the pillow should not be too high. If these conditions are obtained it will be possible for a person to obtain the greatest amount of benefit from the hours devoted to repose.

AN INVERTED BRAIN.

CHILD SEES, READS AND WRITES UPSIDE DOWN.

Seven-Year-Old California Girl, Who Lives in a World that Seems Bottomside Up and Backward—Her Case a Puzzle.

There is a 7-year-old girl in Alviso, Cal., who lives in a world all her own. Nobody would want to share her world with her, because it is a topsy turvy one—so very topsy turvy that it makes the head dizzy just to think about it. Little Mary Terry sees everything bottomside up and backward. The experiences that each day brings to this child in real life are more remarkable than those which befell Alice in Wonderland, for Alice was fiction and Mary is fact.

This sole inhabitant of topsy turveydom is the daughter of a Portuguese rancher near Alvarado. For two years she has attended the Alviso public school. She is a pretty child, shy and graceful, with rosy coloring and black hair. Her case puzzles the wise men of the West. So far as is known, a similar instance has not been brought to the attention of science.

It was nearly a year before her teacher, Miss Carrie Parrish, discovered the strange peculiarity of Mary. The first six months' work in the receiving class consists mainly of the teaching of English. From the first Mary appeared timid and seemed slower of comprehension than the other members of her class. Nobody could understand why she did not learn faster. For a whole year her strange hieroglyphics appeared utterly meaningless to her teacher, who could only wonder at their invariable incorrectness. One day a certain method in their madness became apparent to Miss Parrish. Then she discovered that her little pupil was not only writing everything upside down, but was reversing everything that she wrote. If you will take a sheet of paper, write your name on it, turn it upside down, reverse the sheet and hold it up to the light you will see what Mary Terry sees when she has the pleasure of beholding your honorable signature.

Since the date of her discovery it has been a perpetual struggle for Miss Parrish to keep pace with her pupil's peculiar point of view, and after patient effort, most praiseworthy on the part of a teacher who is in constant charge of four and five different grades of pupils, Miss Parrish has succeeded in making the little girl understand that to be herself understood she must reverse and invert what she sees.

It would seem as if Mary were not less but more gifted than the average child to have been capable of understanding the complex and difficult command laid upon her, though the testimony of experts is all on the other side. This is, however, reasoning by analogy, as the writer has so far found no identical case in optical annals, spiegelschrift or mirror-writing, which is found to be common among half-witted children, being the nearest approach to this perversity of vision. In cases of mirror-writing, unconsciously produced as a correct copy of ordinary writing, paralysis of the right side is often found.

A simple inversion of things, without the accompanying reversion, is a fairly common conception, and the attempt to conceive of the various physical and psychical phenomena consequent on living in an upside-down world, has been made the subject of practical experiment in San Francisco, when G. M. Stratton, A. M., professor of psychology at Berkeley University, made his famous looking-glass experiments. But neither of these reached the unique point of view which is Mary Terry's peculiarity. The other day at the school, in looking at the words on the blackboard, she seemed to be trying to peer over them—to the other side, which is exactly the mental attitude necessary to the ordinary observer for the conception of the origin of Mary's kind of writing.

It is apparently impossible for her, until she has been over the letters, to understand their meaning. Imagine the mental gymnastics required of that little head. It was amusing to see Mary hold her reader indifferently upside down or rightside up, reading equally well in either case.

Doctors express the belief that the defect in Mary's make-up is mental, rather than physical. That as an image reflected on the retina is inverted, and that as it is a mental effort only which enables man to see things right side up, it must be a mental lack in Mary's case which hinders her from seeing as the rest of mankind sees.

THE WAY THE SCHOOL ROOM APPEARS TO MARY TERRY.

JUST LIKE TEMPERED COPPER.

New Combination of Metals Which Is Expected to Be Very Useful.

By a new process of rolling a Massachusetts genius has succeeded in attaining results that, so far as sheet metal work is concerned, are almost equal to what he would be able to accomplish if he had rediscovered the secret of tempering copper. The Massachusettts genius has succeeded, according to the Cleveland Leader, in getting Frank Rockefeller, brother of the president of the Standard Oil Company, and himself a very rich man, interested in the matter.

The inventor has succeeded in making sheets of seemingly pure copper of wonderful thinness and with the springiness, strength, and capacity for being tempered that steel has. The process consists in rolling a hot steel plate and two heated copper plates at the same time in such a way that the copper forms a skin over the surfaces of the steel and gives it all the weather resistance that pure copper has.

On his desk in the standard oil offices in this city Frand Rockefeller has a small sheet of the new material, no name for which has yet been selected. The sheets were the size of letter paper, and so thin as not to be much heavier. The steel itself was several times as thick as the copper, and yet on each surface of the steel there was a perfect skin of copper, so thin that a strong magnifying glass did not expose the edges. To all appearances the sheet was all copper, but its springiness showed that it was not.

Although he has had considerable correspondence with the inventor, Mr. Rockefeller has not yet met him. Last summer the inventor sent some samples of his new sheet metal to Mr. Rockefeller, who had an idea that such plates of greater thickness would be valuable material for making steel lake steamers. He arranged with Captain McDougall to tow a model made of the new material behind one of his whalebacks for a trip up and down the lakes, to see how it would stand the experience. When the model came back the copper skin over the steel plates was as shiny as when it had been put into the water. Whether it is along this line, or in the making of stamped articles of use and ornament such as gas chandeliers, cornices and roofings, that the new material will be used, will in a measure depend on the cost of production under actual conditions.

"I think that the invention is one of the most remarkable that has come to my notice, and people are all the time trying to get me into something of that sort," said Mr. Rockefeller. "The copper and steel are all rolled at the same time, and in the finished plate, no matter whether it is thick or thin, the copper is united with the steel so that it is impossible to break or strip it off. It is practically a single thickness of metal with a copper surface on either or both sides, whichever way it is made, and it can be made either way."

NEGROES TAKE TO COCAINE.

Evil Common Among the Roustabouts and Is Spreading Fast.

The troubles which steamboat men have been having with their negro roustabouts have been increased by the spread of the cocoaine habit among the negroes. When the cocoaine habit found its way among the negroes it is impossible to say, but is now the favorite mode by which they seek forgetfulness. It is as yet confined to the city negroes, but some of the planters have expressed the hope that the use of the drug be broken up in New Orleans before it reaches the cotton plantations. Whisky is bad enough, they say, but traffic in it can be controlled far more easily than the purchase and sale of cocaine tablets.

The tablets are composed of cocaine and phenacetine in about equal proportions. Some chemical genius discovered that phenacetine prolongs the effects of cocaine, and, as it is a much cheaper drug, it is used as an adulterant for the cocaine. When a negro roustabout has swallowed one of these tablets he seeks the most secluded part of the boat upon which he has shipped, and, hiding himself among the cargo, lies down and enjoys the vision of rest that the drugs cause. The effect is very like that of opium, only far less violent, more a restful, sleepy feeling. For a little while the cocaine fiend is as happy as a mortal can be, and he will probably keep on swallowing tablets until the mate comes around and finds him shirking duty and dreaming among the cotton bales, and administers a strong and effective antidote with the hickory stick which is his badge of authority. This continues throughout the roustabout's voyage, as long as the box of cocaine tablets holds out. When the box has run out he will play craps with the other "rousters" and buy more cocaine if he wins.

The evil has grown steadily of late, and a number of drug stores in the negro district do an immense business in cocaine. So large is the business that the average negro walks into a drug store and puts down a quarter or a half-dollar without a word and receives a box of cocaine tablets in return, the drug clerk knowing by intuition what he wants; or if the negro says anything it is likely to be only "Tabs."

The cocaine habit is most common among the river negroes, nearly all of whom are addicted to it. They take their cocaine in tablets. These are dissolved in a glass of whisky, if whisky is handy, but if not the tablet is swallowed. The city negroes, who use the drug less generally, take it in the form of crystals or powder, which is snuffed up the nose. The cocaine habit is fast driving out the morphine habit, which, however, never had much hold among the negroes. The cocaine can be taken so much more easily, and when mixed with phenacetine is cheaper.

A Legless Wheelbarrow.

Metal barrows are coming in slowly, but none the less surely, this being another of the many instances in which steel and structural iron are supplanting the time-honored wood. They are designed for work in mines, and being indestructible and cheap they are especially adapted for the use of contractors.

The body is hung very low, and is of such a shape and strength that little damage can be done to it, even though it be severely handled. The frame bars and handles are formed of one continuous piece of pipe. The wheel is also especially designed, the hub consisting of two interlocking clutches, between which the spokes, consisting of pieces of bar iron bent so as to form two spokes, are held. Not the least valuable feature of this barrow, the invention of William James Freed, of Eureka, Utah, is the fact that if damaged it can be repaired by ordinary mechanics, all the parts being simply put together and designed with that end in view.

The absence of legs, it will be noticed, is interesting, and allows the barrow to rest flat on the ground, so that it may be quickly and easily filled and dumped. The legs, it is asserted, are one of the weakest parts of the ordinary wheelbarrow, and are apt to become loose and rickety.

Teacher—How many of my scholars can remember the longest sentence they ever read? Billy—Please, mum, I can. Teacher—What! Is there only one? Well, William, you can tell the rest of the scholars the longest sentence you ever read. Billy—Imprisonment for life.—Tit-Bits.

Heart to Heart Confidences: Pertis Goodwin—Don't tell anybody, for the world! See this ring? Art Smasher slipped it on my finger last night. Meena Zevver—Yes, it's nice looking, but it will make a black circle around your finger before you've worn it a week. It did on mine.—Chicago Tribune.

The burglar listened. There was no noise. The family, at the supper table below, did not suspect his presence. Cautiously he threw back the bedclothes and opened the corn-husk mattress. "Shucks!" he muttered, huskily extracting a roll of bills and a box of jewelry; 'I had got all ready to say 'Excelsior!'"—Chicago Tribune.

"It is a constant wonder to me," said the student of human nature, "to see how quickly the minds of some men act. I met a man the other evening who had an intellectual grasp that was astounding. I met him in the hall just as he was reaching for an umbrella. 'Is that your umbrella?' he inquired. 'No,' replied I. 'In that case,' he answered, 'it's mine.'"

The Whale's Vitality.

Some light was thrown a few years ago upon the subject of the vitality of whales by finding one of these animals in Bering Sea in 1890 with a "toggle" harpoon head in its body bearing the mark of the American whaler Montezuma. That vessel was engaged in whaling in Bering Sea about ten years, but not later than 1854. She was afterward sold to the government and was sunk in Charleston harbor during the civil war to serve as an obstruction. Hence, it is estimated the whale must have carried the harpoon not less than thirty-six years.

Scrupulously Clean.

In the matter of personal cleanliness the Filipino is equaled only by the Japanese. Men, women and children seem to take pride in being clean; yet their houses are untidily kept, and they make not even the simplest kinds of sanitary arrangements.

A tender feeling for the wife of another man isn't legal tender.

HON. JAMES M. ROBINSON

He is Renominaued for a Third Time by Acclamation.

Not since the great democratic love feast at the renomination of Judge McClellan at Lagrange has there been such unanimity and good feeling as prevailed yesterday at the congressional convention at Fort Wayne. Go where you would, everybody was talking "Robinson," and democrats of all conditions and degrees considered no one else entitled to the place. The unwise old rule of limiting a member to two terms got its death blow, and none too soon, for it had nearly destroyed the democratic power in the Twelfth district.

The attendance at the meeting was large, and when Mr. Kaough, the district chairman, called the meeting to order and had the six counties called, everyone reported a full delegation. Hon. Walpole G. Colerick was made chairman of the meeting, and delivered a short speech which was a masterpiece of scholarly eloquence and was received with cheers. Editor Bryan of the Lagrange Democrat was made secretary and nominations declared in order. Hon. A. A. Adams of Columbia City took the floor and in a masterly and polished speech nominated Hon, James M. Robinson, present member, and the people's favorite, as he is a man of the people. At every point the speaker was generously applauded. At its conclusion other nominations were called for, and a member of the Allen county delegation arose and nominated Judge Samuel M. Hench. Judge Hench arose and in a brief speech withdrew his name, and requested that the nomination of Mr. Robinson be made unanimous, which was done with a shout that nearly lifted the roof. The meeting adjourned and a season of handshaking followed.

Everyone we spoke to is pleased with the result. and glad that we have at last got rid of our political old man of the sea, the "Third Term Hoodoo." We shall have more to say next week.

Timber Supply.

A single acre of Washington timber, recently measured by the Division of Forestry, contained 218,690 feet B. M. red fir, 11,000 feet of Hemlock, and 6,000 feet of cedar; making a total stand of 236,690 feet. The smallest fir on the acre was 3 feet in diameter and the largest, 8 feet. The height of the forest approximated 300 feet. The hemlock was scaled down to 20 inches in diameter and had it been scaled to 12 or 14 inches, as customary in the East, the stand would have been several thousand feet greater. This acre was measured near Wilkeson, Washington, about 30 miles from Tacoma.

Brave Men Fall

Victims to stomach, liver and kidney troubles as well as women, and all feel the results in loss of appetite, poisons in the blood, backache, nervousness, headache and tired, listless, run-down feeling. But there's no need to feel like that. Listen to J. W. Gardner, Idaville Ind. He says: "Electric Bitters are just the thing for a man when he is all run down, and don't care whether he lives or dies. It did more to give me new strength and good appetite than anything I could take. I can now eat anything and have a new lease on life." Only 50 cents at H. B. McCord's drug store. Every bottle guaranteed.

That 15 per cent Raise.

An explanation relating to the 15 per cent added to the Real Estate of the county by the State Board of tax commissioners is in order.

The 19th of last August the State Board of tax commissioners presented a statement of assessment to the Auditor in these words. DeKalb county increase 15 per cent on "Lands and improvements." By referring to Sec. 4, page 21, act of 1895, we found this construction of realty as follows:

For the purpose of taxation, real property shall include All Lands within the state and all buildings and fixtures thereon.

So I carried out the meaning of this notice as the statute construes the word "Lands." If the State Board meant something else, they failed to say so in their notice.

This notice was presented to our County Attorney who construed it as it was carried out. The notice with the footings of the assessors' books and also with the 15 per cent added was presented before the County Council who acted upon this valuation, that is, with the 15 per cent added on all in making the County Levy.

It was also brought before the Township Trustees who presented this valuation before their Advisory Board and upon which they made their Levies.

All our Town Boards considered this raised valuation in making their Levies. We tried to make this matter plain to everyone and thought it was fully understood all along the line before our tax duplicates were made out. So now it is a very late hour to begin kicking. Please understand that your taxes are not increased one cent by this raised valuation. To raise a certain amount of tax, if you have a high valuation you will have a low rate; and a low valuation will give you a high rate. To illustrate: Auburn has a level rate of $2 25 on every $100 at the present valuation. If the valuation had been considered at 15 per cent less the rate would have been $2 58, to raise the same amount of money. If some of your individual taxes in our towns are too high this inflated value is caused by your assessor listing your property too high.

Now under existing circumstances. I, as Auditor of DeKalb county, do not think that I have a Legal right to discharge a cent of this tax, as it can not be considered a mistake from this end of the line. The fault lies largely in the indefinite notice from the State Board. If this amount should have to be discharged our Town Boards would be obliged to raise the Levy next fall to make up the shortage.

When the Board of Review finished their work they considered the farm lands and towns on an equitable average. Now to relieve one part of the county at the expense of the other part, we do not believe to be right or just, and should we be obliged to discharge this 15 per cent on town property, we would consider the farmer paying more on his property than the man in the towns and cities. We believe in seeing every man and every part of the county treated alike.

But be it understood that should the proper authorities construe this to be illegal and that those interested should be released from this raised value, and will give me the proper order, I will issue discharges after this spring installment of taxes are paid. As it is now so near the close of this installment of taxpaying we would not want to mix this matter with the present installment.

I am very sorry that this misunderstanding should have happened just as it did. No one in particular is to blame for it. All that had seen the notice formed the same construction that I did. When it comes to the matter of loss, I will be by far the greater loser, assit costs me a great deal of time and money for my hired help to make all those changes in the towns and corporations. Any taxpayer wishing to know more about this matter, we will be pleased to explain it to him.

FRANK P. SEILER, Auditor.

Suicide at Helmer.

Word was received by Chris Ashelman this moring that his brother-in-law, Jacob Miller of near Helmer, commited suicide yesterday by drowning in Wood's lake near Helmer. No particulars were given, but as the deceased had been mentally unsound for several years it is supposed the act was committed during a fit of jusanity. Mr. Miller, who formerly resided near Corunna, was a wealthy farmer and at several times during the past few years has been an inmate of the asylum at Logansport. He leaves a wife and two children, beside numerous other relatives.

Miss Nelson Graduates.

We have received an invitation from Miss Olive Nelson, to attend the graduating exercises of Hahnemann Medical College of Chicago, which takes place at Steinway Hall, April 26. It is the fortieth annual commencement of the college, and Miss Nelson is one of forty-four students who graduate. Miss Nelson is well krown in all south DeKalb as an estimable lady and successful teacher. We join heartily in wishing her success in her profession.

L. L. C. Notes.

The club notes for the meeting of the L. L. C. of the 14th, which met with Mrs. Zimmerman, were not reported but will give a few brief notes in connection with the present report.

Two excellent papers were given. The first, "Imperialism," by Mrs. Zimmerman, was followed by a spirited discussion, each member having very decided opinions for or against. The other by Mrs. Mary F. Rose, entitled "Cuba; her Natural Resources and Products," was listened to with much interest as the subject, like the preceding one, is timely. The name of Miss May Rose was place on the waiting list for membership. After Current Events the club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Ford.

The meeting of last Saturday was a very pleasant one and was quite fully attended in spite of the rainy weather.

"The Relation of Literature to History" was the title of an excellent paper by Mrs. Emanuel and was freely commented upon and discuss. This was followed by a chatty paper by Mrs. Guild, entitled "Discontented People." Some personal experiences were given by different members of the club making the discussion very interesting.

The subject for the afternoon's discussion was "Equal Suffrage," led by Mrs. Lewis with a fine and well prepared paper full of convincing arguments as to the advisability and necessity of "Equal Suffrage." She then called on different members for opinions for or against the question. Very few were against it. The discussion was well conducted. The balloting for an alternate for the president of the meeting at Milwaukee resulted in the election of Mrs. Ralston. The club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Barns next Saturday.

The Best Blood Purifier.

The blood is constantly being purified by the lungs, liver and kidneys. Keep these organs in a healthy condition and the bowels regular and you will have no need of a blood purifier. For this purpose there is nothing equal to Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, one dose of them will do you more good than a dollar bottle of the best blood purifier. Price, 25 cents. His Wonderful Memory.

A schoolmaster who had been telling of the doings of Cæsar ended up with, "And all this happened over 1,500 years ago."

A little boy, his blue eyes wide open with wonder, said, after a moment's thought: "Oh, what a memory you've got!"—TitBits.

Paris Exposition.

Most of us who visited the world's fair at Chicago will expect a repetition, only on a grander scale, of the magnificent buildings with their individualistic types of architecture, the artificial lakes, landscape architecture and exquisite park effects of the Columbian exposition. In this, however, the Paris visitor is doomed to disappointment. Most of the exposition grounds are confied to Champ Mars, a rectangular area of eighty acres or more in the western part of the city, bordering on the south bank of the Seine river. Probably a half of the area is covered by the buildings. One would at first say by a building, for they are so compactly built that it is not till one gets among them that he discovers that they are separated into different structures at all. As a result of this compactness the buildings are massive and present a certain harmony of architecture that is almost sameness. While they are beautiful as a result of the elaborate external decorations, it was impossible to construct them in such varied styles and in such striking contrast one with another that was the chief charm of the exposition at Chicago.

In approaching the exposition grounds let us suppose that the traveler comes by boat down the Seine, which is the most delightful and convenient way to reach there. Let us suppose that he has boarded one of these delightful little steamers near the church of Notre Dame, which is of itself one of the most beautiful buildings in Paris, possibly in the world. The great and thrilling events that have taken place under her roof or within her shadows, events hat have to a great extent shaped the destinies of the world, would require volumes to describe. For the three miles of river ride in going from here to the exposition grounds one passes by some of the most famous spots in the world, places made famous by the events of world-wide importance that have taken place there.

To the south from the boat landing, and within plain view, though some distance back, is the Palace de Luxembourg, where the French senate holds its sessions. Passing down a few blocks on the left bank of the Seine stands the French Institute building, a central structure with two wings curving toward the river in a grand elliptical arc. Opposite to this is the palace of the Louvre on the right bank, and next to it the Tuilleries. At the end of the entrance of this palace stands the Arc de Triomph, built by Napoleon I, and for some distance beyond this extends the beautiful graden of the Tuilleries, terminating at the Place de Concord, formerly the Place de la Revolution, where took place some of the most thrilling and bloody scenes of the revolution. From here the river passes for a little way paralell to and but a little distance from the Champ Elyses with its beautiful gradens reaching almost to the banks of the Seine. A little further down we pass on the left bank the palace where the French Chamber of Deputies convenes. A little lower and on the right bank stands the magnificent new art palace which, though a permanent structure, is being hurried to completion and is to be used for the exposition. A little further down one sees some distance back from the left bank of the rive the Hotel des Invalides, with its beautiful gilded dome. On the grounds is built the exquisite mausoleum containing the remains of Napoleon I.

Soon after we reach our destination, Champ Mars, and disembark. We have passed under scores of beautiful stone arch bridges and almost the last, the magnificent steel arch span, the pont Alexander III.

Probably nowhere else in the world could one see so much of the beautiful in so short a steamboat ride. And nowhere else, except in Rome has been made within such limits so much of the world's history.

The one great structure that makes Champ Mars conspicuous, the structure that is the landmark for Parisians and the guide for strangers for miles around, is the lofty and beautiful Eiffel tower. It is nearly 1,000 feet high and twice as high as Washington's monument. It stands out on the left bank of the Seine. It is the first and last object that the visitor to the exposition wishes to see.

Doubtless the first day will be spent in making the ascent of Eiffel tower. He will from this point study his surroundings, the exposition grounds, the landmarks and objects of interest in the city, and then those of the surrounding country. He will study them from the first stage 250 feet high; from the second stage, which is double the height, and finally from the extreme top of the tower. At his feet and to the southward lie the exposition buildings. To the northward and just across the Seine on the opposite bank stands the palace of the Trocadero. This is a beatiful building surrounded by two towering turrets, with a wing and colonnade on either side swinging in a graceful curve around toward the river, enclosing a spacious plat in which there is a magnificent fountain and statuary. Beyond the Trocadero is the Etoile or Star in which stands the most beautiful triumphal arch in the world, built by Napoleon I, also.

It is fortunate that refreshment booths have been provided on every stage, for one will surely want to spend the entire day here, and at night when he is thoroughly weary he will leave these beautiful scenes reluctantly. Probably no day at the exposition will be so profitably spent as the day on Eiffel tower.

While, as I have said, the buildings and grounds of the exposition do not produce so agreeable an impression on the exterior as did the Columbian exposition on account of the limited space, Paris is of itself a continuous exposition. Its architecture, its historic buildings, its parks and spacious avenues, and its wealth of historic interest all combine to make it one of the most delightful cities in the world for tourists, and one of the most profitable. A trip to the Chicago fair could not be compared to it.

Last Day of School.

Friday, April 20, occurred a very pleasant surprise dinner at the Pyles school, district No. 6, Union township, which witnessed the closing exercises of Henry Krabill's term of school. Patrons and friends to the number of 130 came in a little before noon with a profusion of baskets full to the brim with chicken, cake, pie and a hundred other good thing for which the ladies of Pyles' Corners are noted and which virtually threatened to make all the tables groan. After the teacher recovered a little from his complete surprise the tables were tastefully and elegantly spread by the good ladies and their daughters and every person present invited to partake which they all did with a hearty good will and all did ample justice. The afternoon passed in friendly and social converse, followed by some very fine recitations, music and singing which all appreciated after which each person present was generously treated by the teacher, who also awarded some very elegant and useful prizes. The fortunate ones to win prizes were Miss Myrtle Hornberger and Master Frank Miller for getting the greatest number of head marks in spelling. Also Misses Artie Poorman, Myrtle Hornberger, Maud Poorman, Effie Gramling and Master William Gugerli for not being absent nor tardy during the term of eight months.

This ends one of the most successful terms in the history of our school. Mr. Krabill is one of the oldest continuous teachers in DeKalb county, having taught in the Pyles district alone 32 months, during which time he has raised the standard of our school to an excellence of which we can all feel justly proud. He has also turned out a remarkably large number of graduates who have all been conspicuous for their success in their different occupations of life. He is a natural born teacher and is at home in the school room. He possesses the skill and the enthusiasm of the true instructor with the genius to instill his knowledge into the minds of his pupils.

Mr. Krabill has received the unanimous and urgent request of every patron and pupil of the district to take charge of the school again next year. We are also proud to say that Mr. Krabill, by his integrity and exemplary conduct enjoys the good opinion, confidence and respect of the entire community. We are also glad to recommend him as an instructor of high and superior order and an exceptionally fine disciplinarian. ***

Surprised.

Saturday evening, April 21, 1900, the neighbors and friends of Mrs. George Ditmars and Mrs. F. W. Olinger, came and announced to them that it was their 26 and 28 birthday anniversary. They brought well filled baskets, which we all enjoyed, making us feel glad that we were there. When the time came to adjourn Mrs. Ditmars was presented with a fine stand lamp and Mrs. Olinger with a toilet set and other useful articles. Those present were:

ONE WHO WAS THERE.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern in the land who are not afraid to be generous to the needy and suffering. The proprietors of Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles of this great medicine; and have the satisfaction of knowing it has absolutely cured thousands of hopeless cases. Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness and all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs are surely cured by it. Call on H. B. McCord, druggist, and get a free trial bottle. Regular size 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed or price refunded.

Another Solution.

Mr. Beadle has already given a solution to the stamp question proposed by H. A. Winslow. Brown Albright gives his, now, which as will be seen contains three different answers:

He could with $2.98 cents buy 31 one-cent stamps, 15 two-cent stamps and 79 three-cent stamps.

Or, 61 one-cent, 30 two-cent, 59 three-cent stamps.

Or, 121 one-cent, 60 two-cent and 19 three-cent stamps.

A Testimonial from England.

"I consider Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the best in the world for bronchitis," says Mr. Wm. Savory of Warrington, England. "I has saved my wife's life, she having been a martyr to bronchitis for over six years, being most of the time confined to her bed. She is now quite ell. Sold by H. B. McCord.

Stomachs Made New.

Dr. Stone's Discoveries in Regard to Stomach and Liver Troubles Are of Importance to Everybody who Cares to Get Well or Keep Well.

If you will stop to think, you will agree with Dr. Stone when he says that no organic diseases are possible so long as the stomach does its work properly. Our bodies are wearing out every day, and every day are building anew—if the stomach supplies the material. When indigestion stops the material for repair, then comes the other things. The heart is weakened and we have palpitation or fluttering. The kidneys lose tone, and we are warned by a pain in the back, scanty, high colored urine. The blood becomes impure and we have sores or eruptions, the mind is dulled and our energy disappears. The liver is weakened and the bowels are constipated or irregular, and our skin becomes dull or sallow. Restore the working power of the stomach and all these conditions depart.

Dr. Stone clinches his argument by offering to prove to anyone that nine-tenths of the cases where these conditions are present can be benefited almost at once and permanently cured in a short time by treating the stomach. If you have dyspepsia, indigestion, sour stomach, or if you have pain or distress after eating, you also have liver, heart or kidney trouble to some extent. If you have not now, you will have unless your stomach is made right. Dr. Stone in his thirty years practice has cured thousands of cases where all these troubles were present. He cured them by restoring their digestion and by stimulating their lives to renewed activity. The treatment which has made him such a wonderfully successful specialist in the cure of stomach troubles is now offered to you in Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure. Those who have suffered long cannot dream of what a difference it will make in their lives to have a sound digestion once more. But they can get a taste of the satisfaction by a few days trial of the remedy and can realize the joy of living to the fullest by faithful use of it until cured.

IT IS GUARNTEED

Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure is guaranteed. Go back to your druggist and get your money if you fail to receive benefit. Price 50 cents. Sold by H. B. McCord.

BUTLER.

Rev. Frech of the M. E. church was prevented from filling his pulpit last Sunday on account of continued illness. His wife left the bedside of her sick mother at Decatur and came home to care for him.

Last Sabbath was a "dry" church day The doors of the five churches were all closed on account of the different ministers being out of town. The store box orators said they had all gone fishing.

Butler has a woman who formerly sneaked her mother's sperm candles, hid under the bed and ate them with a relish.

Mr. Taylor, who formerly lived on the south side where his wife died last summer, left Butler some months ago and obtained employment in Cleveland where he died a few days ago. His remains were brought to Butler. He had no relatives. Mr. Hamlin took charge of the obsequies.

Peter Teutsch has moved to town and occupies his father's late residence on West Ninth street.

Daniel Bordner, living five miles southeast of town, is dangerously sick with meager hopes of recovery.

Mrs. Hamilton and her grand-daughter, Vera Campbell, are still visiting in Napoleon, Ohio.

The grand old parties each placed tickets in the field last week for town officers. The republicans placed Martin Everett and Louis Henning for councilmen; Rlaph Kinney for clerk; R. C. Campbell for treasurer and Milton Hiner for marshal. The democrats placed Jay Norford and W. H. Owen for councilmen; Ward A. Smith for clerk; Herman Hirsch for treasurer and Charley Wagner for marshal. The contest will most likely be spirited

Forty years ago two of Jooseph Brown's boys, John and Jerome, came home from the woods with some nice smooth willow switches. One of them (they dispute which one) stuck his switch in the ground. It grew, and came near driving them from home. Its first act of aggression was to choke up the well nearby with its horse-tail-like roots. Then its roots spread far and wide reaching another well a full hundred feet away. It is still vigorous and shades a space more than fifty feet in diameter. Its trunk has attained the enormous diameter of at least six feet and is still growing.

If there is one adage we heed more than any other, it is this.....

"Good Well Bought are Half Sold."

Many merchants are content to accept almost any and everything the manufacturer or jobber sends them. Not so with us. Morchandise received by us must be up to samples from which we have ordered, or back it goes. We make it a point to buy from the most reliable firms. People who are willing to say, "If this does not prove to give the best satisfaction, ask your customers to return same to you and we will stand the loss"

We exercise the greatest care in selecting—making sure that we are getting the

Stylish Colorings, Fabrics Weaves and Makes

Next comes the price. The large amount of merchanise we dispose of, coupled with the fact that we discount our bills, makes our discount valuable and consequently much sought for.

Close competition gives the advantage of securing the lowest price to be had. Occupying the largest store, carrying the largest stock, giving you the closest prices and absolutely guaranteeing every article we sell, makes this a perfect store in which to buy

Dry Goods, Clothing, Gents' Furnishings, Ladies' Suits, Carpets, Curtains, Furniture

We Wish To See You Often,

SCHAAB & BRO,

AUBURN, IND.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO

...if you KNEW how you could save a few dollars just as well as not? You would save them of course. What would you do if you THOUGHT you could save a few dollars? You would try it, of course. What can we say to make you THINK we can save money for you, on all goods purchased of us? We KNOW it and after one trial you will KNOW it too. If you THINK we might save money for you, come and see us, and then you will KNOW it.

IF YOU ARE NOT PLEASED with any purchase at this store we will gladly exchange it. In business the foundation of success is satisfaction of patrons, it is the upbuilding of any business.

Wedding Bells.

At the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kester, April 11, at high noon occured the marriage of their only daughter, Della M., to Albert N. Peters. After a wedding march by Pearl Koch the contracting parties entered the parlor attended by the bridesmaid, Miss Effie Stafford, and Edwin Peters, brother of the groom, and took their places beneath an arch of lace and carnations where a very impressive wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. E H. Peters of Decatur. The bride was elegantly attired in white satin tastefully trimmed in lace and ribbon. The bridesmaid appeard in an elegant fawn colored tailor-made suit; the bride and bridesmaid also wore white carnations in their hair. The groom and groomsman wore the customary black. After congratulations the guests were invited to the dining room to partake of a dinner which is seldom surpassed by culinary art. The table was tastefully decorated with white carnations After all had enjoyed the sumptuous repast they were entertained by vocal and instrumental music rendered by Edwin Peters, who is a skillful performer in music. In this way the day drew to a close much too soon.

The bride and groom are among our most prominent young people. The bride is one of DeKalb county's successful teachers and the groom a rising young farmer. Mr and Mrs. Peters enter married life under very happy auspices on a farm of their own. Numerous and costly presents were received including rockers, mantle clocks, beautiful rugs, silverware, china sets, parlor lamp, table linen, small sums of money, and other articles too numerous to mention. About 40 guests were present, among whom were the bride's grandparents Mr. and Mrs Solomon Shilling; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kester, Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Peters, Edwin and Chas. Peters, Misses Sarah and Golden Peters, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Krabill, son Paul and little daughters Agnes, Alien and Princess Beatrice; Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Shilling, son Cecil and daughter Lela; Wm. and John Shilling, Mr. and Mrs. A. Shilling and son Howard, Mr. and Mrs. John Koch and daughter Pearl, Mr. and Mrs. Prine Ferguson, Miss Minnie Kester, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Huffman, Mr. and Mrs. Will Farmer, Philip Squires, and Rev. and Mrs. Peters, and son Clarence. K

Best Remedy for Rheumatism.

Quick relief from pain. All who use Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism are delighted with the quick relief from pain which it affords. When speaking of this Mr. D. N. Sinks of Troy, Ohio, says: "Some time ago I had a severe attack of rheumatism in my arm and shoulder. I tried numerous remedies, but got no relief until I was recommended by Messrs. Geo. F. Parsons & Co., druggists of this place, to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. They recommended it so highly that I bought a bottle. I was soon relieved of all pain. I have since recommended this liniment to many of my friends, who agree that it is the best remedy for muscular rheumatism in the market." For sale by H. B. McCord.

Caught a Dreadful Cold.

Marion Kooke, manager for T. M. Thompson, a large importer of fine millinery at 1,658 Milwaukee Avenue, Chicago, says: "During the late severe weather I caught a dreadful cold which kept me awake at night and made me unfit to attend my work during the day. One of my milliners was taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a severe cold at that time, which relieved her so quickly that I bought some for myself. It acted like magic and I began to improve at once. I am now entirely well and feel very pleased to acknowledge its merits." For sale by H. B. McCord.

WHERE MOTHERS FAIL.

TOO many mothers do not realize that there are any problems in their relationship with their grown daughters," says Temple Bailey in the Woman's Home Companion, writing of "Some Mothers and Their Daughters." "The training of little children is discussed as an all-important topic. Why should not the delicate questions which must arise in every household where two or more women of strong personality live in constant and close contact receive just as careful consideration? It is after the school days that the troubles begin. The mother who has clung to her little girl fails to recognize the needs of the growing woman, and is hurt by any independent action on the part of the daughter; while the daughter, in her eagerness to grasp at the best in the new life, forgets the deference which is due to the mother. Out of these conditions small clashings ensue, to end too often in complete discord. It is just at this time that the mother must bring all her love and diplomacy to bear. She must endeavor to know her daughter's nature, and to understand its possibilities and limitations. She will find that her problems are not the problems of her mother nor of her grandmother, for the girl of to-day is not like the girl of yesterday, and she must be studied from a different standpoint. The most unpleasant of all things American is the dominant daughter. Brilliant, restless and discontented, she demands all things as her right rather than as a privilege. The time-honored tale of the mother at the washtub and the daughter at the piano is verified in the mental attitude of many households. There are two things that the mother of such a daughter should cultivate—a quiet dignity which shall force the girl's respect, and a sympathy which shall win her heart. She must be interested in that which interests the younger mind. And she must not be dominated. Her self-assertion need not and should not be radical, but she must be queen of her own household, yielding her scepter to none, and especially not to her inexperienced daughter."

Found Official Friends.

Pretty Georgianna Ward, 16, who was detained in Camden, N. J., while fleeing from the alleged harsh treatment of her parents in Tom's River, N. J., made such an impression on the Camden officials by her beauty and nice manners that two of them offered to adopt her into their own families. Her parents tried by endearments to induce her to return home, but she refused indignantly, and they had her placed in a convent of the Good Shepherd. The offers of the officials were refused by the parents. The girl is an accomplished musician, and was a great favorite in her home town.

MISS WARD.

Telling Secrets.

Every one of us has moments of a temporary enlargement of the heart when alone with some cherished friend, and often at that time and in that condition we are so far left to ourselves as to breathe forth a confidence that in days to come—perhaps almost as soon as it is spoken—we would give much to have back again in our sole possession, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. We marvel at our own indiscretion and lack of wisdom, with a reactionary shrinking of the heart which is absolute physical pain. The saddest part of it is that even that experience does not always prove the successful teacher, but we do the same thing over again until some day the bitter cup of our indiscreet sowing is fully reaped.

My Lady's Beauty.

Beauty is but skin deep? No so—
Real beauty's root lies deeper!
Within the soul—beyond the reach
Of Time, the ruthless reaper
Of roses of the flesh—it springs
And flowers in all the being
Of her with whose sweet eyes and voice
Her deeds are e'er agreeing.

Her beauty is the harmony
Evolved by lovely living;
The years that rob her sisters seem
A new charm to be giving
To her the pure embodiment
Of womanly perfection,
Whose love-lit face is of her soul
The radiant reflection!
—Mary Norton Bradford.

A Successful Artist.

Miss Emily Sartain, principal of the School of Design for Women, has been appointed one of the official delegates to represent the United States at the International Congress on Instruction in Drawing to be held in Paris next August. Miss Sartain is a preeminently successful artist and teacher. She is known not only in this country, but in Europe, and her selection to represent America at the international congress is everywhere approved.

MISS SARTAIN.

Absence of Variety.

Pretty women do not generally realize what an attraction there is in change. A dress that is becoming is worn again and again, and therefore loses its charm, whereas if it were contrasted with a different style it would keep its effect much longer. It is even a mistake to do one's hair always in the same way. A famous novelist in one of his books makes his heroine when at the zenith of her social success and happiness change the fashion of dressing her hair almost daily—not out of vanity, but by the instinct of coquetry. He knew that thereby she rendered herself more attractive.

Even a pretty room looks better if the furniture is not always placed in the same position, and the ornaments are occasionally rearranged. Our eyes are like our palate in desiring change and variety. The most beautiful woman or the most delicious food becomes monotonous if always the same.

A White Summer.

It is evidently going to be a white summer, for there will be more white gowns worn than ever before, not only white muslins, and lawns, and ducks, but white serges, and camel's hairs and alpacas. The summer girl this year will wear a white serge skirt with her shirt waists, instead of a navy blue, and white cashmeres, crepes, wool muslins and foulards will be all the rage. Some of the newest models in white mohair and lace show black velvet garnitures, and these make them stunning. Entire gowns of white wash silk with ruffles and fichu are to be popular, and they have sashes of the same with ruffled ends. These are tied tightly about the waist with a knot at one side and the ends hanging down in front.

Southern Writer.

Mrs. Elizabeth Fry Page, who writes charming stories and sketches, is noted for her versatility. She found herself short of copy one day while editing the Southern Florist and Gardener, and had to write most of the number herself, writing in all thirty-two articles, each signed with a different name. That number was more highly complimented than any other, on account of the variety of its contents. Mrs. Page presides over a beautiful home in Nashville, Tenn., and is thoroughly domestic, although she holds the editorship of the Pythian Review.

MRS. PAGE.

Shirt Waist Hint.

Be careful, all ye who are making over your shirt waists upon the newest model, without a yoke in the back, that you have not that back between the shoulders unlined. Protection is necessary in all such cases. Across the shoulders underneath all these unyoked shirt waists, there should be another piece of the goods, reaching not a third of the way down the back, but far enough to prevent any perils that might accrue from an unlined waist over bare shoulderblades. In flannel waists this precautionary shoulder piece is of silk, the precise shade of the flannel. Wash waists simply have a piece of their own goods.

Women Not Cowardly.

When cowardice is described as a leading feminine attribute somebody makes a huge mistake. Women do the most daring things on record—take chances which would appall a man. They may jump at the sight or mere mention of a harmless mouse, but they court death several times a year. It is one of the traits which makes feminine nature so puzzling. I have known women who were timid to a degree, under ordinary circumstances, come forth as heroines under the pressure of occasion. A woman who shudders at the sight of a small cut from which blood oozes will often exhibit a marvelous courage in a shocking accident. It is beautiful to think that dependence can be placed upon the sex in times of need.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

To Clean Chamois Gloves.

Make a strong suds with white castile soap and to two quarts of the suds add two teaspoonfuls of borax that has previously been dissolved in hot water. Let the suds get cold. Put the gloves on the hands and wash them carefully, as if washing the hands. Rinse in clear water and remove gently and put in a shady place to dry. When nearly dry pull them into shape. Rub them between the hands when they are dry to soften them.

It has been stated repeatedly that the first seven years of a child's life cover sufficient ground in the formation of character practically to decide its future in so far as the child's higher attributes are concerned. Largely influenced by this assumption, the mothers of to-day devote a great deal of attention to the training of the baby from the day of its arrival. The baby understands that when it is laid in the cradle, comfortable, warm and well nourished, it must go to sleep. This habit is established as soon as the small tyrant finds that lamentations are unavailing to secure for it the rocking to sleep or the enjoyment derived from making the weary mother walk the floor for hours.

Sometimes it is hard to make the misled but tender-hearted parents understand how soon good habits can be established if firmly persisted in, and a young mother recently experienced considerable trouble in convincing the father of the child that it must not be rocked to sleep. "I really can't stand hearing that poor baby cry," he said, when the child lifted up its voice and wept to be taken up. "She will only cry a few times," urged the mother. "Please don't break up her training at the very beginning." "Well, if you can stand it, I can't," said the husband, who was quite "broken up" with grief and sympathy for the shrieking morsel of humanity. "I don't see how you can bear to hear that child cry, and I'm going out of the house while this 'training' business goes on." And out he went.

Some men regard debts as creditable.

MARVEL AMONG MEN.

PASSES 800,000 VOLTS OF ELECTRICITY THROUGH HIS BODY.

Before a Gathering of Medical Men a St. Louis Doctor Proves that High Voltage Currents Are Not Necessarily Death Dealing.

Dr. Heber Roberts, of St. Louis, before a gathering of medical men in that city recently, proved that 800,000 volts of electricity could be passed through the human body without injury to it, and that the popular belief that high voltage currents were death dealing is a fallacy. According to Dr. Roberts, the injurious possibilities of a current depends upon its amperage, and the voltage when properly handled is without the power to kill or even injure any one. The experimenter attracted much interest among professional men in that city and will no doubt create widespread interest throughout the country among students of electrical therapeutics. In the course of these experiments Dr. Roberts sent a current through his body and thence to a Crooks tube. In this he created an X-ray by means of which a photograph of a hand was taken, showing perfectly its skeleton. The X-ray was of rare brilliancy and penetrating power. But even were this not true the feat would be remarkable in that he is the first man to ever make himself the conductor of a current of electricity of great power enough to create an X-ray.

DR. ROBERTS RECEIVES 800,000 VOLTS OF ELECTRICITY.

The secret of Dr. Roberts' success in his experiments is that he employed what is known to be a static current through his body. The static current has no volume, but great power. It is not the potential energy that kills, but the volume. This may be illustrated by an analogy. A needle might be passed through the body with great rapidity and power, but it would not be as harmful as a thousand needles passed through slowly and with little power. In other words, the power, the voltage, has nothing whatever to do with the physiological effect. It is the number of needles, the amperage. Still the experiment is not without danger. It requires a nice adjusment of machinery to produce the proper kind of current. It requires a thorough knowledge of certain conditions to apply the current perfectly. It requires a familiarity with electric currents to prevent shock. To Dr. Roberts it had little or no danger. "The idea of passing an X-ray current through my body was conceived," Dr. Roberts explained, "while I was making experiments in electrical therapeutics. I became convinced that it could be done if the current were produced by a static machine, and I immediately proceeded to do it. Static currents have no volume and therefore do not kill. The only effect they can produce is that of a slight burning. I was used to this sensation from handling the machine in my practice, and consequently the powerful X-ray stream did not give me the slightest pain.

"In the static current the medical profession has exactly what it needs to balance. The static current is electricity restrained in a condition of high tension. It is sometimes called Franklinic because Franklin demonstrated its identity with terrestrial electricity. It is electrical pressure without volume. It is almost free from amperage and consists almost wholly of voltage. Poetically, it is the great invisible messenger for light, heat and electricity from the tangible storehouse of nature. The generating of the static current is simple. An initial charge of electricity must be imparted to the armature or receiving part of the machine. The plates are set in motion with artificial power. About the revolving plates a certain multiplication of the certain electricities takes place by the influence of one charged body upon another, with the resulting output of static currents depending upon speed, number of and diameter of plates and atmospheric conditions. This machine, which is not more than five feet long, six feet high and three feet wide, is capable of generating 10,000,000 volts of electricity. Anybody could do the same thing under the same conditions. This machine while throwing off a prodigious amount of energy, is much like a serpent whose fangs have been removed. The major portion of its destructive force is subdued because its amperage is small, owing to its peculiar construction. Of course, it would be dangerous for a novice to attempt to perform this experiment. He would probably be painfully injured and worse consequences might ensue. The experimenter must have perfect knowledge and control of the machine. He must also have accustomed himself to electric currents, for there would be great shock to one unused to it upon getting into the circuit of an X-ray stream. These two conditions complied with, I see no reason why anybody should not perform this feat."

There were other interesting experiments performed by Dr. Roberts along the same line. In one of these he placed a patient on a table set on legs of the purest electrical glass. Running from the electrodes on the front of the machine was a copper bar, four feet long. One end of it rested on the wooden floor of the table upon which the patient sits. The patient then placed his foot upon the end of the bar and held it there, making the connection for the current. It was not necessary for him to remove his shoes or any part of his clothing. When the current was turned into him the only sensation he had consisted in the hair becoming erect and rigid. This was caused by the exit of the current which, passing through the cells of the hair and filling them, stiffens them until they looked like tiny bars of iron. In the case of a woman her hair would have stood straight out after this fashion, even though it be four feet in length. "I made a photograph the other day of a woman whose hair is twenty inches long while she was sitting in this current," said Dr. Roberts. "If the hair is wet while the patient is in the pool, and the room is darkened, it will glow with a brilliant blue flame. The other day I placed a man on the table and turned the current into him. He had previously stripped to the waist, and wet the hair upon his face, head and chest. When the current began its passage through him he became ghostly in appearance. His beard, head and chest were wreathed in blue flame. Yet he did not feel the slightest disagreeable sensation. Another peculiar feature about this static current is that whenever it finds a point for exit it becomes a blue flame, one-half inch in length. It has heat, yet it does not burn the person from whom it passes." The discovery of Dr. Roberts should be very valuable in the application of electricity to therapeutics.

Frog Showers in Arizona.

Every once in a while stories are brought out about extraordinary showers of fish, of bloody snow, etc., the latest being of a ship captain far out on the Atlantic who ran into a dust shower so heavy he had to set his crew shoveling the dust from the decks when the weight began to get dangerous. To this be there added a tale:

"It rains frogs in Arizona. The oldtimers believe there is no doubt of it, though they can not explain from whence the frogs were originally 'lifted.' But this much is straight—let there be a summer rain along the line of the Southern Pacific in southwestern Arizona, and behold, the next morning every little pool has a myriad of little lean green frogs, with marvelous croaking powers. They don't wait for nightfall like their more civilized brethren elsewhere, but keep up the music by day as by night. They live where water comes only about once a year.

"They can't live over the interim under the sun-baked rocks; they assuredly haven't hopped from the Colorado River, and they are all of a size, to boot. If they didn't come from the ground or from the river, they must have come from the skies. And that's what the Hassayampers firmly believe."—Arizona Graphic.

Herb Farms.

There are several kinds of farms, profitable ones, too, of which little mention is made to the public. Many herbs are grown on farms devoted to them, and they are a product not overdone by growers. In New York are acres devoted to the growth of peppermint. In Illinois are farms where the castor bean is raised for the castor oil that it contains. Many farms which have lost their productiveness could be made to grow sage, catnip, thoroughwort, and the other vegetable necessities of the pharmacopoeia. The business is one of the few that are not ruined by competition. Rose farms are to be found in different sections of the country, and there is a sweetness in this method of earning a livelihood, although that is not all there is in it by a good deal. In California some rose farms are carried on to raise roses for rose jelly.

Both Vegetarian and Cyclist.

Count Tolstoi is an enthusiastic cyclist. He declares that he has to thank his bicycle and his vegetarian diet for the robust health which he has so long enjoyed. Twenty years ago his physician advised Tolstoi to avoid too much muscular exercise, but the patient was obstinate, and did exactly the contrary; in fact, he has ever been a lover of sports of different kinds.

KINGS AS PRISONERS.

RULERS WHO HAVE FALLEN INTO ENGLAND'S HANDS.

How Britain Treats Her Royal Captives, of Whom She Has Had Several Within a Very Few Years—General Cronje at St. Helena.

An insight may be gained as to treatment in store for leaders of the Boer republics who may suffer defeat and fail to escape into either German or Portuguese territory by comparison with that of princes and kings held captive heretofore by the British government. In 1849 when the State of Maharajah Dhuleep Singh was finally annexed to the Indian empire, that potentate was "requested" to take up his residence in England—the inducement of a ready compliance being added by the promise of a yearly income of $240,000, with nothing at all as an alternative. Dhuleep Singh wisely acquiesced, purchased the fine estate of Brandon in Norfolk, upon which he resided for many years as a wealthy English country gentleman.

Though during this period the maharajah frequently expressed the desire to revisit his native country, professing the utmost loyalty to the empress queen, yet he was never permitted to travel east of the isthmus of Suez. In this case the bond seems to have descended upon the heads of his children, for while his sons have entered the British army and one of them, Prince Victor, recently married the daughter of the Earl of Coventry, yet they have never been allowed to set eyes on the land over which their ancestors ruled.

Approaching Calcutta on the left bank of the Hujli River at Garden Beach the visitor will have pointed out the fine palace of the late Wajid Ali, King of Oudh. There from 1856 until a recent date this prince was held in semi-captivity upon an annual allowance of $600,000, the only proviso as to his freedom of action being that he should not leave the vicinity of Calcutta. The King of Oudh, true to these prodigal hereditary instincts which brought about his downfall, not only managed to expend this large sum, but in the keeping of snake mounds, menageries and other costly forms of amusement dear to the oriental mind was obliged to draw frequently upon the imperial treasury for further amounts. The generosity and leniency with which he was thus treated was probably due to the fact that he offered no armed resistance to his own deposition. Blazing with jewels and seated in a smart equipage, with servants in royal liveries, the King of Oudh was often a conspicuous figure on the Calcutta maidan—the famous park where the society of the Indian capital takes an outing after the heat of the day has passed.

Far different was the fate of the poor old Bahadur Shah, last of the Great Moguls. After the fall of Delhi in 1851 he was tried for high treason and sent as a state prisoner to Rangoon. There, in a small hut, the only lineal descendant of Shah Jehan and Aurangzeb passed the remainder of his days, unnoticed and upon a mere pittance. As, however, both of his sons were slaughtered and a less culpable rebel leader, Tantia Topi, was executed, he may have thought himself fortunate to escape with his life.

Near Colombo, in Ceylon, England still holds in light durance Arabi Pasha and his colleagues of the Egyptian rebellion of 1882. While Arabi has not ceased to bemoan his fate and uselessly petition the British government for permission to return to Egypt, yet, considering the nature of his offense, and that he was sentenced to death, his lot cannot be considered burdensome. Provided with an income sufficient for his wants, a pleasant residence, permission accorded him to receive visitors and a considerable measure of freedom within the district, he would undoubtedly have been worse off had his successful enemies been his own race and religion.

Of minor potentates England has at present one African, being confined to the limits of that island in the South Atlantic made famous as the prison of the great Napoleon, and another even the far less desirable residence of Cape Coast Castle. For several years Cetewayo, king of the Zulus, was held an unresighed prisoner at Ghowe, near the scene of the present military operations in Natal, where he died before the promise of restoration to his throne was carried into effect.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

INGENIOUS NEW SHOES.

One Has Pneumatic Soles and the Other Opens at the Back.

A French inventor has just patented a shoe with pneumatic soles. The air chamber is contained between an upper and lower sole, and is so arranged that a new supply of air can be pumped into it from a valve opening at the heel. It is claimed that a man wearing a pair of these shoes will be saved the constant jar resulting from walking over hard pavements, and that consequently his health will be greatly improved and his life prolonged. They are particularly recommended for use by city dwellers and by those whose business requires them to be constantly on their feet.

A Chicago man has just secured a patent on a shoe which opens at the back instead of the front, as is customary. The part which serves as a tongue in the new arrangement is so large that when it is unfastened it gives free access to the shoe, so that the foot can be slipped in over the counter. Instead of laces or buttons the shoe is fastened with ball fasteners, one row on either side fastening on to the tongue or "quarter," thus securing the shoe to the foot and doing away with overlapping edges.

What has become of the old-fashioned man who went to nearly every public gathering looking for a fight?

MONOPOLY IN CABLE BUILDING.

England Alone Can Lay Telegraph Lines Across the Great Oceans.

There are no American makers of ocean cable, so the insertion of a clause in the Pacific cable bill by the House Committee on Commerce, providing that "the cable shall be of American make, and that the cable ships shall fly the American flag," is considered by President Scrymser of the Pacific Cable Company to be likely to affect the rapidity and thoroughness of the work.

He said to-day: "We in America never have done that work, and the plants, the capital and, above all, the experience, which are required for ocean cable-making cannot be improvised under the touch of a government undertaking. A look at the history of cable-making for ocean lines will show why we haven't done the work and why we cannot do it offhand, even if we try.

"Practically all ocean cables, from the first transatlantic line in 1857 up to the present day, have been made in England, and English firms have a practical monopoly of the experience. The first Atlantic cable was made by Glass, Eliot & Co. The failure of this and the loss of the second resulted in the formation of a great company—the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company—backed by great capital, and this company made a success of the third cable and gave impetus to further work of the sort. But the necessary experience had been expensive and England was the first to acquire it. Then, in 1870, when England paid $60,000,000 for the land telegraph lines of the islands, that capital went at once into plants and ships for making and laying ocean cable. Thus England had the lead. To make the cable in America we would have to have a big plant and a good many men of practical experience in such work.

"For this, a large investment, far into the millions, would be required, and if the cable, when laid, should fail in any way, its makers would suffer a dead loss of all their work and have to replace the cable at their own cost. Then there must be some ten ships of at least 4,500 tons specially constructed for the work. Each ship requires a full outfit of apparatus for every branch of the work and to be manned by men of experience. All this equipment is found only in England. Evidence of this appears in the course taken by Germany in the matter of the new German cable to New York, via the Azores. Germany wanted a cable she could be sure of and wanted it quickly—just the situation at present of the United States. She guarantees about 7 per cent. of the whole cost, and then the cable is made in England. That shows the German appreciation of this need of experience and great equipment."—New York Evening Post.

Would Beg Him to Shoot.

This young fellow is engaged to a pretty Detroit girl, but they don't care to publish the bans until after Lent, says the Detroit Free Press. This disturbs an irascible old uncle of hers, who has a daughter of his own, too much after his own style to be a favorite. He took it upon himself to send for the young man the other day.

"Are you going to marry that niece of mine?" he asked sternly, when they were alone in the inner office.

"Pardon me, sir, but I must decline to answer. She has a father and a mother, and I'm on good terms with them. I fail to see that it is your affair."

"There's a whole lot that you fail to see, young man. I'm really the head of our family, and I'll not shirk my duty. Her parents are a couple of chumps. Are you or are you not engaged?"

"You force me to say, sir, that it is none of your infernal business, and that you are just what I thought you were, a sour, cross-grained old curmudgeon."

"See here, sonny, I'll not bandy words with the likes of you, but if you had been going with my daughter as long as you have my niece I wouldn't do a thing but put a revolver to your head, informing you that if you didn't marry her I'd shoot."

"And I'd beg of you to shoot."

Very Complimentary Advice.

Through carelessness on the part of the committee of a well-known London club, and some dexterous wire-pulling by the individual concerned, an exceedingly unpopular man contrived to secure his election; but he soon made himself generally obnoxious to his fellow-members by continually posing and swaggering on the steps at the entrance.

One morning, not long after he had taken up his customary position, a prominent member of the club, whom we will call Major Dash, came up the steps, and in passing him said, with quiet sarcasm:

"I say, K——, I could get subscriptions to the tune of five hundred pounds for you in the club if you would only take your name off the books."

K—— rushed off in a tremendous rage to a friend of his with the story.

"What do you think?" he shouted. "I have been outrageously insulted by that Major Dash. He has just said that if I would take my name off the club books he would get up a subscription of five hundred pounds for me. What would you do?"

"Well," replied his friend, "if I were you, I wouldn't take it. You stand out a bit, and you'll get a thousand."

Over Sweetened.

The coffee is always good in the Transvaal, but usually over-sweetened. When any guest is in a Dutch housewife's good books she shows her appreciation of him by loading his cup of coffee with sugar, which he must drink, unless he desires to upset her easily aroused susceptibilities.

Healthy to Yawn.

"Not only is it healthy to yawn," says a French physician, "but artificial yawning should be resorted to in cases of sore throat, buzzing of the ears, catarrh and like trouble." It is said to be as efficacious in its way as gargling the throat, with which process it should be combined.

SERMONS OF THE WEEK

Truth.—Truth is one and immutable, but man progresses in apprehension of it.—Rev. Geo. H. Trever, Methodist, Milwaukee, Wis.

Preacher and Editor.—The preacher and editor will remain distinct. Each has a life work, and each must do his own.—Rev. S. H. Cox, Congregationalist, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Our Souls.—We should enlighten our souls through the revelations which God has given us in his word, in his son, and in his providence.—Rev. D. C. MacLeod, Presbyterian, Washington, D. C.

Good Titles.—The value of an article is determined by its title. We can't get good titles to any part of this world. God has never given or deeded it away. —Rev. F. P. Spencer, Methodist, Atlanta, Ga.

Christian Workers.—Although the Christian workers to-day meet with much opposition and criticisms they will in the end come out conquerors in the fight.—Rev. A. H. Allen, Presbyterian, Troy, N. Y.

Confession.—Contrition or sorrow for sin is the essential life of this sacrament. Without true abiding sorrow for sins committed confession would be a form.—Rev. F. H. Gavisk, Roman Catholic, Indianapolis, Ind.

Science and Religion.—In the period of development everything has changed —science and religion have undergone tremendous changes, and these changes have not yet resulted in perfection.—Rev. Dr. Broughton, Baptist, Atlanta, Ga.

First Principles.—Cling to first principles and don't worry about non-essentials. Grasp the great truths. Hold to eternal verities. Use the positive method in the treatment of sin.—Rev. D. C. Garrett, Episcopalian, San Francisco, Cal.

An Aid to Civilization.—Women who entered the industrial world were an aid to civilization. While they lowered the wages of men, their moral status was high and benefit would accrue.—Rev. Henry Frank, Independent, New York City.

Nature.—The ancient Hebrews were deeply stirred by the phenomena of nature which they saw about them. They felt keenly the blessings sent by nature, and grasped the close analogy between the physical and spiritual.—Rev. E. G. Hirsch, Hebrew, Chicago, Ill.

Shortcomings of the Church.—When I consider the shortcomings of the church, I say we are in no position to tell the people how to run newspapers or politics. It is our business first to show the world how to run a church.—Rev. Dr. Lorimer, Boston, Mass.

Value of the Sabbath.—The value of the Sabbath no one can estimate. The Sabbath is a day when we are refreshed and strengthened in soul; when the joys which have been lost through the week are reckoned.—Rev. J. D. Rankin, Presbyterian, Denver, Colo.

Patience.—There is a vast difference in people when it comes to patience. Some people are so born that they clash within themselves. They are all pulse; they are full of fire; they have an acutely developed nervous system.—Rev. J. R. Shannon, Methodist, Toledo, Ohio.

Divine Requirements.—There must be concessions on the part of all. The pastor cannot always have his way, nor the people theirs. The one-man church, or the one-woman church, does not fulfill divine requirements.—Rev. S. W. Dana, Presbyterian, Philadelphia, Pa.

Annihilation.—Annihilation is not a reasonable conclusion. It does not answer a single great question. Such a doctrine not only challenges the divine wisdom and resource, but it runs up squarely against all the teaching of modern science.—Rev. Dr. Crowe, Universalist, New York City.

The World to Come.—None of the greatest philosophers have ever been able to picture the world to come to their own satisfaction, and all conceptions differ. If any man in his youth prepares for an unknown career on this side of the grave, man grown gray and old does well also to forecast that beyond the horizon moral law must also reign.—Rev. Dr. Hillis, Congregationalist, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Love of God.—What the love of God may do to break down stubborn human wills we know not. But of this much we may be certain: Every power which God can bring to bear on the human soul in the spirit world, consistent with its freedom, he will use, and so we may hope that the great mass of mankind will eventually be saved.—Rev. Dr. Ward, Episcopalian, Pittsburg, Pa.

Spirit of the Age.—One serious truth confronts us; the public press, our business activities, even our public educational interests, yes, even the pulpit, is more or less dominated by the commercial spirit of the age. The dollar has always been mighty, and often more so than to-day, but it is mighty still, and its power is felt in both public and private life.—Rev. W. C. Madison, Methodist, Denver, Colo.

The Church.—The relation of the church to the world must be that of a conquering body, constantly overcoming the opposition of other faiths and of no faiths, reaching out into new lands until finally it shall have conquered the world. Without this ideal and conception of its purpose, the church fails of the end of its organization, ceases to be the true church.—Rev. J. L. Barton, Congregationalist, Bangor, Me.

An Amusing Experiment.

Here is an amusing little experiment worth trying. First warm a sheet of glass and support it upon two books (one at each end of the glass) so as to leave it about an inch away from the table. Out of a piece of notepaper cut a number of figures, such as harlequins, dancers, etc., and place them upon the table underneath the sheet of glass. Next take a silk handkerchief and rub the glass several times with it, when the figures in the space underneath the glass will begin to jump with astonishing rapidity.

HUMOR OF THE WEEK

STORIES TOLD BY FUNNY MEN OF THE PRESS.

Odd, Curious and Laughable Phases of Human Nature Graphically Portrayed by Eminent Word Artists of Our Own Day—A Budget of Fun.

First Artist—Did Mobley make you any offer for your last picture?

Second Artist—Yes; he said he'd give me a new canvas for the one I had spoiled.

The Emblem.

"Horseshoeing has gone up in price."

"Well, can't you let the blacksmith take a whack at good luck once in a while?"

Increasing Anxiety.

"This don't-worry button is a fraud."

"In what respect?"

"Why, every fellow that sees it worries me by wanting me to give it to him."

Her Own Fault.

Wife—It really is too bad of you to keep me up like this!

Hubby—Not my fault, m' dear (hic). You know where the bed ish!—The Cigarette.

A Matter of Contrast.

"Whew! This office is freezing cold."

"I can tell you how to make it feel warm."

"How?"

"Go outdoors and then come in."

A Master Stroke.

Clarissa—Clarence, you had better write your offer for my hand to pa on your typewriter.

Clarence—Why, dear, that would be bad form.

Clarissa—Yes, Clarence, but it would make pa think you were full of business.

The Savage Bachelor.

"If you had been at the Browns' golden wedding celebration last night," said the sweet young thing, "you would have altered your views on matrimony."

"I wouldn't, either," said the savage bachelor. "If matrimony were not a fake there wouldn't be such a pow-wow raised over a couple that had managed to endure each other for a few years, and don't you forget it."

One of the Lost Arts.

Father—That man should be an example to you, my son. He entered a store as office boy and worked himself up until in a few years he owned the business.

Son—He could never do that in these days, pa, when they have cash registers.

A Crying Shame.

Uncle—It's disgraceful, Karl, that you have so many debts!

Nephew—Isn't it, when I have such a rich uncle?

Why She Frowned.

She—Do you know, General, I'm told I look five years younger when I'm on horseback?

The General (gallantly)—In my opinion you look twenty years younger!—The Cigarette.

Strategy.

"What is in that box you are so careful about, if I may ask?" inquired the man who had secured the lower berth in the sleeper.

"That's a collection of rare snakes I am taking to a museum. They are too valuable to be trusted out of my sight," replied the man, who was preparing to climb to the upper shelf.

"Say, I'll trade berths with you."

"All right. I'm not particular where I sleep."—Chicago Tribune.

New York and Chicago.

"Some day," we ventured to predict, "a man will be able to go to sleep in Chicago and wake up in New York."

"Do you really suppose Chicago will ever get to be so quiet as that?" faltered the Chicago man, in evident concern.—Detroit Journal.

"Come in," replied the man of the house, "but I don't think you'll find much left. The plumber has just left, and we were visited by burglars during the night."—Philadelphia North American.

Easy to Guess Her Choice.

Ostend—Do I get a bike, paw?

Paw—Well, it depends, my son.

Ostend—Depends on what, paw?

Paw—Why, the bonnet that your mother selects. If she selects French straw and flowers, you don't get the bike. If she selects ordinary straw with a single quill, then you do get it.

"I want him to; yet no matter how many honors he gets, I shall object to him playing professionally."—Philadelphia North-American.

A Hard World.

"Frinds are always ridy to push ye up," said the janitor philosopher, "but viry few av thim will put a tither bid under ye whin ye fall."

A Modest Request.

Sergeant (to company barber)—What did you cut this man's hair so short for? Do it over again, and see that you leave it twice as long as it is now!—Polichinelle.

Very Little.

Mr. Bellefield—There isn't much difference between a farrier and a horse.

Mr. Bloomfield (resignedly)—Go on.

Mr. Bellefield—No; there isn't. For example, a horse is a horse, sure, and a farrier is a horse shoer, too.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Unamiable.

"I see those friends of yours, the Rustlers, have their names in the paper again," said the lady who is interested in social topics.

"Have they, indeed?" responded Miss Cayenne, languidly. "I didn't know the delinquent tax list had been published again!"—Washington Star.

Indestructible.

Mrs. Nuwed (to market man)—I want a chicken that I can fry, or stew, or roast, or fix up any way I like.

Market Man—Sure, mum, here's one you can do anything you like wid, an' not hurt it.—Baltimore American.

German Progress.

During the last thirty years there has been nothing like the urban and industrial development of rustic Germany except that of America. Berlin has increased in population faster than New York. Hamburg, in the last quarter of a century, has tripled the number of its inhabitants. Between 1880 and 1890 Cologne doubled itself. Leipzig has grown more rapidly than San Francisco. The agricultural population of eastern Germany has swarmed into the great industrial districts of the west, and still these are so far from being glutted that the employer holds out yet higher temptations to the peasant to come to the city and leave field work to Russians and Poles. Wages are rising, and hours are becoming shorter. The emigration which formerly streamed fast from Germany is diminishing from year to year. So far is Germany from being crushed by conscription that the splendor and expense of municipal improvements go hand-in-hand with the extraordinary increase of the towns in mere point of population.

A Mother's Tears

"I Would Cry Every Time I Washed My Baby."

"When he was 3 months old, first festers and then large boils broke out on my baby's neck. The sores spread down his back until it became a mass of raw flesh. When I washed and powdered him I would cry, realizing what pain he was in. His pitiful wailing was heartrending. I had about given up hope of saving him when I was urged to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla, all other treatment having failed. I washed the sores with Hood's Medicated Soap, applied Hood's Olive Ointment and gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla. The child seemed to get better every day, and very soon the change was quite noticeable. The discharge grew less, inflammation went down, the skin took on a healthy color, and the raw flesh began to scale over and a thin skin formed as the scales dropped off. Less than two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, aided by Hood's Medicated Soap and Hood's Olive Ointment, accomplished this wonderful cure. I cannot praise these medicines half enough." Mrs. Guerinot, 37 Myrtle St., Rochester, N. Y.

The above testimonial is very much condensed from Mrs. Guerinot's letter. As many mothers will be interested in reading the full letter, we will send it to anyone who sends request of us on a postal card. Mention this paper.

ALABASTINE

ALABASTINE is the original and only durable wall coating, entirely different from all kalsomines. Ready for use in white or fourteen beautiful tints by adding cold water.

LADIES naturally prefer ALABASTINE for walls and ceilings, because it is pure, clean, durable. Put up in dry powdered form, in five-pound packages, with full directions.

ALL kalsomines are cheap, temporary preparations made from whiting, chalks, clays, etc., and stuck on walls with decaying animal glue. ALABASTINE is not a kalsomine.

BEWARE of the dealer who says he can sell you the "same thing" as ALABASTINE or "something just as good." He is either not posted or is trying to deceive you.

AND IN OFFERING something he has bought cheap and tries to sell on ALABASTINE'S demands, he may not realize the damage you will suffer by a kalsomine on your walls.

SENSIBLE dealers will not buy a lawsuit. Dealers risk one by selling and consumers by using infringement. Alabastine Co. own right to make wall coating to mix with cold water.

THE INTERIOR WALLS of every church and school should be coated only with pure, durable ALABASTINE. It safeguards health. Hundreds of tons used yearly for this work.

IN BUYING ALABASTINE, customers should avoid getting cheap kalsomines under different names. Insist on having our goods in packages and properly labeled.

NUISANCE of wall paper is obviated by ALABASTINE. It can be used on plastered walls, wood ceilings, brick or canvas. A child can brush it on. It does not rub or scale off.

ESTABLISHED in favor. Shun all imitations. Ask paint dealer or druggist for tint card. Write us for interesting booklet, free. ALABASTINE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich.

Waning of the Honeymoon.

Mrs. Newed (homeward bound)—John, dear, suppose I were to fall overboard, what would you do?

Mr. Newed—What would I do? Why, at the risk of my life I would throw——

Mrs. Newed (interrupting)—Oh, you dear old, generous darling! You would throw yourself overboard and try to save me.

Mr. Newed—As I was saying, I would throw you a couple of these life preservers.

Libby, McNeill & Libby.

Housekeepers frequently feel the need of luncheon meats which are either ready to serve or can be prepared for the table at a moment's notice. Such a need is abundantly supplied in the superior meats put up by the old reliable house of Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago, one of whose specialties is advertised in another column of this paper, and their booklet, "How to Make Good Things to Eat," is offered free on application.

The Necktie Club.

There is an organization in Philadelphia known as the Necktie Club, the members of which have asserted their intention not to marry. Recently one of the members announced his engagement and was fined a supper by his fellows. He spread a fine repast for them, at which the menus were printed on white silk neckties, in small gilt letters. A pin, composed of a miniature silver spoon, knife and fork, adorned the center, while a portrait of the groom-to-be peeped out at the top under the words, "It's on me."

A Boston Institution.

Among the unique institutions of this city is the Peabody Medical Institute, 4 Bulfinch street, established nine years before the death of the great philanthropist, the late Mr. George Peabody, from whom it takes its name. During the past thirty years it has achieved a wide and lasting distinction, and to-day it is the best of its kind in this country. The medical publications of this institute have millions of readers, and are as standard as gold. Their last pamphlet, ninety-four pages, entitled "Know Thyself," free by mail on receipt of six cents for postage. Send for it to-day.—Boston Journal.

A Gigantic Sheep Ranch.

The largest sheep ranch in the world is in the counties of Webb and Dimmit in Texas; it contains more than 400,000 acres, and pastures 800,000 sheep annually.

What Do the Children Drink?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing, and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs about ¼ as much. All grocers sell it. 15c. and 25c.

Substitute for Honey.

A substitute for honey has been introduced in Germany under the name of sugar honey, and consists of sugar, water, minute amounts of mineral substances and free acid.

What Shall We Have for Dessert?

This question arises in the family every day. Let us answer it to-day. Try Jell-O, a delicious and healthful dessert. Prepared in two minutes. No boiling! no baking! simply add a little hot water and set to cool. Flavors:—Lemon, Orange, Raspberry and Strawberry. At your grocers. 10 cts.

Millions for Baseball.

A million of dollars is spent every year for baseball, but large as this is, it cannot equal the amount spent in search of health. We urge those who have spent much and lost hope to try Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It strengthens the stomach, makes digestion easy, and cures dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness and weak kidneys.

Women of Sumatra.

If the native women of Sumatra have their knees properly covered the rest does not matter. The natives of some islands off the coast of Guinea wear clothes only when they are going on a journey. Some Indians of Venezuela are ashamed to wear clothes before strangers, as it seems indecent to them to appear unpainted.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

WINTER BILE

Causes bilious head-ache, back-ache and all kinds of body aches. Spring is here and you want to get this bile poison out of your system, easily, naturally and gently. CASCARETS are just what you want; they never grip or gripe, but will work gently while you sleep. Some people think the more violent the griping the better the cure. Be careful—take care of your bowels—salts and pill poisons leave them weak, and even less able to keep up regular movements than before. The only safe, gentle inside Spring cleaner for the bowels are sweet, fragrant CASCARETS. They don't force out the foecal matter with violence, but act as a tonic on the whole 30 feet of bowel wall, strengthen the muscles and restore healthy, natural action—buy them and try them. You will find in an entirely natural way your bowels will be promptly and permanently put in good order for the Spring and Summer work.

Notice of Sale of Real Estate.

Notice is hereby given that I, George L. Price, as commissioner of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, in a cause wherein Charles Humbarger et al. are plaintiffs and David Humbarger et al. are defendants, will offer for sale at private sale on Friday, May 11, 1900,

at my residence in Newville township, DeKalb county, Indiana, the following described real estate, to-wit;

The south half (½) of fractional section numbered twenty-one (21) in township numbered thirty-three (33) north, of range fifteen (15) east, containing ninety-eight and twenty-eight hundredths (98 28-100) acres of land more or less, excepting the right-of-way of the Baltimore, Pittsburg & Chicago Railroad Company passing over said tract.

Said sale will be continued from day to day until a satisfactory offer is received, or until the further order of the court. Such sale to be upon the following terms: One-third of the purchase price cash in hand on day of sale; one-third thereof in twelve months and one-third in eighteen months from said date, the deferred payments to be evidenced by the purchaser's notes bearing six per cent interest and secured by mortgage on the premises sold, with the privilege to the purchaser of paying all in cash if he prefers so to do.

GEORGE L. PRICE, Commissioner.
John W. Baxter, Attorney. 18

Hearing of Ditch Petition.

In the matter of the petition of L. G. Duesler ditch, No. 699, notice is hereby given that a petition has been filed with the auditor of DeKalb county, state of Indiana, and viewers have been appointed who have viewed and reported said view which is on file in my office. The hearing of said petition upon its merits will be heard by the Board of County Commissioners on Tuesday, the 8th day of May, 1900, the same being the 2d day of their May term, 1900. The prayer of said petition is that a ditch be constructed on the following route, to-wit:

Beginning sixty-two (62) rods south and twelve (12) feet east of the center of section nnmber 11, Grant township, Indiana, and from thence in a westerly direction, ending in the Michael Wolf ditch forty two (42) rods south of the west quarter corner of section number 11 of Grant township, said DeKalb county, and State of Indiana. All of said ditch being tiled.

The proposed work will affect the lands of the following persons:

Loren G. Duesler	Grant Township
Robert N. Crooks	George O. Dennison
Royal J. Fisk.

FRANK P. SEILER,
Auditor DeKalb County.

Dated April 18, 1900.

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Hannah E. Moss is plaintiff and Silas Franks, Alice Franks and Frank P. Seller, auditor of DeKalb county, are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of seven hundred and sixty-two dollars and ninety cents ($762.90) with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on Saturday, May 5, 1900,

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the door of the court house of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following described real estate, to-wit;

The southeast one-fourth [¼] of the southeast quarter of section thirty-six [36] township thirty-four [34], north of range thirteen east, in DeKalb county, state of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

JOHN H. HATHAWAY,
Sheriff of DeKalb County, Indiana.
Rose & Rose, Atty's for Plaintiff.
Auburn, Indiana, April 11, 1900.

Notice of Administration.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned has been appointed by the judge of the DeKalb circuit court, of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Mahlon Rakestraw, deceased, late of said county.

Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

FRANK RAKESTRAW, Administrator.

has demonstrated that the old fashioned way of curing colds, la grippe, sneezing, etc., is a thing of the past. For ten years Krause's Cold Cure has been recognized as a specific for these troubles. Sold by H. B. McCord.

Wednesday's Daily.

—Mrs. Juliette Dickinson returned this evening to her home at Waterloo.

—Miss Julia Hodge is in Michigan City but will return soon to remain during the summer.

—Isaac Gette of Fairfield was a caller today. He has been sick since last f ll, but seems to be all right now.

—The railroads have decided to give a rate of one fare for the round trip to Chicago on the occasion of the Dewey celebration. The tickets will be sold April 30 and May 1, with a return limit to May 3.

—Mrs. Lucetta Seiler, the aged mother of Auditor Seiler, died at Martinsville, Ill., Monday night, aged nearly eighty years. The remains were brought to Ashley and the funeral services and burial will take place at Fairfield Center tomorrow.

—Those of the near relatives who are here to attend the funeral of Mrs Lucetta Seiler at Fairfield center tomorrow are Dr. John H. Seiler, wife and daughter, of Akron, O., Cyrus Seiler and wife of Elkart; Mrs. Caroline Galiatin of Martinsville, Ill.; Mrs. Michael Seiler and daughter of Shelbyville.

Thursday's Daily.

—M. P. Barker of Ashley was here today.

—Our army in the Philippines on April 1 was over 63,000.

—Dewey says he doesn't give a hang if the Presidential bee does sting him.

—Frank Nelson is spending a week in Auburn with his aunts, the Keeran sisters.

—Jonas E. Dilgard is announced as a candidate for trustee of Grant township on the republican ticket.

—A lodge of the American Plowmen, a new fraternal and benefit order, has been organized at Waterloo.

—James Griswold and wife entertained a party of friends at dinner today in honor of Rev. and Mrs. Arlen.

—Go to Sheffer & Chaney for Michigan Lake Salt, a car load just received. Guaranteed not to get hard in the barrel. oct.26w-tf

—Benjamin Duncan of near Summit, was in town yesterday looking for a house and expects to locate his family here.

—Rev. T. J. Maborter of Noble county has been chosen as the prohibition candidate for congress in this district.

—Sam Mills and family have moved to the country, near Cedar creek, where they will remain during the summer and perhaps permanently.

—Will and Frank Fisher of Waterloo, two of the best clothing salesmen on the road, will travel for Moore & Biere of Rochester, N. Y., the coming season.

—You cannot always tell whether your goods are all wool or mixed goods. It makes no difference if you use Putnam Fadeless Dyes. They color everything. Sold by F. E. Davenport.

—Cory Shugers and wife, Mrs. Geo. Shugers, Mrs. Will Leedy and Mrs. M. E. Swisher spent the afternoon yesterday at the Shugers home farm south of town. Of course they had a pleasant visit.

—Brief services over the remains of the late Jacob Nusbaum were held at the residence of Dr. Nusbaum this mornin,g conducted by Revs. Guild and Brosy, after which the funeral party left for Middlebury via Waterloo and Goshen. The funeral will be held at Middlebury tomorrow at 10 o'clock.

—P. L. Rhoads and his daughter, Mrs. Jacob Gunsenhouser, were callers today. Mr. Rhoads is in his ordinary good health, though of course, the terrible injury in the loss of his hands, leaves him unable to do much work. But one of his sons is a teacher, having charge of Dist. No. 3, in Wilmington.

—Prof. Albert G. Welch, the head of Lake Forest Academy, is dead. He lost his health last Christmas by a two days' exposure on the ice trying to rescue some students, who had drifted out onto the lake. He is head of the school where John Lee is and is the one who wrote John's mother such a good letter about John recently.

—Married, at the Lutheran parsonage last evening at 8 o'clock by Rev. J. D. Brosy, John W. Brown and Ella L. Lanning. Both are worthy Auburn young people. Mr. and Mrs. Brown had their own home on East Ninth street furnished, and commenced housekeeping at once. We wish them a happy and successful future.

—Reports from county correspondents from all over the state to Fred H. Rush, one of the largest grain dealers in Indianapolis, indicate that wheat in Indiana will yield only twenty-five per cen crop instead of fifty per cent, as earlier announced. Some localities will yield only ten per cent. The reports are looked upon as authoritive.

—Capt. W. E. English's horse, "Santiago," has arrived at Indianapolis from Cuba. The captain was riding the horse when injured and sent home. Unable to bring the faithful animal along, he gave him to Maj. F. J. Combe. The latter was ordered to the Philippines and returned the horse to New York, when the captain sent for him. In the battle before Siboney, the horse was pushed into the sea and had to swim a quarter of a mile to the shore.

—J. E. Rose, who has been managing the settlement of the Abright estate as against the former supposed-to-be administrator, Dr. Alford, in Peru, reports having won all the points so far. He has now deposited in the bank the $500 that Mrs. Abright left to the Presbyterian church to assist in building a parsonage. He has beaten the "Doctor" in several ways and uncovered a lot of his rascality. Mr. Rose deserves much credit for good legal work he has done.

Friday's Daily.

—Herman Ketel has thanks for recent favors.

—Frank Boyle is a victim of grip and is confined to the house.

—Mrs. Mary Boyer seems to be slowly improving, a fact we are pleased to note.

—W. B. Brown writes from Waterloo, Iowa, that all are well and pleased with their new home.

—Sheriff Hathaway has disposed of his ice business at Garrett, L. L. Dennison being the purchaser.

—Ex-trustee T. F. Franks of Richland was a caller today on business. He was chipping in on his taxes.

—Harry Reed is prominently mentioned as a democratic candidate for trustee of Grant township. He would make a good officer.

—A peculiar coincidence connected with the death of Lucetta Seiler was that her husband died on the same day of the month twelve years ago.

—The Dawn says that DeKalb County Mutual Insurance company has begun the work of readjusting its risks. The company is in excellent condition.

—Married, at the residence of the groom's parents by Rev. W. O. Butler, April 19, 1900, Claude V. Miller and Laurel E. Carter, both of Waterloo.

—Among our callers today, were 'Squire Hoffman and C. H. Beaber of Butler township. Mr. Hoffman, who was justice down there some years ago, has just been appointed to take the place of the late Perry Fitch.

Saturday's Daily.

—S. J. Heuney of Fairfield was here today.

—Monday, May 7, will be the last day for paying taxes without the penalty.

—Miss Maggie Seibert returned yesterday from a visit with friends in the country.

—John L. Davis has sold his horse to Mat Zerwis. Mr. Davis has had the horse for about 16 years, he now has a good home for the rest of his days.

—George Newcomer was in town today settling his tax bill and did not forget to make his annual payment on the weekly, for which he has thanks.

—W. H. McIntyre returned last night from an extended business trip during which he visited a number of eastern cities in the interest of the W. H. Kiblinger company.

—Phil. Holman of Cedar, who has been attending school at Valparaiso, was a caller at this office today. Mr. Holman will be a candidate for surveyor before the democratic county convention.

—As sheep shearing time approaches an exchange cautions farmers to tie their wool with wool twine as sisal grass and binder twine gives off fibres which are hard to remove from the wool.

—In our list of delegates to the coming democratic county convention last week there was an error in names. In the first precinct in Union township, it should be William Blodgett instead of his father, Arnold Blodgett.

—John Smith of near Ashley has filed suit against Simon Dayhuff of Steuben county for $5,000 for slander, claiming that Dayhuff called him a thief. Smith was tried here and acquited on a charge of stealing harness.

—A bad wreck occurred on the Wabash near Churubusco last evening in which nine freight cars were piled up. The accident was caused by the breaking of a side rod on the engine, but fortunately none of the train men were injured.

—The Maccabees of Fort Wayne will have a big demonstration May 3, when a class of over 150 will be taken into the order. Invitations have been extended to all lodges within a radius of fifty miles and several hundred visitors are expected.

—The west-bound fast mail on the Wabash struck and killed a man by the name of Wilson near South Whitley yesterday. The unfortunate man tried to drive across the track ahead of the train, but miscalculated the distance and the speed at which the train was running.

—Dr. John H. Seiler of Akron, O., called on his old friend at this office yesterday while here to attend the funeral of his mother. We understand he is having a good practice in the "hill country of Ohio." He says the British and Boers could have a fine battlefield out there, as ther eare kops and konjes, drifts and spruits, more than the people there have any other use for.

—A COURIER reporter noticed two men leaving town on a farm wagon this afternoon who could certainly be credited with having an "eye to business." On the wagon was a large wooden tank, and in this the men had arranged a seat, thus securing full protection from rain on the way home. Their quarters were not very roomy, but it was a good scheme just the same.

—During the recent stay of Deputy Great Commander White in Auburn the Maccabee tent experienced an increase of over fifty in membership, fourteen of whom are yet to be initiated. Mr. White is a hard worker and a most pleasant gentleman, and the order he represents is, as many people know, one of the strongest fraternal organizations in the country. The Auburn tent is in a flourishing condition.

—The following marriage licenses have been issued since our last report: Elmer Herel and Blanche Price; Karl B. Husselman and Cecelia Girardot; Martin Rinkel and Anna Hoak; Christian W. Fell and Daisy Chilcote; John W. Brown and Ella L. Lanning; Edward Casselman and Alfretta Miser; Claude V. Miller and Laurel E. Carter; Dow Ober and Mary V. North; Edward Hower and Anna Wildeson.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know it.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail, address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.

QUESTION ANSWERED.

Yes, August Flower has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers' and grandmothers' never thought of using anything else for Indigestion or Billiousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart Failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Sample bottles at O. P Barber's, Corunna.

Three Cent Pieces.

A new coin three-cent piece has been authorized by act of congress to take the place of the old coin which was so much like the old dime that its coinage was stopped. The new three-cent piece is ordered to be made of nickel, the size of the old bronze cent, although thicker. In the center is to be made a hole one-fourth of an inch in diameter. This will make the coin easily distinguishable by sight or touch. It will be sometime, however, before this new coin will be circulated.

Wedding Delayed.

A Peru, Ind., minister employed to marry a couple six miles south of that place, went north by mistake. The couple with 100 guests, waited several hours for him, and finally messengers found him 16 miles from the place. The guests were tired of waiting, and dinner spoiling, they partook of it before the arrival of the minister. The ceremony took place at a late hour.

Fred Niles' Letter.

A few days ago we mentioned the fact that W. R. Vann had received a letter from Fred Niles, now in the Philippines. We are permitted to make some extracts from the letter.

SAN JOSE DE BUENA VISTA, P. I. February 14, 1900.

W. R. VANN, Auburn, Ind.

DEAR FRIEND:—In your letter you asked me to describe the inhabitants of the Philippines; as there are so many different tribes it would fill volumes to describe them, but I will give you an idea of the industries and natives on this Island. Panay island belongs to the Visayas group and is about three hundred miles south of Manila and thirty miles west of the island of Negros. The products common to the archipelago are tobacco, sugar, rice and indigo first in importance, with hemp, coffee, cotton, pepper and a great variety of fruits.

The Visayes, as they call themselves, are the most numerous of any of the inhabitants. They are generally of good height, brown color with yellowish tint, with wide, flat nose. Their ordinary costume is a pair of white trousers and a shirt which they wear outside the trousers, and a wide, conical hat called a salacote; some of them wear slippers. The costume of the woman is a cloth skirt, a short bodice with wide sleeves and sometimes a kerchief thrown over the shoulders. Their house (or cassea as they call them) is built entirely of bamboo and contains but one room which is about 12x12 and four or five persons living in it. They live on fish, rice and fruits which are cooked in earthen jars and eaten from a large basket in the center of the house with their fingers.

Next comes the Negritos who are more savage. They are small and very black, with low forehead, flat nose and oval faces. They are not unintelligent and often show considerable aptitude. They are generally peaceful but very suspicious; they are very agile and are fond of wild, free life of the mountains. Their arms are bows and arrows which they use with great dexterity in hunting and fishing. The more savage tribes live on the fruits and roots found in the woods. There is a great variety among them; some go completely naked others wear a small breech-cloth, while others again wear trousers and shirts and are comparatively civilized, but the whole tribe are monogamists and that their marriages are for life and indissoluble. These being the two most noted tribes on the island, I will tell you something about the animal life.

In nearly all the forests monkeys are found of several species. The bats are represented by a great number of species, among them the Paniguis. Swarms of them are seen at dusk flying about, some measuring thirty-six inches from tip to tip. Deer and parrots are abundant and also the boa as well as many other reptiles. The chief beast of burden is the caraboo or water buffalo. Its great strength and ability to withstand heat makes it especially well adapted to use in agriculture and for hauling heavy loads. The caraboo, cimaroon, or wild buffalo, is a very fierce and dangerous animal. As I would like to tell you of the place we are now in I cannot linger on the subject any longer.

San Jose de Buena Vista is a town of about three thousand inhabitants and is situated on the west coast in the Province of Antique of which it is the capital and always an insurgent stronghold, there being twenty miles of intrenchments within five miles of the town, but when the 19th and the gunboat Concord trained their guns on them they were as good as nothing.

As my candle is about burnt up and taps is about to sound, I must close. Hoping to hear from you soon I remain as ever your friend, FRED L. NILES, Company E, 19th Infantry, San Jose de Buena Vista.

Fire at Waterloo.

Between 1 and 2 a. m. last night fire was discovered in the old Locke property at the crossing of Main street and the railroad in Waterloo, and before it could be stopped the entire west front was burned extending to the east till it came to some smaller buildings that face on Van Vleck street, the one that runs east and west past the Locke hotel. It was first noticed in the barber shop and as far as known may have started there. But the cause is not known. There was in the block also a restaurant and a saloon, and we believe several other occupants. The block was not very valuable, being quite old, and not sufficiently popular to cause many tears over the loss.

Reception for Gilbert.

ANGOLA, Ind., April 28, 1900.

Special to the COURIER:

When Senator N. W. Gilbert arrived in Angola last evening on the 6:06 train from Indianapolis, he was met by the Angola Cornet Band, members of Company H. 157th regiment and about 400 citizens and escorted up town and when the public square was reached, Mr Gilbert arose and delivered a brief but happy little speech. Then three cheers were given for Mr. Gilbert upon his success of winning the nomination for lieutenant-governor of Indiana. Hon. D. R. Best then proposed three cheers for Steuben county which never before had a representative from either of the two leading parties on the state ticket. The cheers were loud and long. Mr. Gilbert was then driven to his home, and after a few selections from the band the crowd dispersed. From the mingling of the crowd that took part in the enthusiastic demonstration, one could see that it was a non-partisan greeting to Captain-Senator N. W. Gilbert.

A Rambler.

The congregation of the Lutheran church and other friends made a complete surprise last evening on their pastor, Rev. Brosy, by presenting to him one of those handsome Rambler bicycles. Mr. Brosy was in the church labeling the Sunday school song books when his wife came over and said that "a man wanted to see him." When he reached the house he found Marion Willis there who at once began talking about selling Mr. Brosy a wheel. While the gentlemen were talking a knock was heard at the door, and soon afterward in came a committee with a fine Rambler. The wheel is just what Mr. Brosy has been "hankering" after and he appreciates the gift more than tongue or type can tell. Of course he is thankful to the friends who so kindly remembered him. Mrs. Brosy also received a fine bronze mantle ornament, which she prizes very highly. With one of old Mr. and Mrs. Brosy can say, "Our lines have fallen in pleasant places; we have a goodly heritage."

More About the Fish Law.

Some misunderstanding as to the closed seasons under the fish law seems to have arisen. In response to an inquiry, Z. T. Sweeney, fish commissioner, writes that section 4 of the law makes an absolute closed season during May and June in all streams of the state and a closed season in all other waters of the state from the first of January to the first of April and from the first of May to the first of July, except with hook and line. The law permits, says Mr. Sweeney, hook and line fishing in streams from July first to the following May first, and it permits it in lakes at all times. Mr. Sweeney says that in this view of the law he is supported by the attorney general.

Surprised the Teacher

Herman L. Brown, who has charge of a wide-awake and intelligent lot of young people in the eighth grade of the public schools, was surprised at his home on North Main street last evening about 8 o'clock when twenty of his pupils dropped in to make himself and wife a visit. The young people came well provided with refreshments and altogether it was a visit that Mr. and Mrs. Brown and their guests will not soon forget. Mr. Brown has met with excellent success since taking charge of the eighth grade and in his work has had gratifying co-operation on the part of his pupils.

A Travesty on Justice

A jury at Ligonier acquitted a fish pirate named Morrison, a son of "Old Bill" Morrison, who for years inhabited an island near the south end of the big lake at Syracuse, notwithstanding the fact that the defendant was found with over one hundred black bass, evidently caught illegally. Jim Gowing of Goshen, a deputy fish commissioner, prosecuted the case, but Morrison's "pull" was too strong for him. The sportsmen of that section should make up a fund to provide leather medals for that jury.

Cured a Running Sore

"I had a running sore on my breast for over a year," says Henry H. Richards of Willseyville, N. Y. "and tried a great many remedies, but got no relief until I used Banner Salve. After using one half box I was entirely cured. I cannot recommend it too highly, and will never be without it in the house." H. B. McCord.

THE STATE CONVENTION.

Republicans Choose Their Standard Bearers, After a Hot Contest.

After the skirmishing of Wednesday, the republican state convention at Indianapolis got down to business, Thursday, and put in nomination a full ticket, and also chose delegates at large for the national convention and electors at large for the coming campaign. Here is the full list:

For governor, Winfield T. Durbin.
Lieutenant-governor, Newton Gilbert.
Secretary of state, U. S. Hunt.
Auditor of state, W. H. Hart.
Treasurer of state, Leopold Levy.
Attorney general, W. J. Taylor.

And Gilbert was the nominee.

Mr. Durbin is from Anderson in Madison county, and was the Indiana member of the republican national committee in 1896. He was in the Spanish war of 1898, in command of a new regiment, the 161st, and had a hard pull with the powers that were enough to get his command ordered over to Cuba, where they staid till the spring of '99. He had also been in the rebellion for a short time as a member of the 139th Indiana. He has for several years been prominent in politics, and in business circles. Is a banker and owns stock in several gas companies and other plants. After the second ballot, DeKalb county voted solid for Durbin.

Mr. Gilbert is well known here. He was contractor in putting through the Wagner drain in Auburn, that crosses North Main street by Dr. Ford's. He is an attorney at Angola, and was captain of the Angola company, "G" of the 157th in the Spanish war.

CHAPTER XXX.

John A. Provines was walking along the streets of his home town, Spencerville, a few days ago, when a queer looking disk of metal lying in the dirt caught his eyes. He stooped and picked it up, and an examination showed it was no button, as he had supposed. It proved to be a political badge, used in the exciting campaign of 1860. Scraping the crust of dirt from it he could see the outlines of the design and enough of words to show it to be a democratic badge. So he naturally turned it over to the editor of the COURIER, an old friend of his, though of somewhat opposite political faith.

The badge or medal is of bronze and exactly the size of a quarter dollar. The edge is milled, and in the center is a large open circle or hole, for a picture. Just what these pictures were made of, we do not remember. Of course they were different material from the pictures on our campaign buttons of the present day. This hole left a rim about a quarter inch in width, and on this space the words run around the medal.

On one side is the name, "Stephen A. Douglas," on the other side, we read "Herschell V. Johnson." The figures "1860" follow each name. This was the badge used that year by the northern democrats.

The presidential election of 1860 was an exciting one, and the people divided into so many factions, that it required several tickets to satisfy them. The republican party that had been organized four years before, had in the northern states, taken the place of the old whig party, which, however, still held together in the southern states under the name "constitutional union," making two parties where had been but one before.

The democratic party had split in the national convention at Charleston, into north and south wings.

The republicans, who were mostly located in the north, nominated Abraham Lincoln of Illinois and Hannibal Hamlin of Maine.

The democrats in the north chose Stephen A. Douglas of Illinois, and Herschell V. Johnson of Tennessee as their standard bearers.

The southern democrats nominated John C. Breckenridge of Kentucky and Joseph Lane of Oregon.

The national union party nominated John Bell of Tennessee, and Edward Everett of Massachusetts.

Lincoln carried 17 states in the north receiving in all, 1,866,352 votes, and 180 electoral votes.

Douglas carried but 2 states, but had 1,375,167 votes and 12 electors.

Bell carried 3 states, receiving 589,581 votes and 39 electoral votes.

Breckenridge carried 11 states all being in the south, and had 845,763 votes with 72 electors. The total vote cast was 4,676,853.

At the first presidential election in 1789, Washington carried 10 out of 13 original states, which was all that voted. New York did not vote as she had not yet passed an election law for national purposes, while Rhode Island and North Carolina had not adopted the constitution. Washington got 69 electoral votes out of 73 which he might have had, had the three states named voted.

The first popular vote known was at the election of J. Q. Adams in 1824, the total being 352,062. Four years later when Jackson was elected, the vote was 1,156,828. Now it foots up about twelve millions.

At Washington's first election there were 12 candidates voted for by the people, there being no regular ticket, with a vice-president as now. The law was that of all persons voted for the one with the highest vote, became president, and the next highest, vice-president. John Adams being second, was vice-president. The candidates were: George Washington, John Adams, John Jay, R. H. Harrison, John Rutledge, John Hancock, George Clinton, Samuel Huntingdon, John Milton, James Armstrong, Benjamin Lincoln and Edward Telfair. There were 13 candidates voted for in 1796. The first time the tickets had vice-presidents was in 1804.

The people failed to elect in 1800, Jefferson and Burr each receiving 73 electoral votes. The House of Representatives took 30 ballots to decide it, and Jefferson got it with Burr for vice-president.

In 1824, John Q. Adams got it by a vote of the House, there having been no choice at the election.

In 1836, VanBuren was elected president getting 170 electors, but the highest electoral vote for vice-president was 147 for R. M. Johnson. This was just half of all, as the other three candidates received together 147. The Senate elected Johnson.

Death of John Crimmins.

The many friends of the young man in this city were grieved, surprised and greatly shocked to learn of the death of John P. Crimmins, which occurred at his home in Garett about 3:30 yesterday afternoon. Mr. Crimmins was compelled to leave his work in the B. & O. offices about ten days ago by an attack of pleurisy, but at no time was his condition thought to be serious. In fact not more than an hour before his death his mother reported to his friends who called at the house that he felt much better. Soon after this he was noticed to be rapidly sinking and before medical aid could be summoned he was past human help.

Mr. Crimmins entered the service of the B. & O. at Garrett about twelve years ago, but for several years resided in Auburn where he conducted an abstract office. Two years ago he was elected city clerk of Garrett, which office he held at the time of his death. He was a member of the Knight of Pythias and Maccabees, and carried $3,000 life insurance in the latter order in addition to a like amount in the B. & O. railway association. He was about 36 years of age and leaves his mother and two sisters, besides a host of friends, to mourn his death. The funeral services will be held at the Catholic church in Garrett, Friday at 9 a. m., burial in Calvary cemetry.

OBITUARY.

David Wesley Casebeer was born near Mt. Hope, Holmes county, Ohio, May 11, 1835. He remained on the farm with his parents until the death of his mother in 1872. After that his father sold the old homestead and lived with his children. Wesley remained in Ohio with a sister until eighteen years ago, when he came to Auburn and since then has lived with his brothers, Enos and Dr. Casebeer.

When a little boy about eight years of age, he had a sunstroke which slightly affected his mind. But he went to school and received a common school education. Wesley was a great reader and passed much of his time during his last year reading the newspapers.

He was converted in his early life and for many years was an earnest worker in the church. The last fifteen years of his life he was a great sufferer from asthma and much of the time could not attend church. About fifteen months ago he had a very severe attack of grip and for many days he was delirious and a greater part of the time since had become like a child. He thought much about dying; read his bible, and at one time talked to his brother Enos, about his joy in the Lord; his confidence and trust.

He died at Longcliff asylum, April 25, 1900, and today we trust he is happy with the Saviour who died for him, and with the father and mother who so kindly cared for him. The only regret his mother had when she came to the "swellings of Jordan," was that she had to leave Wesley.

City in Ashes.

The city of Hull, Canada, and a part of Ottawa were destroyed by fire yesterday, so that today but a thin line of dwellings around the limits remain. It was a lumber and factory town of 12,000 population, across the Ottawa river opposite the city of Ottawa, the capital of the Dominion. All the business part, public buildings, churches, etc., are destroyed, and five square miles of ground covered with the ruins. The fire also, leaped to some islands in the river, burned all there and finally got across into a suburb of Ottawa. It burned gradually up into the town and once or twice the Parliament building was in grave danger. What made matters worse in the city of Ottawa, was the absence of their fire engines over in Hull. When the engines in Hull could not stop the flames, the city of Ottawa sent her engines over to help. Soon after, the fire caught in the bridge, and when the Ottawa engine was called to fight fire at home it could not get across. The people of Ottawa could only look on till help arrived from other towns. Engines came from all towns within 200 miles, but could do little good. Blazing piles of lumber would float down and lodge against lumber and buildings on the banks. The loss is about twenty millions, not one-fourth being insured. It started from a burning chimney and was spread by a high wind.

A Life and Death Fight.

Mr. W. A. Hines of Manchester, Ia., writing of his almost miraculous escape from death, says: "Exposure after measles indussed serious lung trouble, which ended in Consumption. I had frequent hemorrhages and coughed night and day. All my doctors said I must soon die. Then I began to use Dr. Kings New Discovery for Consumption, which completely cured me. I would not be without it even if it cost $5.00 a bottle. Hundreds have used it on my recommendation and all say it never fails to cure Throat, Chest and Lung trouble." Regular size 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at McCORD'S Drug Store.

Unearthed a Skeleton.

While the men were engaged in making the excavation for the basement of the new north side school building at Garrett they came upon a coffin in a good state of preservation which was found to contain the skeleton of a girl of about fifteen years. Some of the older residents of the town remembered that soon after the B. & O. road was built a girl of about that age belonging to a party of emigrants, died on the train east of Garrett and upon arrival there was buried in what was then a field or commons. All recollection of the incident had passed away until the coffin was unearthed. The city officials at once took charge of the remains and they were once more interred, this time at public expense.

EVENTS OF INTEREST

THAT OCCURRED DURING THE PAST WEEK.

Tersely Told Telegraph Tales in Brief Paragraphs—Many Casualties—A Few Crimes—Some Fires—Political and Religious News.

The Business World.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says:

Gold begins to go abroad and prices of iron products break sharply in the same week. Four months of the new year have passed and business does not so expand as to need the large increase of circulation which the new monetary bill has permitted, nor enough to sustain all the extraordinary advance in prices last year. The abundance of gold and of currency, and the large disbursements by the Treasury in exchange of bonds, have rendered rates for money unusually low for the season, while rare industrial and speculative activity in Europe with the war in South Africa have tended to make money dearer abroad. So new gold from Alaska answers the loss of supply from the Transvaal and America builds up in credit abroad a breastwork against prostration in future here as in the past, caused by troubles in Europe.

Tornado in Texas.

A tornado passed through the southern part of Johnson and the northern part of Hill Counties, Texas, doing great damage. In Hill County, the town of Blum, about seventy-five miles southwest of Dallas, was partially destroyed and several persons were fatally injured. A daughter of Dr. Harks had a scantling driven through her body and is dying. An 8-year-old daughter of D. H. Hunt had both legs broken and was injured internally. She is not expected to recover. Lacy Robertson's wife was caught in their falling house and will probably die. The public schoolhouse was wrecked and two pupils were badly hurt. About a dozen dwellings were destroyed in addition to the school building, and the Baptist Church was wrecked.

A City in Ruins.

A dispatch from Ottawa, Ont., says: Five square miles of territory burned over; more than 2,500 dwellings, factories, mills, stores and other buildings destroyed, entailing a loss estimated to reach $20,000,000 and between 12,000 and 15,000 men, women and children homeless, is a summing up of the havoc wrought by fire at Hull and in Ottawa.

Bank Looted of $5,000.

Coulterville (Ill.) special: Burglars secured $5,000 from the vaults of the Bank of Coulterville, a private institution owned by J. L. A. Nesbitt, and made their escape. The robbers are supposed to be members of a gang which has operated through this State, Indiana and Wisconsin during the last six months.

Job Pressmen Out.

At Detroit, Mich., 150 job pressmen, feeders and assistants, who are members of a newly organized union branch, went on a strike in an endeavor to unionize all the printing establishments in Detroit and secure a uniform scale of wages for job press work. The employing printers declined to make the wage uniform.

Trampled by Family Horse.

George Brown, a farmer, living near Logansport, Ind., is almost dead of injuries inflicted by a horse. The animal has always been tractable, but as Brown entered the stall it trampled him under foot and bit and kicked him. Internal injuries were sustained and his right eye was gouged out.

Ravages of the Cholera.

Bombay special: The cholera is raging fearfully at the great camp at Godra, where thousands of famine-stricken natives are receiving relief. A hundred and fifty corpses were removed one day recently, but 100 others had to be left because it was impossible to procure bearers.

Bank Robbed of $5,000.

Eight men opened the vault of the Massanutten Bank at Strasburg, Va., and blew open three safes, securing $5,000. Negotiable papers and securities amounting to $75,000 were untouched. The men escaped on a hand car on the Southern Railway.

Gift from Prince of Wales.

Brussels special: The Prince of Wales has sent to Station Master Corcius, who is supposed to have saved his life, a scarf pin set with brilliants and rubies. It is shaped like the Prince's cornet and bears his motto.

Suburban Hotel Burns.

The Gramatan Inn at Bronxville, a suburb of New York, was destroyed by fire. The guests got out in safety and saved many of their personal effects. The loss is estimated at $150,000.

House Falls, Hurting Five.

By the collapse of a double-story frame house at Seventeenth and State streets, Chicago, five persons were injured, two seriously, the others painfully. The building was old and stood on wooden posts. One of these gave way, causing the collapse. All the occupants were colored.

Boers Sentence Free Stater.

The scouts who escaped from Wepener report that the Boers have captured Vanderhoven, a Free Stater who acted as land drost for the British at Wepener, and have sentenced him to death.

Muskegon Church Burns.

The Immanuel Holland Reformed Church burned at Muskegon, Mich. Nicholas Carpy, driver of a hook and ladder truck, was killed by the falling of the rear wall, and Ben Peterson, who with Carey was on a ladder, was seriously injured. Loss about $5,000, uninsured.

To Reopen Mills.

Prices of steel products will be cut so as to dispose of the surplus stock and reopen the idle mills. This conclusion was arrived at at a conference between President Lambert of the American Steel and Wire Company and President Gary of the Federal company.

FARMERS OFFER HIGH PAY.

Agriculturists Flood State Agencies with Demands for Workers.

Scarcity of farm hands in northern Illinois and Wisconsin is worrying the farmers. Ever since the snow in those districts melted the applications for help have flooded the Chicago State employment agencies with requests for men. Single men are preferred, but those with wives and a small family are acceptable. The chief difficulty lies in the fact that, while many men can work in the fields, few of them can milk. Consequently in their despair the farmers are offering higher wages. At first they wanted men who would work for from $16 to $20 a month. But not enough responded and now the employers are willing to pay from $18 to $24 and give the helpers board and lodging. Several farmers abused the good will of the agency by telling men who had gone out of the city at their own expense to get places that vacancies had been filled already. Assistant Superintendent Thomas Devenish now has made it a rule not to send any more men to the farmers unless transportation is provided or a representative of the employers calls at the agency.

IRREGULARITY IN TRADE SITUATION.

Caused by Weather Conditions and Manipulation of Iron and Steel Prices.

Bradstreet's views the trade situation thus: "More rather than less irregularity in the trade and price situation is to be noted this week, partly the result of weather conditions, but partly as in the case of the iron and steel trade, because of the continuance of those missionary efforts in the direction of lower prices which have been such a feature of the iron and steel trade of late. That the basic conditions of trade remain on the whole favorable, is, however, evidenced by a number of features. Railroad earnings continue heavy, and the decrease noted in bank clearings is chargeable largely to religious and other holiday observances and to restricted stock speculation. Heavy rains and cool weather early in the week had a depressing effect on trade and collections. Wheat, including flour, shipments for the week aggregated 3,898,451 bushels, against 2,896,653 bushels last week. Corn exports for the week aggregate 3,158,747 bushels, against 2,799,444 bushels last week."

ACTRESSES' GOWNS RUINED.

An Unknown Disturber Throws Acid on Them in the Street.

Kathryn Osterman, Ethel Levy, Dorothy Drew, and Mrs. Harry Watson were conspicuous among the promenaders on the sunny side of State street, Chicago, for the costly gowns they wore on a recent afternoon. When they returned to their apartments they were horrified to find their dresses ruined by an acid which had evidently been thrown upon them with malicious intent. J. J. Rosenthal, Kathryn Osterman's husband, who is a theatrical manager, has suggested that perhaps an envious actor or actress was the perpetrator of this peculiar form of spite work. All four gowns are perforated with holes the size of a dime, as if the acid had been thrown with a syringe.

DIES IN A BOXING CONTEST.

Friendly Bout Between Boys Has a Fatal Termination.

At Hamilton, Ohio, Elmer Harris, 17 years old, fell dead at the end of a friendly boxing bout with George James and Charles Gronbach in a shed fitted up for a gymnasium behind the Harris home. Coroner McHenry held an autopsy and found death to be due to hemorrhage of the brain caused by a blow. He exculpates Harris' young antagonists, however.

Bridge Gives Way.

An east-bound train on the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern crashed through the bridge two miles east of Dillsboro, Ind. Five cars of merchandise were destroyed. The bridge caught fire and enveloped the wreckage in flames. Engineer George Crone of Seymour, Ind., jumped from the cab, but was caught under the engine and burned to death.

Shot Down at His Doorstep.

John H. Allen, a storekeeper at Ottumwa, Kan., was murdered at his doorstep as he was about to enter his home, the assassin emptying a load of buckshot into his breast, causing instant death. J. W. Harris, who lives near Ottumwa, has been arrested on circumstantial evidence. The men had quarreled over family affairs.

Mexican Town Destroyed.

Panuca, Mexico, one of the most important trading towns on the coast of the republic, has been entirely destroyed by fire. The loss will aggregae $2,225,000. No reports of fatalities have been received.

Reaches Lake Athabasca.

The Tyrell exploring party, with whom is Archdeacon Lofthouse, reached Fort Chipewyan, on Lake Athabasca, March 19. They covered the 480 miles from Lac La Biebe on snow shoes in seventeen days.

Choke an Elephant to Death.

Dick, a vicious elephant belonging to the Sells & Forepaugh circus, was strangled to death in Madison Square Garden, New York, in a futile attempt to subdue him. He was one of the eight original Forepaugh dancing elephants.

Shot to Death by Footpads.

At Los Angeles, Cal., Joseph Hildner, formerly of Chicago, was shot to death by two footpads. Hildner was escorting his mother to her home. Both were commanded to surrender valuables. As they both demurred, the fatal shot was fired.

Prices of Stoves to Go Up.

The Western Association of Stove Manufacturers, in session at Columbus, Ohio, authorized a further advance in the prices of stoves of 5 per cent. The Western association is composed of all the leading manufacturers of the Northwest.

Kept His Word.

George Phillips, aged 35, came home drunk at Muncie, Ind., and fired two bullets into his heart. He had not drank anything for six years, and had told his wife that if he ever drank again he would kill himself.

St. Louis Chronicle Burned Out.

The plant of the St. Louis Chronicle, occupying the three and four-story buildings at 14 to 18 North Sixth street, St. Louis, was practically destroyed by a fire. The fire is supposed to have originated in the boiler room.

Has Taken Hundred Wheels.

Garfield McDonald confessed to the Chicago police that he had stolen 100 bicycles from the basement storerooms of flat buildings on the South Side during the last three months. He disposed of the wheels to regular bicycle dealers.

Massacre by "Boxers."

Members of the "Boxers" Society massacred many Chinese Catholics near Pao Ting Fu, in the province of Pe Chi Li, southwest of Tien Tsin.

Reply of the Sultan.

The Porte has replied evasively that the American claims will be paid "under the same conditions as in the case of other foreign subjects."

Town is Wiped Out by Fire.

Mrs. A. Lindahl and Mrs. J. Bjornson lost their lives in a fire which destroyed the entire business portion of Edinburg, N. D. The buildings were wooden and very dry, there having been no rain for weeks. Not a building or a dollar's worth of goods in the business section was saved. Twenty stores, two elevators, a train of Great Northern freight cars and a locomotive were destroyed.

CRIPPLED BOAT REACHES PORT.

Spanish Steamer El Salto Burns Everything but the Hull to Make Steam.

The iron hull of the Spanish steamer El Salto came into port at Norfolk, Va., the other day. There was nothing left but the hull and engines, for the boat encountered violent storms and the crew burned everything combustible on board in order to make steam enough to get into port. The Salto was bound from Rio to Queenstown by way of Philadelphia. She sailed with a big cargo of manganese ore, ship and cargo being valued at $300,000. Her coal supply was barely enough to take her to Philadelphia, where she was to refill her bunkers, but a bad storm off Hatteras used up this scanty supply, and, to keep her head on to the storm, the captain began to feed her woodwork into the furnaces. She battled through the gale and headed for Norfolk, but masts, spars, rails, decks and furniture all had to be sacrificed to bring her into the roads.

ACTOR SWALLOWS MORPHINE.

Edward Gray Fights Those Who Attempt to Save His Life.

Edward Gray, an actor, attempted suicide by taking morphine in St. Louis. His life was saved by an attendant at the hospital, who marched him up and down the corridors in an endeavor to keep him from dropping into the sleep which knows no waking. Gray fought with the attendant, but was lashed on the legs and compelled to keep moving, despite his intense desire to lie down. Gray said that he had swallowed morphine because he was tired of life. He is 22 years old. He says that his mother, Lizzie Gray, was an actress before his birth, and his father, Edward Gray, is a resident of Chicago; that when a babe in arms he had made his first appearance on the stage, and ever since had followed acting for a living.

Slain by a Mexican Bandit.

News has reached Eagle Pass, Texas, of the killing of Jordan L. Cooke at Acatlan, Oaxaca, Mexico. Cooke was in charge of a railroad construction gang at that place and was standing in a group of half a dozen men when a bandit rode up and fired several shots into the party, killing young Cooke.

Planned Dewey's Death.

P. A. Summey, an ex-Confederate soldier, who is insane, had planned to assassinate Admiral Dewey on the arrival of the latter and his wife at Macon, Ga., March 22. In a lucid interval the day before the admiral's arrival Summey realized what he had arranged to do, and went into the country. He was preparing to kill himself when arrested.

Fatal Pneumonia at Butte.

The epidemic which is carrying dozens of citizens of Butte, Mont., to their graves has been diagnosed as pneumonia. As an illustration of the terrible fatality of the disease, out of forty-eight cases in one of the hospitals forty-four deaths resulted.

Official Commits Suicide.

Charles G. Fleischmann, secretary of the Trust Security and Safe Deposit Company of Detroit, hanged himself in a barn in the rear of his residence. No reason for the deed can be given unless a recent illness had unbalanced his mind.

Murdered by Highway Robbers.

Andrew Stubis, of Pittston, Pa., was murdered while resisting two highwaymen, who rifled his pockets of everything of value. The murderers escaped, leaving no clew to their identity.

Try to Blow Up Welland Canal.

An attempt was made to blow up lock No. 24 of the Welland canal at Port Colborne, Ont., with dynamite by two men who made their escape. The lock was badly damaged.

New Gold Find in Australia.

Australian advices chronicle the discovery of rich placer ground at Wedderburn, Victoria. John Boyd, the first man to stake ground, unearthed a sixty-one ounce nugget at twenty-two feet depth.

Cissy Loftus Saved from Death.

Cissy Loftus, the divorced wife of Justin Huntley McCarthy, the author, was rescued from drowning at Old Point Comfort, Va., by a sailor. She denies that she attempted to commit suicide.

Small Tornado in Nebraska.

A miniature tornado swept over Wymore and that section of country. A windmill was carried a distance of half a mile and several small buildings razed. So far as known no lives were lost.

Naval Rivalry to End.

The strife between Rear Admirals Sampson and Schley is settled, Schley taking precedence over Sampson and to rank next to Dewey.

Jockey Killed in a Race.

Jockey Frank O'Leary was killed in a race on the Aqueduct track, New York. Two other jockeys and two horses were injured.

Auditor of State—W. H. Hart, of Frankfort.
Treasurer of State—Leopold Levy, of Huntington.
Attorney General—W. L. Taylor, of Indianapolis.
Superintendent of Public Instruction—Frank L. Jones, of Tipton.
Judges of the Supreme Court—Fourth District, Leander J. Monks, of Winchester; First District, James H. Jordan, of Martinsville.
State Statistician—John B. Conner, of Indianapolis.
Delegates-at-Large to National Convention—Senator Charles W. Fairbanks, Senator A. J. Beveridge, Gov. James Mount and Charles S. Henly.

Indianapolis correspondence:

W. T. Durbin of Anderson, national committeeman, was nominated for Governor Thursday afternoon by the Republican State convention. Seven ballots were necessary.

The real work of the Republican State convention began Thursday over the nominations for the State officers and four delegates-at-large. At 9 o'clock the body was called to order and it was apparent that a fight for the nomination for Governor would be made from the very beginning. The headquarters of the six candidates for the gubernatorial nomination did not close until long after midnight, and each contestant expressed the utmost confidence that he would be the chosen man.

A telegram from Senator Beveridge, who is in Dansville, N. Y., by reason of the illness of his wife, was read before the convention in which he expressed regret that he was unable to be present. Chairman Hanley was unable to preside because of a heavy cold, and Congressman Hemenway took the chair.

The candidates for Governor placed before the convention were J. S. Dodge, J. L. Griffiths, W. S. Haggard, W. T. Durbin, F. B. Posey and E. G. Hogate. There were 1,434 delegates, making 718 votes necessary to nominate. Balloting began at once.

The fight for the Governorship nomination was one of the most hotly contested struggles in the history of the party in this State. Those who had predicted that under no circumstances would the strength of Griffiths be thrown to Durbin, or vice versa, were correct. The supporters of the two leaders were firm to the finish. Even at the end of the sixth ballot, when Durbin had 700 votes, falling short of nomination by only 18, the Griffiths supporters would not give an inch, and they carried their favorite through the seventh ballot, until Durbin had enough votes to nominate him.

For five ballots Griffiths and Durbin ran a close race. Then Hogate withdrew and his support went to Durbin like a flash, pushing the latter's vote up to 700. The Griffiths men were still game, and Durbin wanted only eighteen more votes. These he got when Dodge and Posey withdrew. The seventh ballot resulted: Durbin, 977; Griffiths, 457. Griffiths moved to make the nomination unanimous, which was done, and Durbin was called to the front of the platform and made a speech.

Fight for Second Place.

The fight for the lieutenant governorship plum was a surprise. L. P. Newby of the Sixth district showed great strength on the first ballot, the vote for him being 450, as against 260 for N. W. Gilbert of Angola, his nearest competitor. Newby's friends expected him to be nominated on the second ballot, and as soon as the result of the first ballot was announced they put on their hustling clothes and started after votes. Allen County cast twenty-eight votes for Gilbert and three for Newby, figures that were given out after the Fort Wayne primaries.

After that county Newby took the bit in his teeth and showed good increases for several counties. Gilbert showed more strength in Delaware County than he was credited with. He had nineteen votes on this ballot to Newby's ten, when it was supposed that vote would be reversed. The vote of Marion County was listened to with interest, for it was in this county that Gilbert and Newby had a hard fight for delegates at the primaries.

On the second ballot Gilbert received 52½ votes and Newby 58½. Wayne County gave evidence that it was getting ready to swing the result for Lieutenant Governor, as it did in Durbin's nomination. The result of the second ballot was as follows: Embree, 126; Shutts, 220; Gilbert, 327½; Newby, 539½; Babcock, 43; Baker, 178. Just after announcement of the result of the second ballot the name of J. N. Babcock of Topeka, one of the three candidates from the Twelfth district, was withdrawn.

The first counties called gave gains for Newby. The gains continued steadily. The third ballot resulted: Newby, 673; Gilbert, 527; Shutts, 147; Baker, 44; Embree, 41; Babcock, 2. Shutts and Embree then withdrew, and the stampede to Gilbert began. He was nominated on the next ballot, and the convention, after being in session continuously for nearly ten hours, had disposed of only two nominations.

Hunt for Secretary of State, Hart for Auditor, Levy for Treasurer and Taylor for Attorney General had no opposition, and were nominated by acclamation.

It was 7 o'clock when the next fight was reached. It was over the nomination for reporter of the Supreme Court. Chas. F. Remy was nominated on the second ballot. Connor, for State statistician, had some opposition, but he landed the nomination. From then on down through the list there was little loafing, as the delegates were thoroughly tired out and anxious to quit. The convention adjourned after being in continuous session thirteen hours.

REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.

The Indiana Republicans in convention at Indianapolis adopted the following resolutions:

The Republicans of Indiana in State convention assembled at the city of Indianapolis adopt and proclaim the following declaration of principles:

We emphatically indorse the wise and patriotic administration of President McKinley. In the whole history of this country there has been no period so distinctively marked by prosperity and progress as that of this splendid Republican administration. It furnishes a most practical illustration of the difference between a party of capacity and one of incapacity. Under its policies the country has passed from extreme depression to unparalleled prosperity. Party pledges have been scrupulously kept; the dignity and honor of the nation maintained everywhere; the dangers and perplexities of a great foreign war successfully met; the glory of the flag augmented; imperishable fame added to our army and navy; the public credit strengthened until the nation's bonds, bearing a lower rate of interest than any like securities in the world, command a premium in the market; new opportunities to labor created; additional markets opened to our surplus products of every kind, taxing production to its utmost capacity to meet consumption and demand; Spanish cruelty and oppression forever banished from this hemisphere and the Philippine Islands; the open-door policy in China secured to all the commercial nations of the world through American diplomacy; and a more fraternal feeling inculcated between the North and South. We offer this partial review of magnificent achievements of the administration of William McKinley as a warrant for its continuance in power. And we pledge the hearty support of the Republican party in Indiana to his renomination and re-election as a just and well deserved reward for his splendid services to the nation.

Indiana has been well and faithfully represented in Congress and we point with special pride to and congratulate our Senators and Republican representatives in Congress upon their distinguished ability and the conspicuous part they have taken in shaping national legislation, thereby adding to the prestige of this great State.

Section 1 contains eulogies to the memories of Vice-President Garret A. Hobart, Maj. Gen. Henry W. Lawton and Col. Richard W. Thompson. The other sections are:

The conflict with Spain was begun and carried on from humane and disinterested motives. The possession of the islands which came to our hands as a result of that war was a consequence of it not foreseen but which could not be avoided with honor and safety. We cannot escape the responsibility resting upon us. Our first duty is to establish the authority of the United States against armed resistance; then to replace military by civil administration. The guiding principle of our conduct in dealing with the people of these islands should be to promote their highest welfare and we pledge the largest possible freedom of control in their affairs, as their ability for self-government shall be developed, and to use all proper means to advance their civilization and enlightenment.

We unhesitatingly indorse and approve the policy and course of the administration and the legislation by Congress in respect to our newly acquired possessions and express full confidence in the wisdom, integrity and ability of the administration, supported by a Republican Congress, to deal wisely and justly with the questions concerning the same, as they may arise.

The employment of the people is the contentment of the people. The greatest benefaction to man is the opportunity to labor. Our best hope for the continued employment of labor lies in the domination of the world's markets by American agricultural and mechanical products. Low interest rates are potent factors in the extension of American commerce and industry, at home and abroad. The wise financial legislation of the Republican party has largely secured these results. We, therefore, congratulate the American people in that the Republican party has kept its beneficent pledge for the maintenance of the gold standard and the parity of all our forms of money by comprehensive, courageous legislation. The Republican party has always stood and now stands for money laws that benefit all our people alike, without preference of one over another, the borrower as well as the lender, and such as equalize and lower the rates of interest throughout the country. And to this end we favor legislation authorizing elasticity in our bank currency for the benefit of our producers, the laborer, the farmer and the manufacturer, and for the general commerce of our people, under the guidance and control of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Combinations of capital having as their object or effect the control of the production of commodities, or the markets thereof, are hurtful and injurious to the best interests of the people. This evil should be overthrown without injury to honest trade. We, therefore, favor such additional legislation, both State and national, as shall establish complete legal control over all trusts and monopolies, with full power to dissolve the same and mete proper punishment to all who thus seek to destroy honest competition and prevent the widest possible employment to labor.

We reaffirm our belief in the doctrine of reciprocity and protection to American labor and home industries and point to the beneficial results which have come from the enactment of the Dingley law. It will be the care of the Republican party to maintain the law in harmony with changing conditions from time to time, so that it shall at all times subserve the purpose of protection to the interests of labor and production.

We recognize a debt of gratitude to the soldiers and sailors of the late war with Spain and in the Philippine Islands; and we tender to those now in the field our fullest confidence, sympathy and support. Just and liberal pensions to all deserving soldiers and sailors are a sacred debt of the nation; and the widows and orphans of those who are dead are entitled to the care of a generous and grateful people.

We again recommend the early construction of the Nicaraguan Canal under the immediate direction and exclusive control of the United States government.

We favor the enactment and enforcement of laws restricting and preventing the importation of such undesirable foreign population as is prejudicial to free American labor.

The platform indorses "the clean and able administration of Gov. James A. Mount in the intelligent, honorable and economical management of State affairs." It pays a tribute to the Indiana soldiers now fighting in the Philippines, and ends:

"The insurrection of Aguinaldo is kept alive by the hope of Democratic success based on the false cry of 'imperialism.' We condemn this unpatriotic policy as being responsible for the continued war in the Philippines, with its cost of lives, suffering and treasure."

Largest Nugget.

The largest and most valuable nugget of gold ever found was discovered in Australia in 1852. It was reported to weigh 223 pounds and 4 ounces, and was worth about $55,000.

Battle Steeds.

The most celebrated battle steeds of the civil war were Cincinnati, Traveler and Winchester, the favorite chargers of Grant, Lee and Sheridan.

Bread 600 Years Old.

A loaf of bread 600 years old is something of an antiquity. Such a loaf is to be found at Ambaston, in Derbyshire, England. It was included in a grant of land from the crown in the reign of King John, and has remained in the Soar family ever since.—Youth's Companion.

ECLIPSE OF THE SUN.

PHENOMENON OCCURS MAY 28, AND WILL BE TOTAL.

In the Path of Totality the Orb of Day Will Be Obscured for Nearly Two Minutes—The Event Is Attracting World-Wide Attention.

The forthcoming total eclipse of the sun, on May 28, is attracting world-wide attention, and astronomers everywhere have long been making preparations for observing and photographing the phenomenon. Besides making the usual time observations, interest largely centers in photographing the corona, the coronal streamers, the spectra of the chromosphere, and particularly the celebrated flash spectrum appearing both at beginning and end of totality. Fortunately for us, it will be possible to witness the phenomenon from many sections of the United States. On the occasion of the last eclipse scientists who desired to study the sun during the brief period of totality hurried to western India, and many of them were successful in obtaining excellent photographs of the great event.

On May 28 the circular shadow of the moon cast by the sun upon the earth, and about eighty miles in diameter, will come sweeping across the American continent from New Orleans to Cape Henry. Along the center of the path traveled by this swiftly moving shadow the sun will be completely hidden for a period of about two minutes. More than forty miles away, on either side of the track the eclipse will be partial, not total. To witness this astronomical marvel it will only be necessary to take up a favorable position in the State of Mississippi, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina or Virginia. As it has been many years since an eclipse has occurred under circumstances so favorable to American astronomers, it will undoubtedly be witnessed by thousands of students who have felt regret that previous exhibitions have occurred at distances so great as to prevent them from witnessing the events.

An eclipse of the sun that will be visible to us can occur only when the moon is new. At that time she passes exactly between us and the sun. If an eclipse should happen when she was at her least distance from us, say 222,000 miles away, the apex of the shadow would pass over our heads at a distance of many thousands of miles. In the first instance the eclipse will be total along the path made by the falling shadow. In the second instance the eclipse will be annular, as the moon will be so diminished that at no time will she be able to completely obscure the sun.

Prof. Langley, who is an authority upon sun eclipses, is enthusiastic in anticipation of the exhibition that is to be given next May. "Such eclipses," he says, "are impressive and awful to the last degree and must be seen to be appreciated. A total eclipse of the sun is worth a journey round the world to behold, and repetition does not dull the interest."

According to the calculations of Prof. Lumsden, the round black shadow of the moon, like a great arm, will sweep in out of space some time after sunrise on the morning of May 28. This gigantic arm will come into contact with the earth somewhere near the Revilla Gigedo islands in the Pacific ocean. With tremendous velocity the shadow will rush toward the mainland and will enter Mexico, near Corrientes, at a speed of more than 100 miles a minute. In eight minutes it will have crossed the Rocky mountains, and by 7:30 central or 8:30 eastern time it will have crossed the gulf and entered Mexico. Then on it will pass, over its selected path, until it is lost again in space.

In order to witness this phenomenon to best advantage one should be in the center of the ground over which the shadow is to fall. The best position is upon the highest possible eminence, as under those conditions one is able to appreciate the tremendous impression caused by the rushing upon us of such a stupendous shadow.

The period of totality of the eclipse varies at different points along the track. At the Rocky mountains the spectacle will last but about thirty seconds, and at New Orleans the period will have been lengthened thirty-seven seconds. At Union Point, Green County, Georgia, the center of the path for the United States, the time of totality will be ninety-two seconds, while those who are at the Atlantic coast, just south of the city of Norfolk, will be able to continue their observations for 105 seconds.

While the occasion will be a most interesting one to all who are able to witness the phenomenon to astronomers the event will be of the utmost importance, as there are several questions that they hope to be able to answer after they have made their next observations. One of the most important problems relates to the composition and arrangement of the various layers of vapor and dust that envelope the sun as with an atmosphere. Another relates to the existence and position of what is sometimes called the "reversing layer."

Municipal Matters.

The City of Mexico has 411 artesian wells.

Philadelphia has appropriated $750,000 for new bridges.

Brooklyn has 31,687 apartment houses and 500,000 tenement house dwellers.

In Philadelphia recently 679 new saloon licenses were granted in seven days.

It is estimated that gamblers in New York have been paying over $2,000,000 a year for "protection."

In fifteen years the expenses of administering the municipal government of Boston has increased from $15,589,000 to $29,325,000.

Last year the death rate in the City of Mexico was nearly 44 per 1,000, or about the same as that of Bombay. It is expected that the opening of a new drainage system, which is to take place soon, will cut down the death rate one-half.

BURGHERS SLIP AWAY

ESCAPE ROBERTS' TRAP NEAR WEPENER AND FLEE.

Trek for the North After Freeing Wepener—British Net to Entrap Entire Army Useless—Disaster in Pretoria Arsenal—Ten Workmen Killed.

South Africa advices say that after heavy fighting, Wepener has been relieved and the all-day artillery battle at Dewetsdorp Wednesday resulted in the occupation of that point by the British troops. Between Dewetsdorp and Thabanchu Gens. Pole-Carew and French have been driving the Boers before them. Gen. Roberts' army is now deployed along an extended line, with Gen. French apparently repeating the tactics which resulted so successfully at Paardeberg. There is nothing in the dispatches that indicates the Boers are thinking of retreating northward, even though the field were open. Instead they are fighting along the entire line.

The British hope of conclusive results seems slim at present, the Boers escaping unbeaten and having accomplished an immense amount of damage. They clung to their positions as long as it was safe to do so, and then slipped off to hold the next commanding ridge through a broken country admirably suited for a rear guard defense.

Dispatches from Aliwal North, under date of Wednesday, say the Boers left Wepener so hurriedly that many of the dead were left in the trenches unburied. Commandant S. Cronje is reported to have been killed.

According to advices from Bloemfontein, the attempt of the Boers at Brandfort to get in touch with the command at Thaba Nchu was frustrated by a force dispatched by Gen. Tuckel from Glen.

Apparently, however, the tide, after a momentary delay, is again setting toward the British side, though so far as reported the engagements, beyond the relief of Wepener, are scarcely of sufficient importance to warrant so sweeping a generalization. In one respect only can the movement against Wepener be regarded as a Boer success. By making this diversion and by the renewed activity in Natal, where the Boers are massing at Tintwa pass, thus menacing Buller's army, the invasion of the Transvaal has again been indefinitely delayed.

A dispatch to the London Daily Mail from Lourenco Marques, dated Wednesday, says that a daring attempt was made Sunday night to destroy the bridge at Komatipoort, the terminus of the Delagoa Bay Railway in the eastern part of Portuguese, East Africa. The attempt failed by the merest accident, kaffirs giving the alarm. The Boers have consequently increased their force on the frontier and the hills are lined with riflemen, the burghers suspecting that the British are advancing upon the Transvaal by some mysterious route. Every approach to the bridge is guarded by barbed wire. The correspondent does not indicate who it was who attempted to destroy the bridge.

Part of the Begbie shell factory at Pretoria blew up the other night. Ten men were killed and thirty-two wounded. They were mostly French and Italians. No cause of the explosion is assigned, but it is not believed to be due to treachery. The factory has been working double time for weeks. Most of the important machinery was saved.

MACHINE GUNS USED ON REBELS

Eighty Filipinos Mowed Down, While Americans Are Not Harmed.

Officers who have arrived in Manila from Nueva Caceras, province of South Camarines, bring details of a fight in which eighty Filipinos were killed. The American outposts reported 300 natives assembled three miles from the town and Gen. Bell sent three detachments of the Forty-fifth regiment, with two Maxims, who nearly surrounded the Filipinos, the majority of whom were armed with bolos and wore carabao hide helmets, coats and shields. The Filipinos were quickly put to flight, leaving the field strewn with armor. Their riflemen were unable to shoot straight and the bolomen never got near enough to the Americans to do any execution. Therefore none of the Americans was wounded. Lieut. Balch, with twenty cavalrymen from the Thirty-seventh regiment, cornered fifty bolomen in a river and shot every one, the bodies floating away. One soldier had his head struck off with a bolo.

Gen. Bell's two regiments are hard worked in clearing the country. They meet with many small squads of bolomen and last week killed a total of 125. Gen. Bell has issued a proclamation declaring that he will retaliate relentlessly unless this guerrilla warfare ceases and that he will burn all the towns which harbor guerrillas.

Dewey Gets a Watch.

A gold hunting-case watch was presented to Admiral Dewey Wednesday in behalf of 50,000 school children of the Northwest. The presentation was made by Representative McCleary of Minnesota, and in the name of the children he made a felicitous speech. The admiral responded in a brief expression of appreciation.

THE FIRST GRANDCHILD.

"Grandmother!" called the farmer, and there came
Out through the vine-wreathed porch a blushing dame,
Surprised and eager at the strange new name.

The clock within rang forth the chime for eight,
"A message? Read it quick, how can you wait?"
Her husband, smiling, leaned upon the the gate.

At arm's length holding in his trembling hand
The crisp white sheet, while the writing scanned,
Then read once more, with voice almost unmanned;

"Thy granddaughter salutes thee, 'Baby Bell.'"
Mother and child, thank God, are doing well,"
A moment's silence on the proud twain fell.

She broke it soon. "Grandfather, I congrat——"
"What, me?" the good man cried, lifting his hat—
'Grandfather'—me? I hadn't thought of that."

How to Win a Wife.

I DON'T know how to answer you. Your news is very hard for me to bear. I feel angry, Herman."

Herman Clayton, himself the picture of sorrowful amazement, looked at his uncle in silence as the old man spoke with angry vehemence.

He was a tall, stalwart young man of 24, with a fresh, handsome face, now deeply clouded. His uncle was not over 50, but an appearance of ill health made him seem much older. His usual pallor crept once more over his flushed, excited face before he spoke again to Herman, and his angry voice was gentle as he said:

"I was hasty, Herman, hurt and surprised. Tell me, now, how did it happen?"

"I scarcely know how to tell you, sir," replied Herman respectfully.

"Where did you meet this girl?"

"Miss Gordon," said Herman, "was very intimate with Mr. Delvine's daughters. I met here there. Mr. Delvine bade me welcome in his house as soon as I became his clerk."

"I LOVED HER—THAT IS ALL."

"You met her at Delvine's? Well?"

"I loved her—that is all."

"All?—Enough I should think. And she loves you, I suppose, or I should not have heard all this?"

"She loves me," said the young man with pardonable pride.

"Oh, Herman! Why couldn't you have fallen in love with one of the Delvine girls? Nice, domestic, home-like girls, that would have made a home for you. I know this is an idle, stuck-up girl."

"I think you misjudge her, uncle."

"She is John Gordon's daughter. I can never welcome her here—never."

"I hope you will not hold to that resolution, Uncle Noel."

"I suppose you were influenced some by the $30,000 her mother left her."

"I didn't know that she had a cent."

"Her mother kept that safely enough and left it to the daughter. I knew that at the time she died. Oh, my lad, think better of it! Money is not everything."

"I never heard of her money until this minute, uncle. I do so wish you would see her."

"I see her! Never! If you marry John Gordon's daughter you may take leave of me and the farm."

"Will you tell me why one of Mr. Delvine's daughters would have suited you any better?"

There was dead silence in the room for some minutes. After this Uncle Noel spoke at last in low tones, as if he was reading instead of conversing.

"When I was a young man, Herman, not older than you, I was working on this farm for old Squire Haywood, who was very fond of me. I was only a farm hand, yet the old squire always chose me to drive him out or to do any business that required a trusty person. He had no family, so it made quite a stir when his sister died in New York and his daughter came to live on the farm. She was the handsomest woman I ever saw in my life—only 17, but with all the self-possession of a woman of 30. I was, as I said, often about her uncle, and met Alicia frequently. She was so kind to me, had so many winning ways, that she had my heart in her grasp in less than a week. Yet how was I, a poor country boy, to know it was skillful coquetry, the sport of a flirt?"

"Then John Gordon, the city lawyer, came, and he, too, loved her. I proposed to Alicia and was rejected. Gordon proposed and was accepted. I have outgrown that hallucination, my lad, yet at what a cost. Herman, do not ask me to welcome the child of John and Alicia here. I cannot do it."

"Her parents are dead," replied Herman. "She lives with her father's sister."

"I know John died insolvent and Alicia only lived a few years after her husband."

"Uncle Noel, I cannot give Gladys up, but I promise never to bring her home as my wife until you consent to our marriage. Will you see her?"

"No, no, wait till I die, Herman. Dr. Dodge says I won't live long. I have never been confined to my room, still I grow weaker. I wish I had a good servant. Eliza is wasteful, impudent and inclined to be dishonest."

"I will drive over to Tournay to-morrow and secure a good servant, uncle." He did so, and escorted his companion to his uncle's home with manly pride, and introduced her as Gladys Grey. "She has been highly recommended and I am positive will suit us."

In about a week Mr. Clayton Sr. began to wonder how he had ever existed without his new housekeeper. Gladys was untiring in her efforts to please and amuse Uncle Noel, and in his most painful moments of distress no hand was as soothing as was Galdys'.

The old man sat musing a long time. A vague mistrust of Gladys had crossed his mind, a wonder why a woman so gentle and refined, so evidently a lady, was serving in a menial capacity.

When Herman came in at tea time he found his uncle flushed and excited. In a few words the cause of the agitation was communicated to the young man. "You think Gladys is not what she seems, uncle?"

"You are right. She is under false pretenses, Herman."

"But, putting that aside, what fault have you to find?"

"Fault? I could not find a fault if I tried. She is the most lovable, capable, domestic girl I ever saw, as well as a lady in every word and action."

"Then you would like her to stay here if I prove to you she is worthy of your confidence and effection?"

"Gladly. And she is——"

"Gladys Grey Gordon! Will you forgive me the deception, Uncle Noel?"

"Will you forgive me for my willful blindness, Herman?"

"No wonder you love her! Bring her here and let me ask her if she will stay to cheer the short time I may yet live to see your happiness."

The wedding was not delayed. Care and love are rejuvenating Uncle Noel, who threatens to prove Dr. Dodge a false prophet yet, and who dearly loves to tease Gladys about the way Herman won his wife.

WHEN THE ALARM BELL RINGS AT MAFEKING.

When the Boers begin firing shell into Mafeking the alarm bell in the market place is rung to give warning to the inhabitants. Sometimes a shell drops into the town without warning having been given. The sketch from which this illustration was made was sent to London by an English officer, who says that on such occasions the inhabitants scatter right and left. Some fling themselves on the ground and one man was heard to say, as he groveled on the ground: "If anybody says he's not afraid of these shells he's a liar!"

A FAMOUS RABBI.

Rev. Isaac M. Wise, Who Died in Cincinnati Recently.

Rev. Isaac M. Wise, who died in Cincinnati recently, was the most famous leader of Judaism in this country. He was a man of great culture and power of mind. He was born in Steingrub, Austria, April 3, 1819, and in 1843 graduated from the University of Vienna. The same year he was appointed rabbi in Randitz, Bohemia, in which position he remained until 1846, when he formed the purpose of casting his lot with his people in this country. Soon after his arrival in New York he was put in charge of the Beth-El congregation at Albany, in which position he remained with credit to himself and profit to his people until 1850. Then he resigned and in 1853 located in Cincinnati, where he had since been a power among the Jews.

REV. ISAAC M. WISE.

Twenty years ago the leading Jewish congregation of New York City chose Dr. Wise as its rabbi at a salary of $10,000 per annuam for life. The thought of severing all of his deep and beautiful relations with the life of Cincinnati was not agreeable to Dr. Wise, and he decided to remain there. This was easier, since he had long cherished the thought of founding a theological seminary for Jewish students in that city.

His hopes were realized when in 1875 the Hebrew Union College was established. He had been president of this institution since its founding and had seen it grow to a college of recognized learning, with the ablest Semitic faculty in the country and equal to any in Europe. The college has a library of more than 15,000 volumes, many of them of rare value. Although more than 80 years old Dr. Wise had until this illness retained all of his mental activity of youth. He filled the chair of systematic theology in the college, and rarely missed the daily session of the classes. He was editor of the American Israelite, the most noted Jewish weekly in the country. This position he filled for more than forty years, writing from six to seven columns of editorials each week. He was the author of quite a number of books.

Came Back at Bangs.

A good story, of which John Kendrick Bangs, the humorist, is the hero, has lately leaked out. Some time ago Mr. Bangs received the following letter from a city in one of the Pacific States:

"Mr. John K. Bangs:

"Dear Sir—I have been asked to respond to a toast at our Board of Trade's annual dinner next month, and I write to inquire what would be your lowest terms for preparing a good, rattling, funny speech for me to deliver on that occasion. A prompt reply will oblige. Yours very truly,

"—— ——."

To which Mr. Bangs immediately sat down and penned the following answer:

"Dear Sir—I am in receipt of your esteemed favor of the — inst., and in reply would say that my regular rate for after-dinner speeches is $500 per speech. I have not as yet, however, opened up this line of goods in the West, and as I am anxious to secure custom in that part of the country, I will offer you special terms, namely, $250 for such an address as you describe, the amount to be sent as soon as shipment is made. If the terms proposed are satisfactory, kindly let me know at once, but in that case I would request you not to mention the matter to Chauncey Depew or Gen. Horace Porter, as I should not like them to know that I am cutting rates. Truly yours,

"JOHN KENDRICK BANGS."

This letter was duly sent, and on the day when it reached its destination Mr. Bangs received the following telegram:

"Your letter just received. If Chauncey Depew's speeches are written by you, then I don't want one."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Black Coats.

An English clergyman, rather pompous of manner, according to Spare Moments was fond of chatting with a witty chimney sweep.

Once, when the minister returned from his summer holidays, he happened to meet his youthful acquaintance, who seemed to have been at work.

"Where have you been?" asked the clergyman.

"Sweeping the chimneys at the vicarage," was the boy's answer.

"How many chimneys are there, and how much do you get for each?" was the next question.

The sweep said there were twenty chimneys, and that he was paid a shilling apiece.

The clergyman, after thinking a moment, looked at the sweep in apparent astonishment. "You have earned a great deal of money in a little time," he remarked solemnly, wondering, probably, what the sooty fellow would reply.

"Yes," said the sweep, throwing his bag over his shoulder as he started away, "we who wear black coats get our money very easily!"

Napoleon and the Press.

"When I returned from Elba," Napoleon is quoted as saying, in the Century, "I found, among other papers of the Bourbons, an account of 6,000 francs paid monthly to the editors of the Times, besides taking a hundred numbers monthly, and I had an offer from them to write for me for payment. I had offers from the editors of several English newspapers to write for me, even during the time of war, previous to my going to Elba, and to insert news and everything else I wished, and that money would be taken to send them to France. I did not do it. I was wrong, however; I ought to have accepted their offers, and then my name would not have been held in such odium in England as it was. This they said themselves to me. For in the end these newspapers formed the public opinion, and always will do. I was very wrong; I see it now."

Why She Refrains.

"It is true. My wife never scolds, never scowls, never frowns."

"Do you expect us to believe such nonsense?"

"I do. Why not? I can explain."

"Then explain."

"She doesn't scold because it twists her mouth; she doesn't scowl because it gives her crowsfeet, and she doesn't frown because it brings wrinkles."

"Good. But inwardly?"

"Don't ask me. The question is too harrowing."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

American-Made Shoes the Better.

It is the uniform testimony of Americans when they return from an extended visit abroad that they can get neater, better and more durable shoes here than they can in England and Germany, and for less money. The dexterity of the American operatives and the perfection of the American machinery are combining to bring to this country the shoe manufacturing business of a large part of the world.—Burlington Hawkeye.

Not a Man's Life.

"Such a double life as his is not altogether manly!"

"No, the life he leads at home is no more than a dog's life!"—Detroit Journal.

You would be surprised if you knew how your friends talk about you behind your back.

MAN-EATING LIONS.

OBSTRUCT RAILROAD WORK IN CENTRAL AFRICA.

Voracious Beasts Kill Nearly One Hundred Men and Injure Many Others—Their Frightful Ravages Committed in Africa and India.

Obstructing the building of a railroad is a rather unusual feat for lions, yet that is what two of them did some time ago in Central Africa, near Victoria Nyanza. The matter was referred to by Lord Salisbury in one of his addresses in the British House of Lords.

These lions were man-eaters and for more than eight months they terrorized 6,000 laborers engaged in the work of construction. Scores of these men they dragged off and devoured. The greater part of the camp, having at length moved up the country beyond the forging ground of the lions, several hundred were left behind to build bridges. Upon these the lions made a still more sanguinary descent. Night after night they would carry away one and sometimes two men. They attacked white engineers, doctors, soldiers and military officers as well as laborers from India, coolies and African natives. On almost any night, and at any time of the night, the men were liable to be aroused by the shrieks of their abducted comrades, and to hear the cracking of their bones and the tearing of their limbs a rod or two away, while the lions growled and quarreled over their prey. Sick men in the hospital died from sheer terror at these horrible sounds and the horrible scenes they suggested. The beasts were shot at in the darkness, but seldom hit. For firearms, fire or torches they cared nothing. One of them leaped upon an officer, tore his knapsack from his back and then carried away and a devoured a soldier near him.

MAN-EATING LION ATTACKS NATIVES IN CENTRAL AFRICA.

Many became so terror-stricken that they threw themselves on the rails in front of a coastward train and insisted on either being run over or carried off on the train. Those who stayed forsook the tents and huts and camped out on top of the water tanks, on roofs and bridge girders or in beds lashed to the highest branches of the trees. One night one of these broke, letting its lodgers fall within a few feet of the lions. But, being already too occupied with devouring a victim, the brutes gave no heed to this "windfall," but let the intruders escape until another meal.

Killed Nearly One Hundred Men.

During the eight months that these lions lived upon these railroad men they would be occasionally wounded by a shot and obliged to retire from active life, thus giving the camp intervals of quiet. But they killed and ate in all nearly thirty natives of India, twice as many African natives, besides injuring many others of various nationalities.

It was impossible to poison them because they confined their diet entirely to human beings, to the neglect of every kind of game, with which the region abounds. The white men were not numerous enough to hunt them successfully and the Sepoys were too unskilled with firearms. At length an engineer of the line who spent months of his time pursuing them, worn out by loss of sleep, sitting up in the moonlight and tracking them during the day, succeeded in shooting them both and putting an end to these man-eaters' reign of terror. They were each over nine feet long.

Both Africa and India are in many parts under the dominion of the lion and tiger. Against the lion of South Africa the native has to be constantly on his guard. The Arabs arrange their tents in a circle in the center of which the herds are penned, and outside the tents is a rude hedge. When they hear the animal begin roaring, and he can be heard plainly at a distance of three miles, sometimes faintly nine miles off, they kindle the heaps of wood that have been piled up before each tent so that the occupant may hurl a lighted brand at him. But some of the brutes have become so wonted to the fire, the yelping of the dogs and the cries of the people that they pay no attention to them. He boldly leaps within the inclosure. He drives men, women and children into their tents, silences the dogs and stampedes horses, sheep and dogs through the hedge and across the desert.

From the sheep, too, frightened to flee, he selects his supper and carries it away to the mountains. Or if the moods suit pursues the horses and cattle. Of these he will sometimes kill three or four and suck their blood, leaving their carcasses where he overtook them. The power of these black African lions is enormous. The strongest of them can clear an eight-foot inclosure holding in their mouths a 3-year-old horse. Girard, the lion-killer, declares that he has seen one of them charge into the midst of 300 Arab horsemen on an open plain and drive them back to their encampment, the boldest of them with their horses remaining prostrate along his path.

In India a man-eating tiger kills more than a hundred people a year; sometimes four or five and even seven persons at once. In some districts 300 or 400 human beings are annually slain by tigers and in lower Bengal as many as 700 are killed. One tigress has been known to close the public roads, cause the desertion of thirteen villages and put over 250 square miles of territory out of cultivation. They become bold enough now and then to penetrate a city and are accorded its freedom until they are shot.

RE-FORMING THE RIVER NILE.

Great Engineering Feat Designed to Equalize Its Flow of Water.

One of the most ancient islands, and one rich in historic associations, is threatened with destruction. When the Nile reservoirs planned by the great Willcocks were first made known to the world, and it was found that he, although offering six or seven sites for his cyclopean designs, really only highly recommended one, the construction of which would wipe out the Island of Philae, the loveliest spot on the Nile, there was a universal howl of opposition. This got to such a height that Sir W. Garstin and his engineers may have felt a grim kind of relief when they found that the French would allow them no money from the Caisse to realize their scheme for storing the blessed water, and they had for a time to abandon the whole affair. So when, one fine morning, John Aird, Sir Benjamin Baker and their friends unexpectedly called at the office of works in Cairo and offered to make any amount of dams, canals and locks wherever they pleased, for no present cash payment, in accepting their wonderful offer the government cut down the level of the great reservoir by nearly one-half. Willocks wanted to store up 120 feet of water. Sir Benjamin Baker was told to content himself with twenty meters (about sixty-five feet) of Nile storage.

And so the artists and the tourists and the general opponents to the drowning of Philae were appeased, or at least silenced, and the greatest engineering work that the world has ever seen was quickly started and within a year 20,000 men were employed at Assouan and at the supplemental dam at Assiout.

When the dam is completed and at its high level Philae will have its temple pylons and a few of the higher ruins standing out of the water just to mark where its ancient beauties were, but all its loveliness, its verdure, its palms, several of its temples, its storied walls and its Nilometer, its colonnades, its Roman quays, will disappear beneath the waters. An island will be lost, but a continent will be saved.

He Would Pay Him.

The cultivation of his vote by the watchful and flattering ward politician sometimes arouses in the breast of the poor dweller in the slums an exaggerated notion of his political importance. At a recent banquet of the Franklin Typographical Society of Boston, a prominent printer told a story which illustrates this fact amusingly.

Not long ago a man came to this gentleman and asked for work for his boy. The applicant himself was out of work, and his family were in want.

"If you can give work to the b'y," said he, "we'll git enough out of it to pay the rint, and we won't be turned out on the street, anyhow."

The printer promised to do what he could.

"An' if ye do," the father went on, his eye lighting up with a generous gleam, "we'll put ye in McKinley's place!"

Long Names for Automobiles.

"What is the longest word in the language?" is an inquiry that frequently turns up in an editor's mail. If some other languages were in question, he would dread to see it; the answer would take too much space.

Thus in Berlin one Herr Thien, who has long been prominent in local transportation interests, has recently established a motor cab service. The pleasing German name for his vehicles is "automobiletexameterdroschken."

It is said that, despite the preposterous title, the new cabs are remarkably handsome and graceful. But if there is anything in a name, the motor carriages introduced into some parts of Belgium should instantly become sway-backed and top-heavy. The Flemish word for automobile is "snelpaardelooszoonderspoorwegpetroolrijuig."

Some Works Required.

It is well not to overstep the line beyond which the exercise of faith becomes something like negligence.

"I tell you, brudders," exclaimed a young colored pastor, who was preaching a sermon on faith, "we haven't half enough of it! De Lord will watch over our uprisin' an' our downsettin' ef we only got faith like a grain o' musta'd seed! He ain't gwine to let no hahm come to us," he went on, fervently, "ef we jis' exe'cise faith!"

"All de same, Bruddah Flint," spoke up the white-haired old patriarch upon whom rested the burden of looking after the temporal affairs of the church, "we're goin' to keep dis yer meetin' house insured agin fire an' lightnin'!"

No Foreman Printer in Stripes.

The prisoner printers on the Star of Hope, published in Sing Sing prison, objected so strongly to having a prisoner for foreman of the office that he has been removed and another man not a prisoner put in his place.

A Gigantic Sun Dial.

The largest sun dial in the world is Hayou Horoo, a large promontory, extending 3,000 feet above the Aegean Sea. As the sun swings round the shadow of this mountain it touches, one by one, a circle of islands, which act as hour marks.

Women's Doings.

WANTS TO BE PETTED.

ONE of the woman's chief charms for a man is the motherly element in her character, says a writer in the Self Culture Magazine. Possibly such a man exists, but it would be hard to find one who does not enjoy being genuinely petted and made much of. And this the older woman generally does. If a man marries a young girl she generally expects and demands all his attention, and never suspects that her husband might sometimes like a little coddling. It is this thought of caring for her husband, and looking after him that is the attraction of the affair to the mature woman, and it is generally the young man who shows the first symptoms of abandoning the platonic attitude for a warmer feeling. At first the woman hesitates, then denies his plea; for, being bound by the traditional idea of the subject, she is sure she would injure him, that he would repent, and so on. Generally, however, he knows what he wants, and persists until he finally convinces her that she only can satisfy him, and she yields.

Every man who has searched the depths of his consciousness knows that the thing he most wants and longs for is a sympathetic companion, a kindred mind. Some few men find this in their mothers and are blessed. Some find it in their wives who are younger than themselves; but the young man who marries a woman older than himself has probably grown weary of seeking an ideal companion among the girls of his acquaintance, and has turned perforce to the older woman. Whether the young men who take this course are of a more steadfast type than usual, or whether the reason lies with the women, I cannot say. But certain it is that in the vast majority of cases the attraction lasts.

Letter Writing.

Business letters must be concise and clear, because business people are supposed to be busy.

No letter is complete without the date.

In writing to solicit employment of any kind, on no account should personal perplexities or needs be mentioned. The world is full of unfortunate persons, and to a stranger the troubles of one are no more than those of a host of others.

Letters of introduction are left open when written.

Elaborately ornamented note paper, as well as highly perfumed notes, are vulgar.

When answering letters remember:

That written words stand as everlasting witnesses.

That an ambiguous sentence is likely to be misinterpreted.

That friendly words never harm.

That a written word of sympathy can sometimes do much good.

That a letter written in a kindly spirit should be answered in the same way, even though the message is disliked.

That business letters and invitations must be answered at once.

That one should acknowledge any friendly offer of hospitality, even though it be not accepted.—Kansas Journal.

Kissing Children.

Children are kissed too freely by relatives, friends and strangers. I know a lady who insists always on kissing her friends upon the lips when she meets them. The ordeal for her friends is a terrible one, yet not one of them has the heart to refuse the proffered caress, or to give the cheek in place of the lips. They would love her just as dearly and thank her just as feelingly if she pressed their hands merely and withheld her lips.

Parents ought to teach their children from their very earliest years to be chary in giving their lips. Parents themselves ought to avoid kissing infants on the mouth. The sweet cheeks, the dear little soft necks, the dimpled hands, all offer tempting nooks for kisses without endangering the child's comfort or health. I have seen a father, whose breath was vile with stale tobacco smoke, press his mouth to that of a tiny infant, never thinking that the poor baby's lungs were being poisoned by the contact, says a writer in the New York Telegram.

Call Her Nervy.

Miss Rose Weibel, a saleswoman in one of Cleveland, Ohio's, big stores, has made herself a heroine to other women of the city. At the busiest hour the other afternoon, a big rat promenaded leisurely in the aisles of the store. As many women as the counters would hold sought safety there, and the rest just screamed. Miss Weibel killed the rat, and when the women congratulated her, she said that she had done nothing remarkable.

MISS WEIBEL.

A Lost Gentleman.

What has become of that amiable representative of his sex who, by a strange irony of fate, used to be known as the "lady's man?" He was a decorative feature of society and stood as a sort of compromise between a feminine confidant and a masculine adorer. He had a fine taste in fancy work, could always be found at a lady's cafe, and had a kindred fondness for vanilla soda water. His knowledge of woman's dress was not limited to the depressing generalities with which the ordinary man is wont to describe feminine attire, and he knew real valenciennes from the plain patent variety. He was not the kind of man to have won a tear, even from a melting "Alice," but he seems to have joined that lachrymose lady in the exile to which her enemies have consigned her.—Chicago Tribune.

When Slumber Is Elusive.

If you cannot sleep at night, get up and walk around your room a few times. A long drink of cold water will effect a cure, and taking a bit to eat—half an orange or apple or a small cracker—often will result in the desired sleep, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. Try to compose your face when you go to sleep, and practice to keep it that way. More wrinkles are bred in slumber than the average person has any idea of. The short, stout woman will find, too, that it helps her to lie at her full length, rather than curled up. On awakening in the morning she should push her feet down and her hands up as far as possible, if she wouldn't increase her height.

Rainy-Day Dresses.

Conventional Woman's Danger.

Women little realize how the conventional ideals of self-possession and good form are sapping up the vital life of affection that is within them. One hears often the expression "colorless women," and many women pride themselves on the adjective—consider it the hall-mark of refinement, of good breeding, like an etching as compared to a gaudy thing in oils! One wonders whether the inner life of our cold and correct women will not blaze out some day, uncontrollable for its long confinement. Or will it die for lack of fuel?—Temple Bailey, in the Woman's Home Companion.

Be Companionable.

The art of being companionable is a secret worth finding out, even if it takes time and patience to learn it, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. Some people are born with the happy knack. There is a spontaneous gayety that you expect women to have, just as you expect the birds to sing and the sun to shine. Many a very bad quarter of an hour has been averted in the domestic circle by a bright laugh or a gay rejoinder. The laugh may be saucy and the rejoinder a bit of verbal buffet, but if it is only done good-naturedly it will be all the more effective.

ABOUT THE BABY.

A "reform" in baby clothes is absorbing the attention of mothers, and the conviction prevails that the long frocks heretofore so popular for very young babies are detrimental to the well-being and development of the child. The short, bell-shaped gown is advocated, and is fashioned of soft, clinging material.

A new method of bathing babies is that which has been brought from Russia, where it is much used among the peasants. A flannel sheet is laid in the tub, with the corners hanging outside, and a flannel pillow is placed at one end of the tub to make it resemble a bed. Water heated to the proper temperature fills the tub to below the level of the pillow, on which the baby's head rests while the bath is in progress. When the bath is over the flannel sheet is folded around the baby, and the drying process is accomplished.

Diet for the baby is a mooted question. One child will thrive on a diet that seems to be almost fatal to a less robust child whose powers of digestion and assimilation are so limited as to require special precautions in the matter of diet. Some of the foods given at this time are the following: Beef juice or beef tea, soft boiled or poached eggs, rice that has been cooked until it forms a jelly and bread and milk. In beginning to give solid food it is necessary to experiment slowly, starting with only one food at a time, and in small quantities, until its effect upon the child is established. The following preparation of beef juice has been found valuable in building up frail children: Beef from the top of the round should be cut in slices one inch thick and broiled over a coal fire until a little less than medium cooked, after which the juice should be pressed into a heated cup by means of a lemon squeezer or meat press. A tablespoonful at a time should be poured over a piece of bread and given at regular intervals.

Meaning of Fashion Terms.

Tulle is a plain, fine silk net, and illusion is a particularly fine and transparent kind of tulle.

A guimpe is a front and back yoke, to be worn with a low-cut dress, with or without attached sleeves, oftenest the latter.

The choux, so often used to describe hat trimmings, are cabbage-like knots or rosettes of ribbon, silk, tulle, chiffon or any other material.

Pointelle is dotted with small spots or polka dots. Pliese means plaited, while princess is a long gown made in one piece and fitting closely.

A cabochon, that is so much used in description of girdles, hat garniture, etc., is a round buckle, or brooch. The expression is also used to describe mock jewels—as a cabochon jewel, when they are round; that is, uncut.

Bayadere is, of course, running across. Stripes are bayadere when they run across, and, whether it is silks, ribbons, laces or dress goods, or the manner in which trimming is applied, if it is described as bayadere it runs across.

Happily Wedded.

Yesterday, April 29, at high noon occurred the wedding of Earl Hettinger of Auburn and Miss Martha Fales, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Fales, in South Wilmington, Rev. McCloe of the U. B. church in Butler officiating. About sixty guests werr present including a number from Butler and Auburn and their many friends in the neighborhood. One of the guests said he never saw so many and as valuale presents before at a wedding. this going to show the high regard in which the young couple are held. They are not only prominent people, but deservedly popular. The bride's father is a leading farmer in his neighborhood, and the groom is a son of Martin Hettinger of Auburn. They will make their home in Auburn and our citizens will welcome them to our midst.

Among those attending from Auburn were: The groom's parents, his brother Carl, and sister Jennie and his uncle, I. M. Johnson. All the guests speak of the wedding in rapturous terms, and also of the wedding feast as being the finest. They also compliment the young peole of the neighborhood, all of whom seemed to be skilled in music.

The Athletic Contest.

There was only a small attendance at the field day exercises of the high school athletic association Saturday afternoon but those present witnessed some excellent sport. The athletic grounds, which are situated just north of the school house park, were not in the best of condition, but nevertheless the young men acquitted themselves very creditably. The following is a summary of the events.

Fifty-yard dash—Harrison first, Borst second, Nusbaum third; time 6¼ seconds.

Running high kick—Henderson first, Sprott second: height 7 feet, 3½ inches.

Pole vault—Harrison first, Baxter second; height 8 feet 1 inch.

Quarter-mile run—Davenport first, Hartman second, Baxter third; time 1 minute and 5 seconds.

Running high jump—Harrison and Borst were tied; height 4 feet, 10½ inches.

Standing high jump—Harrison first, Borst second; height 3 feet 11 inches.

Putting 12-pound shot—Henderson, 32 feet, 4 inches; Nusbaum 29; Link 28.

Hundred-yard dash—Nusbaum first; Borst second, Harrison third; time 13¼ seconds.

Standing broad jump—Harrison first, Nusbaum second, Henderson third; distance 8 feet 11½ inches.

Half-mile run—Davenport first, Hartman second; time not given.

Hurdle race—Borst first, Harrison second.

Throwing base ball—Borst first, Link second, Sprott third: distance, 272 feet 5 inches.

The winners of the different events will represent the Auburn high school in the coming contest with Waterloo.

—Visitors to the convention next Tuesday will find a good bowl of soup or lunch of any kind at Purdy & Boyle's restaurant on East Ninth street, Pfefferl's old stand. The boys are preparing to feed all who call on them.

CITY ELECTION.

Republicans Get the General Officers. The Councilmen are 'Alf and 'Alf.

The first election in Auburn, held yesterday, was a quiet affair, yet there was a good deal of still hunt work going on. Both sides had excellent candidates and the result turned largely on the work of their friends. Very few straight tickets were voted, and some wild work was done in marking ballots. One man in the first ward voted for but one candidate. That was mayor, and he evidently thought he was voting a straight ticket when he marked the first name. Others voted for two men, and a few for three, evidently caring nothing about the election except to favor that many friends. In the Third Ward a number of votes were thrown out for irregularities in marking. It appears the most of these were democrats, and if counted would have elected both Sprott and Lahnum. They were evidently voted by men who are not accustomed to the Indiana law. They would jab the pencil through the rooster's eye or ornament his face with whiskers, etc. So instead of voting a straight ticket as they believed, the judges were obliged to reject them. In the First Ward all votes were good, but some were lost in the Second. In spite of a few ballots having mayor only, the vote on that office showed less than for any other. This was caused by those who refrained from voting on mayor as the head of the ticket.

We presume the defeated candidates are not feeling very sore, as few of them sought for nomination from the first. Of course, after one is nominated he dislikes the idea of a failure. But we know they will all as well as all our people, join heartily with the new officers to make our first city government a success.

The number of votes as shown on the poll books were,

First Ward	283
Second Ward	320
Third Ward	243
Total number of votes cast	846

Highest number of votes on any candidate, was on clerk..... 760

The lowest was on mayor..... 724

STRAY BALLOTS.

The democrats at Garrett made a clean sweep yesterday electing their candidates for councilmen by good majorities. The gentlemen elected are Isaac Whiteledge, I. S. Tonneson and J. W. Wagner.

The man who can figure out the whys and wherefores of the awfully mixed up vote is a dandy.

Kendallville elected two democratic councilmen, while this order was just reversed at Ligonier and Columbia

The election board will meet at the council room at 10 o'clock tomorrow to canvass the vote of yesterday.

The returns from the three wards came in in regular order last night and as fast as received were read at the opera house. The audience manifested considerable interest in the result.

NOTICE.

We, the undersigned, do hereby agree to refund the money on a 50 bottle of Downs' Elixir if it does not cure any cough, cold, croup, whooping cough or throat trouble. We also guarantee Downs' Elixir to cure consumption, when used according to directions, or money back. A full dose on going to bed and small doses during the day will cure the most severe cold and stop the most distressing cough. E. M. FISCHLER, F. E. DAVENPORT, HOWARD MCCORD.

Club Notes.

The L. L. C. met Saturday with Mrs. Barns in her new home. The day was pleasant and an unusually large number attended. The president, Mrs. Lewis, being detained for a time, the vice-president, Mrs. McCord, called the club to order and presided with ease and dignity. The first paper on the program was by Mrs. Sprott and was an able one entitled "Patriotism." This was followed by a general discussion. A friendly, chatty letter from Mrs. Ensley of Indianapolis was read and was greatly enjoyed by the members. She said that she wrote the letter on her birthday, and certainly all wished her many happy returns of the day. This was followed by a fine descriptive letter from Miss McTighe, telling us of her home surroundings and the country about Las Vegas, New Mexico. This was exceeding interesting. Mrs. Schaab gave a paper on "Syntax, False and True," with illustrations and tests in which she called on different members to correct and define. This practical turn made the exercise interesting and valuable. A discussion of next year's work then followed, but resulted in continuing the committee in charge, and extending the time. At this juncture the hostess asked permission to absent herself for a time, requesting the members to remain for a while after the close of the session. Very soon she reappeared with an assistant bearing plates with ice cream and delicious home-made cake. This was a pleasant surprise to the members as only one other member was in the secret. The hostess informed the club that they might consider the treat as a sort of "house warming."

The club was very happy to meet Mrs. Holmes once more after an absence of eight months, but who has kept her interest in the club and sent always on time her work which has been appreciated. There was also present as a welcome guest, Mrs. Anna Eckhart Shugers, of Coldwater, Mich.

An invitation was received from Dr. Vesta Swarts to become her guests at the Hotel Swineford on the evening of May 8, to meet the members of the Culture and Reading clubs. This was gladly accepted as the club is well acquainted with the ability of Mrs. Swarts as a hostess.

After many pleasant greetings and good wishes for the hostess, the club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Willis next Saturday.

OBITUARY.

John Musser was born October 9, 1819, and died April 22, 1900, aged 80 years, 6 months and 13 days. The subject of this sketch was born in Paris township, Starke county, Ohio. He was united in marriage to Sarah Ann Hamman, August 9, 1849, and to this union were born five children, three sons and two daughters, all of whom survive them. In May, 1851, they then having one child only a few months old, moved with several other families to DeKalb county, Ind., coming all the way through dense wilderness in covered wagons. They were thirteen days on the way. It was a long, tedious journey; being in the spring the weather was damp and rainy. They settled on a farm all in the woods—not a place cleared large enough to build a house on. In 1861 he sold his farm to John Jackman and in 1862 he moved on the farm he still owns. In 1893 he built a house in south Hamilton known as Farnum's addition where he resided until his death. March 10, 1894, his good wife was called away by the angel of death. They united soon after their marriage with the Lutheran church; to this faith they clung through life. July 14, 1898, he was again married to Alice Coffman, and to this union was born one child. For many days "Uncle Johnny" as he was always called, knew that his end was near. He remained rational until the last, making all arrangements for his own burial; he chose his pall bearers who were Alex. Earlstein, Robert Renner, Joe Lockamire Frederick Oberlin, George Cosper and Asa Chapel. They were all soldiers, for which always had great respect. He said he was ready to die, speaking comforting words to the last. His last words to all who came to see him were, "Good-bye; grieve not." He leaves to mourn his loss besides his wife and children, 23 grandchildren, 5 great-grandchildren and many other friends. He was laid to rest in the Hamilton cemetery. This ends the life of one more of DeKalb county's pioneers, and he will be greatly missed.

Sarah Romine McKinley was born in Putman county, Ohio, September 11, 1830, and departed this life April 21, 1900, aged 69 years, 7 months and 10 days. She was married to William McKinley January 9, 1851. To this union was born twelve children, five daughters and seven sons, of whom nine children are left to mourn their loss, the husband and three children (two girls and one boy,) having preceded her to the spirit land. Besides the immediate family she leaves one sister, three brothers, thirty-three grandchildrem and four great-grandchildren to mourn her departure. Services were conducted at Cedar chapel by Rev. Henry Steckly, from Job 14:14 Her remains were laid to rest by the side of her husband in Cedar cemetery.

As Pleasant as Maple Syrup.

Most remedies have something unpleasant to taste and in consequence many people, especially children, dread the dose and put off entirely or delay taking the medicine that can do them good. Not so with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin-everybody likes its taste and when taken it will cure constipation and all kinds of "stomach troubles" In 10c, 50c and $1.00 sizes at H. B. McCord's.

HAS A WORD TO SAY.

Commissioner Shoemaker Talks to the People.

I have been asked if I were going to be a candidate for the office of county commissioner. I will answer that I have never publicly thanked my friends for their support in my election and now I will say I feel thankful to all who rendered aid in any way to my election I do this not for the pecuniary benefits, but I as a taxpayer have had for several years past a desire to see to some degree the manner in which our hard-earned taxes were disposed of and I, being a resident of the county for almost sixty years, have and do feel as though I ought to be entitled to this indulgence, especially if I would do as well with the taxes now as former county commissioners did with my tax contributions and next December will be three years that I have been on the board. It is only justice to the taxpayers that I should in some way render an account of my stewardship. This I will only be too glad at any time to do for in all my acts on the board I have always had the best interests of the people of DeKalb in view.

For this reason I hold that the welfare of the county is and should be paramount to all party or individual interests and I will now say I am glad that so far I have not knowingly sacrificed the taxpayers best interests for either personal or party's interests. Before I would do that I would resign. I wish to say that I am inclined to believe there is quite a number of people in DeKalb who would like to have another man occupy my place on the board of commissioners. Some of these people, I have reasons to think, want it for selfish purposes.

Now, I want to say to the people who desire that DeKalb county's welfare shall be respected before individual or party interests; if you have a man who will serve your interests better than myself, all things considered, I say I will help you elect such a man, notwithstanding I have experience now I did not have when I began, which I prize of some value. Having an acquaintance with the people is no detriment to a commissioner for he will at times be over reached to some extent. I condemn the opinion that county money should be dealt out with a liberal hand and a smile of gratitude thrown in.

As regards public improvements I am in favor of all needed and necessary. I have no pets to favor above their worth, nor enemies to revenge. Friends and enemies should be dealt with as DeKalb county's interests demand, regardless of smiles or frowns. I will say further to taxpayers, my experience teaches me it requires no shrewdness to get friends if you furnish the money. It has been my intention in our improving the jail, court house and heating facilities to give the tax-burdened people a spell to breathe ere it should become necessary to assume to build a new court house. These improvements are now about completed and by giving them the necessary care they should answer the purpose. Further, I am not a saint, therefore do not expect me to perform anything miraculous.

Neither does my living depend upon the office of county commissioner, but the people who care more for DeKalb county's welfare than I do are not numbered by the thousands. The matter is in the hands of the public. Let them act with an eye looking to their welfare and that is all I or any other citizen have any right to expect. Yours for the upbuilding of DeKalb county, regardless of the ventures that hover about us in many ways that look mysterious. E. R. SHOEMAKER.

OBITUARY.

Jacob Miller, was born in Williams County, Ohio, the 27th day of December, 1843, and died at his home near Helmer, Ind, the 25th day of April, 1900, aged 56 years, 3 months and 23 days.

He came to DeKalb county in 1861. In 1863 he went to California on the overland route. After an absence of five years he returned to DeKalb county. In 1869 he was united in marriage with Sarah E. Slayman, who survives him. To this union were born three children, one son, Henry, Nina, the wife of Edward E Pray, and Cora E. who passed from earth in early childhood. He never united with any christian organization, but manifested much interest in religious work and gave liberablly to the church. As a citizen he had few superiors, his liberality to the poor was one of his chief characteristics. In his home his kindness was never failing and leaves many pleasant memories dear to the hearts of the family.

Funeral services were held at the Union Chapel, April 26, in the presence of a large audience, conducted by Rev. J. A. Seitz Interment was made in the cemetery near the Chapel. Peace to his ashes.

—J. W. Jackman whose name is announced for representative, is a well-known and prosperous farmer and stockraiser of Grant township, a man of intelligence and industry. He was a teacher from 1873 to 1883, and made his work a success. He is a deserving man. As far as we know there is no other name offered for this place, and it now looks as if he would be the unanimous nominee.

Krause's Little Liver Pills.

are a purely vegetable, gelatine coated pill that act directly on the liver and bile. They are free from all crude and irritating matter, their action is gentle and natural and they do not cause constipation after using. Sold by H. B. McCord.

BUTLER.

Very active efforts are being put forth by both parties to elect their town officers.

Mrs. Rebecca Mitchell is quite poorly, with but slender hopes of a restoration to health.

Cyrus Platt, a well known citizen of Franklin township, was buried last week. He had been a lingering sufferer from consumption for many years.

John J. Oberlin and sons have retired from the employ of Herman Hirsch and will open a grocery store in the Steffel building on the west side of Broadway. Success to their efforts.

J. M. Lingenfelter, for many years our leading grocer but for the past seven or eight years a farmer, has placed a hired man on his farm, moved into his town residence, and engaged in the employ of Herman Hirsch's grocery.

Mrs. Blanche Campbell will graduate from the Detroit school of elocution this week.

J. A Campbell contemplates a visit to Chicago this week.

The Butler young ladies are having a nice time gathering wild flowers in the near-by woods. They find some very fine specimens of the lily family.

Considerable wood is coming into our market.

The writer visited Stroh last week and found it booming rapidly. The factory is nearing completion and many people are building dwellings and business houses. If the cement trust gets its long dirty fingers on it the people may wake up some morning and find themselves stranded high and dry, many miles from friends and help. We trust it will not be so.

—Lizzie Champion has been working for Mrs. Ed Showalter for the past week or two.

Arthur Aldrich seems to be about holding his own.

Born, Sunday April 29th, to Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Baxter, a boy.

Died at his residence on the Zurbrug farm adjoining the southwest limits of Butler, on Thursday morning after a lingering illness of many months, in the 68th year of his age, Lewis Moore. Mr. Moore was born in Cataraugus county, N. Y., February 8, 1833. He emigrated with his parents to Indiana in 1843. His father settled on the bluffs bordering on the north branch of Fish creek about two miles east of Hamilton, where amid the wild forest he grew to manhood. He learned the blacksmith trade at Grass Lake, Mich. He came to Butler in 1854 and worked with his brother J. A. Moore, their shop standing near where it now stands. In 1857 he was married to Elizabeth Noal who died in 1868, leaving two children William and Rhoda who survive him. In September 1869 he married his first wife's sister Delia, who with four sons also survive him. He united with the Christian church in '93. His funeral took place from that church on April 28, Rev. Thomas officiating.

SEDAN.

Henry Kruse and family of Auburn were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Wheaton, Sunday.

Mr. E. G. Wherley and Mr. O. L. Wheaton, the painters and paper hangers of this place, are in good demand at present. They are both skilled workmen, can be depended on for a fine job.

Henry Schuster and family visited John Kleopfpal's Suunday.

The Sunday school at this place reorganized last Sunday and elected the following officers; Superintendent, S. W. Guthrie; assistant superintendent, W. H. Crane; chorister, L. W. Treesh; organist, Mrs. Tillie DeLong, assistant organist, Mable Weidler; secretary, Roy Crane; treasurer, W. Casselman. Sunday school at 9:30. Everybody invited.

Mrs. Jacob Kalb of Ashley buried a son in the cemetery south of this place.

The Corunna telephone exchange has been extended to this place and the following Sedanians are now on the list: W. H. Crane, Henry Schuster, Marion DeLong and S. W. Guthrie. Call us up on the long distance.

John VanLear and family made a trip to Garrett Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Treesh visited father and mother L. W. Treesh Sunday, and attended Sunday school at this place.

NO USE TRYING

I can't take plain cod-liver oil. Doctor says, try it. He might as well tell me to melt lard or butter and try to take them. It is too rich and will upset the stomach. But you can take milk or cream, so you can take

Scott's Emulsion

It is like cream, but will feed and nourish when cream will not. Babies and children will thrive and grow fat on it when their ordinary food does not nourish them.

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day when taking an ounce of Scott's Emulsion. It gets the digestive machinery in working order so that the ordinary food is properly digested and assimilated.

There is no other remedy on the market like Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure. There can be no other, because this is the product of the doctor's thirty years experience as a specialist in the treatment of the stomach and liver troubles. It relieves at once. It is guaranteed to cure. It is specially recommended to those who have tried other remedies without avail. They are in the best position to judge its merits. It is in the stubborn cases that the quality of a remedy is tested, and Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure will stand the test. Every thing goes wrong when the stomach falters. The stomach is the power house of the of our body. It supplies all our energy It furnishes material for the repair of our bodies. If the energy or material be lacking the whole body suffers. Dr. Stone realized this early in his practice. He also found that most stomach troubles were merely functional derangements that only needed regulating to restore the patient to health. He devises a remedy to do this. You can know in twenty-four hours that it does; you can know in a short time that it permanently cures. It aids to the digestion of food, it subdues any inflamation that may be present, it increases the flow of digestive fluids, it purifies and sweetens the stomach—and you do not have to wait for results. Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure is a combination remedy; it consists of two tablets, one of which regulates the stomach, and the other acts on the liver and bowels. Nothing can cure that does not do this. You may have suffered for years from such troubles as these: Pain or distress after eating, sour stomach, bloating, irregularity of the bowels, palpitation of the heart, loss of energy or will power, dullness of mind, dizziness and poor circulation. you may have attributed these symptoms to various causes: every one of them can come from the stomach and liver. Remove the actual cause and the symptoms disappear like magic. That is the remarkable result of Dr. Stone's New Despepsia Cure. It does more than you are apt to expect. It gives you bodily comfort and renewed energy. It takes away that gloom and irritability. The mind becomes clearer, the eyes brighter and the muscles stronger and more elastic. The remedy has not done it, it has only set the stomach right, and nature does the rest.

NO CURE—NO PAY.

You cannot in justice to yourself fail to try Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure if you suffer from stomach or liver troubles. One package will show you whether it will benefit you, and if you are not benefited your druggist will refund your money cheerfully. Price 50c Sold by H. B. McCord.

The Lost is Found.

Yesterday morning we received a letter from Mosher, Ark., stating that Arthur Towne, who is working for E. E. Bookmiller there on a timber cutting contract, had been lost in a big tract of woods. The following was received this morning.

MOSHER, ARK., APRIL 23, 1900.

Special to the Auburn Daily Courier.

We are greatly pleased to report today that young Art Towne, who was reported lost yesterday, has returned again after an all night ramble in the woods. He relates his story somewhat as follows: On Sunday afternoon about 3 o'clock Mr. Towne and his companion started for a stroll in the woods to pass away time. After going a couple of miles by one path they were returning by another and when about a mile from home Mr. Towne sat down on a log to rest. After a few moments his companion suggested that they go on home but Art was not ready yet. He thinks he fell asleep and when awaking as it was dark he took the wrong direction. In a short time he realized that he was lost and no hope of getting home that night. Having no matches with him and fearing to lay on the ground he climbed up into a tree and placing some bark on a couple of limbs above he sat on a limb underneath and thus put in the night. In the night he was startled by a wildcat approaching him but succeeded in keeping off the intruder by shooting at it. A heavy storm kept raging nearly all night and he says it is the longest night he ever saw. He both prayed and cried, and thought of all the things he ever said or did, and promised himself that if ever he got home alive again he would be a better boy and lead a different life. He says, "I will never be caught in the woods again after dark, for the owls hooted my requiem and the frogs sang as if rejoicing in my misery." His body and hands were scratched from running through the briars and his face very pale with fright. It is very dangerous here to sit in a tree as many hunters are constantly looking for wild turkey sitting in a tree and shoot them at long range. Also some wild animals inhabit the woods and it is unsafe for a man to be alone, especially at night.

Mr. Towne returned home this morning a couple of hours after daylight soaking wet from the rain and almost exhausted and almost starved, as pounds of potatoes, and slices of bread and meat and cups of coffee did to prove his hunger. We advise that he return to his Indiana home where no such misfortunes befall him anymore.

PORTO RICAN QUESTION WILL NOT DOWN.

Rises Up to Haunt the Republicans and Keeps Them Busy "Explaining" the Attitude of the Administration—War Taxes Likely to Stand.

Washington correspondence:

The Porto Rican question will not down. The Republicans are so abnormally sensitive over it that they cannot refrain from "explaining" every time a Democrat mentions the administration. Gen. Grosvenor constitutes himself the special champion of the concrete phrase of imperialism embodied in the Porto Rican tariff and government law. One of the Democrats the other day jocularly remarked that President McKinley had not changed his mind about the "plain duty" of free trade, but had permitted it to be changed for him.

That happens to be the exact truth, but the Republicans seem to think that they can improve matters by making excuses and evasions that would not deceive a 10-year-old school boy. In this instance Representative Grosvenor repeated with parrot-like insistence the argument that Senator Foraker made just before the measure was voted on in the Senate, only Grosvenor did it much more clumsily than Foraker. "The President didn't mean free trade right away," pleaded the member from Ohio; "he meant it whenever Porto Rico had become prosperous enough to stand the change." Getting still deeper into the argument Mr. Grosvenor admitted that perhaps the President did not care for the measure, but disliked to antagonize his Congress.

The Democrats receive this sort of explanation in about the same spirit of derision that the whole country will express. The Republicans seem not to understand that they are making a bad matter worse when they insult the intelligence of the country with this sort of subterfuge and evasion. Although the discussion raged in the House for nearly two hours, the Republican members dodged the fact that by their governmental bill they had left Porto Rico as a colonial dependency. They are not anxious to discuss that phase of the matter.

It is announced by the administration that the new civil government of Porto Rico will be ushered in with true military pomp and splendor. There will be soldiers in shining accoutrements on land and grim battleships in the harbor at Ponce to warn the confiding Porto Ricans that beneath this velvet glove of civil authority and behind the reign of the carpet-bagger there is always the iron hand of militarism and imperialism ready to exact the pound of flesh if the demands of the civil invaders are resisted in the slightest degree. It will be a sad contrast to the Porto Ricans when they remember how they welcomed Gen. Miles two years ago, with garlands of flowers and processions of white-robed children. They thought they were welcoming the advent of freedom and independence. They will be made to realize that they exchanged the imperial rule of masters of noble birth for the more vulgar one built up by corporate power in this country.

The administration evidently intends to make great capital, in the coming campaign, of this change from military to civil rule in Porto Rico. It sends a flamboyant message to Congress begging for further time until it can decide on which carpet-baggers it will send to the island to replace the military rulers, who presumably are to be withdrawn.

Some cynical critics wonder if the military is really to be withdrawn or only subordinated to the civil branch of the government. It is hinted in administration circles that if the Porto Ricans prove rebellious under Mr. McKinley's new oligarchy, they will find the military in the saddle again very promptly.

War Taxes to Stand.

There is no indication that the Republican majority intends to repeal any of the war taxes. There is already a surplus of $150,000,000 in the treasury, and it is estimated that the excess collections next year will be about $80,000,000. The Republican leaders would not be averse to a slight reduction in some directions for campaign purposes, but to take the tax off one kind of goods is to mortally offend those that are still left to bear them. Anyway, the Republicans think that "it is easier to handle a surplus than a deficiency," and then they hate to spoil the chance of spending this big surplus themselves if they should be successful in the fall elections. The druggists are petitioning for a repeal of the tax on proprietary medicines, and there are many requests for the abolition of war taxes on articles of common use, but it is not at all likely that anything will be done. The express companies don't care whether the war tax is repealed or not because they have the recent Supreme Court decision saying that the shipper and not the company pays the tax.

Senator Hoar's speech against the retention of the Philippines has thrown the Republicans into consternation. He disposed very thoroughly of the various petty pretexts on which they have been building the imperialist argument. He quoted President McKinley's "forcible annexation is criminal aggression," and pointed out that the policy of criminal aggression is still being carried on. He showed that we undertook to buy a sovereignty which Spain did not possess, saying, "You cannot buy the liberties of a people from a dispossessed tyrant. liberties they have bravely won for themselves in arms."

Going farther Senator Hoar pointed out that "Twice our commanding generals, by their own confession, assured these people of their independence." He declared that war could have been prevented if there had been "A single assurance that we intended to respect the independence to which the Filipinos aspired." He said that the problem even now was not difficult of solution. The United States ought to protect the Filipinos from interference by foreign powers and help and advise them in building up an independent government, and then leave them in peace to manage their own affairs. He scored the Republican party for having departed from the principles of freedom and equity and expressed a hope that it would not be entirely blinded by the commercial spirit.

There is hot much chance that the arguments will convert the Republican leaders. In fact they have done nothing but abuse Senator Hoar and question his motives and ability since the speech was delivered. His suggestion of a remedy is very similar to what the Democratic leaders have proposed and will probably set forth in the campaign. There are thousands of Republicans who feel as Senator Hoar does about the Philippine question and will vote with the party which stands for principle as against commercialism and imperialism.

Steel Trust's Brutal Action.

The American Steel and Wire Company, a trust which has made its exactions felt most cruelly by farmers who have to make use of its product for fencing, issued a peremptory order closing down twelve of its mills situated in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania. At the headquarters of the amalgamated association of iron, steel and tin workers in Pittsburg, it was estimated that the loss to workingmen would aggregate about $110,000 a week. The Chicago Times-Herald gathered reports from the mill towns themselves, which indicate that about 6,350 men were thrown out of employment and a loss of about $88,000 in wages each week is incurred. Col. John W. Lambert, one of the directing officials of the trust, explained their shutdown with the characteristic insolence and brutality of the typical trust magnate, thus: "Our company is running its business without any need of explaining. We shut down and open our mills when we see fit."

No well-regulated mind nor any conscience not completely ossified by the persistent pursuit of money-making to the exclusion of all other ideals, will for a moment accept the theory that a business which employs nearly 7,000 men, a business upon the continuance of which the livelihood of probably 35,000 people is immediately dependent, is the sole concern of a few individuals who, by methods familiar to corporation managers, have seized upon its control. The people as a whole have some rights in these premises. The nation cannot honestly remain silent and supine while the domination of a corporation over the lives and happiness of a great body of industrious men and their dependents is thus wantonly and brutally abused. In this specific case different explanations are given for the shut-down. It is said that it was caused by overproduction, yet all through the West farmers and mechanics have been stopped from satisfying their wants for the products of this monopoly because its managers have repeatedly increased prices until they have reached almost the prohibitory point. If there is any oversupply of its product in the market, it is because the prices put upon it are such that the ordinary consumer is driven to all sorts of expedients to avoid purchasing. It is claimed by others that the true reason for the shut-down was that the ruling spirits in the trust, one of whom, by the way, John W. Gates, is a Republican aspirant for a United States Senatorship, have certain plans for manipulating the stock market which the shut-down will further. This is possibly true, but it only lays emphasis upon the folly and the criminality of permitting the control of a great and necessary industry in the United States to pass into the hands of a small body of men, men who would not have gained control of it if they had not possessed the instinct of gamblers and who naturally utilize their control to further their gambling transactions.

The reason the 7,000 employes of the American Steel and Wire Company are suddenly and arbitrarily thrown out of work is because one single governing board controls the employment of all of them and controls the industry in which all are engaged. If the twelve mills involved were operating as corporations should operate, independently, one or two might shut down, but the others would continue. Indeed, it is most unlikely that any would shut down, because the mill so doing would be in danger of losing its trade to those which remained in continuous operation. If, therefore, the existing anti-trust law had been enforced against this monopolistic corporation, not only would the farmers not be compelled to pay extortionate prices for their fencing, nor the mechanics mulcted of extortionate sums for wire nails and metal rods, but the working men now out of employment would still be in enjoyment of their wages, their families would be living in comfort and the tradesmen dependent upon their custom would not suffer.—Willis J. Abbot.

The Issue Is Plain.

"The issue is not obscure. That liberty is safe only where power is curbed; that, left to his own unrestrained will, man is prone to abuse his power; that to add political power to his natural power increases his temptation toward and augments his capacity for mischief; that in recognition of this fact the founders of the republic made the federal government one of strictly delegated powers; that federal power is bound down by the chains of the federal constitution; that each department of the government must find its warrant for every attempted exercise of power in the express grants of necessary implications of the constitution; that the oath of the federal officer binds him to observe with equal fidelity the powers granted and the limitation and restraints on such powers; that the Congress can send its power to our outlying territory only by virtue of the constitution, and that to send federal power there and yet withhold the limitations and restraints on such power is to destroy the constitutional rule of citizenship, substitute government of inequality for government of equality, cross the Rubicon of the republic and plant empire and place the inhabitants of such territory at the mercy of an irresponsible congressional despotism, are notions too firmly rooted in the common sense of the country to be dissolved by apostrophes to the flag or blown away by explosions of red-fire rhetoric."—Hon. B. F. Shively, South Bend, Ind.

Concealing the Robberies.

It is well known that every resolution emanating from a Democratic Congressman, looking to an investigation into the squandering of millions of the people's money by government officials from President McKinley down, is met with a storm of expletives from the Republican holders of the public purse, signifying "treason, anarchy, small-American, anti-progress," etc.

Congressman Jefferson Levy (Dem.), of New York, has just introduced a resolution in the House demanding information concerning Philippine matters, which are concealed from the people. There is insanity and suicide to an alarming extent among the troops. It is said the rebellion has been crushed but fighting is still going on a few miles from Manila. Expenses are increasing and more troops are called for, leaky transports imperil the soldiers, poisonous beef at high prices is served out to the men, and a reign of what the Kansas City Times calls "moral and official rottenness, wholesale mendacity, stupidity, blundering and extravagance is running riot." The Times does not believe that anything will come of an investigation which would involve "the scandalous corruption, jobbery and blundering of the whole Republican administration." The resolution will be smothered in committee, but the people owe it to themselves to smother beneath an overwhelming tidal wave of ballots an administration that robs the people with impunity and is preparing to make them helpless slaves by a pernicious financial system.

Republican Corruption Fund.

In order to perpetuate the "party of great moral ideas," Mark Hanna has opened the campaign with a circular letter to the trusts to donate funds for their future protection.

This is what is expected as a starter:

Steel and iron	$1,500,000
Tobacco	450,000
Standard Oil	800,000
Paper	200,000
Sugar	500,000
Shipbuilding trust	500,000
Wool	150,000
Cracker	150,000
Half a dozen other and smaller trusts	1,750,000
	$6,000,000

Says the Kansas City Times:

"These 6,000,000 dollars are intended merely as a first installment—a starter, as it were. Later on, as the battle grows fiercer and the opponents of trusts and imperialism give stronger indications of beng victorious, additional millions will be asked of these benefited cormorants for the purpose of defeating the will of the people by debauching the election machinery of the country in the numerous ways that were put into operation by the conscienceless boss of the Republican party in '96."

Degeneracy of the Republican Party.

Once the Republican party stood for great principles, once it had a message for humanity, once its leaders were men of conviction, once it believed in the declaration of independence; but the finger of the corporation has erased every great motto from its banners, and to-day the great party of Lincoln sits meekly in the market place and takes its instructions from the trust magnates of America.

Once it had conscience, now only hunger; once it loved liberty, now it worships the dollar; once it stood for humanity, now only for plunder. Time changes, men degenerate and parties rot. Cant is at a premium and hypocrisy passes for coin. The creed of King George has become the platform of McKinley and Mark Hanna's dollar sign breeches has become the flag of the Republican party.—Hon. J. P. Altgeld.

Imperial Prerogatives.

By signing his name to the Porto Rican bill, President McKinley confers upon himself imperial attributes in that island. By the terms of the act passed by his political associates in the Senate and House, the authority which he may exercise over the Porto Ricans is little less absolute than that exercised by the Negus of Abyssinia or the Czar of Russia. He is authorized to govern the Porto Ricans without their consent, and to tax them without their having any voice in the matter. The governor and the governing council, every one of whom he is empowered to appoint or remove at will, makes them merely the instruments of the executive's imperial authority.—Kansas City Times.

An Omnipotent Congress.

There was never a more complete triumph of machine politics, controlled by the worst elements of a political party, than the passage of the Porto Rican bill. The great trusts aided by the machine leaders have simply forced this monstrosity down the throats of the Republicans in Congress, and will do the same with the Republicans outside of Congress.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

Instruct All Delegates.

By instructing the delegates to the Kansas City convention to vote for Bryan and the Chicago platform, with needed additions to cover imperialism and militarism, no delegate will be able to break away under any pretense. That is what the Democrats want done and it is what they should instruct the delegates to do.—Joplin (Mo.) Globe.

Would Be Astounded.

If the men who signed our Declaration of Independence were to awake from the dead to-day and see a resolution of sympathy for the struggling Dutch republics opposed in Congress, would not every man of them be astounded?—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Remedy Is in the Ballot.

In monarchies revolution is the only weapon of the oppressed; under our form of government wrongs are righted by the ballot; but even here the longer a necessary reform is delayed the more disturbance its accomplishment causes.—W. J. Bryan.

Suffering Will Always Exist.

When every man made wrong is remedied there will still be suffering enough to enable every person to prove his love toward God by manifesting his compassion toward his fellows.—W. J. Bryan.

A Plant Sacred.

The plant known as vervain, which is not distinguished for its beauty, and which grows nowadays utterly disregarded, was so sacred to the Druids that they only gathered it for their divinations when the great dog star arose, in order that neither sun nor moon should see the deed.

PREACHES BY 'PHONE.

UP-TO-DATE DEVICE OF AN INDIANA CLERGYMAN.

Bed-Ridden Communicants Not Deprived of His Discourse—Electricity Helps the Pastor to Spread the Gospel.

Science long ago discovered a process by means of which a man might—if willing to pay for it—lounge about in slippers and smoking jacket and enjoy a high-class concert. He need not array himself in full evening dress, go through a stormy night to a distant hall and there listen to the rapture inspiring sounds; he could remain at home and indulge in a smoke-begrimed pipe the while his soul was soothed by things said to be equal to taming the savage breast. The phonograph did it for him.

Spiritual consolation, however, has until the last Sunday of them all never been administered at short range. True, the telephone may and doubtless has been used many times to call a clergyman to a bed of sickness or to some sorrowing family needing sustenance not of the flesh. But few, if any, ministers have preached to their flocks by speaking through an electrical transmitter. This was what was done recently in Elkhart, Ind. Dr. E. H. Gwynne, of the First Presbyterian Church, preached in his pulpit and a bed-ridden parishioner listened to the words of hope without attending upon the shrine.

Francis Hoover, a member of Dr. Gwynne's church, is a martyr to rheumatism, yet he desires with a mighty desire to attend the services of his church. But being unable to do this from physical infirmity local scientists applied the phonograph theory to an ordinary telephone. The transmitter was fitted out with a specially delicate diaphragm, which when the reverend orator stood a few feet away sent to the listening ears the full text of his discourse. Thus was one anxious, troubled, suffering soul made glad.

Opens Up a New Field.

The successful experiment opens up a new field for practical theology, which but for the temptation to sloth which might be covered thereunder appeals to the sympathetic mind. Dr. Gwynne's experiment was made solely to help a sick man who asked for his ministrations. Mr. Hoover wished to hear the sermon of his pastor, but time lacked to give it a second delivery. Also the other members of the church were entitled to hear him discourse upon the gospel. So the device was arranged that those who cared to attend church at the regular hour should hear, and also the sick man need not be denied. The device could be extended to embrace others who were unable to go forth to the sacred edifice.

LISTENING TO A SERMON BY TELEPHONE.

Few ministers lack those of their flocks upon whom the hand of providence has not been heavily laid. Most of the men of the cloth find it to be one of their saddest, yet sweetest duties to minister out of the pulpit to those who otherwise would lack the consolations of religion. If need be with the perfected telephone such might lie abed and yet receive the consolations of the word. It might be that dozens could thus be spiritually refreshed even with the flesh too weak to withstand the fatigues of the short journey churchward.

It would be comparatively easy to establish a cricuit by means of which a dozen homes, widely scattered on earth, might yet be drawn nigh to the throne by means of a party line. Those, indeed, unable to lift themselves from a bed of pain and suffering, could receive the message from the lips of their pastor without exertion on their own part. One machine fronting the pulpit might thus be the means of giving satisfaction to many a man who was seeking light, but lacked the strength to go where it was to be had.

With the phonograph no church building need be constructed and maintained. A home for the pastor, with an organ in one room, the room big enough to contain the quartette, choir, minister and his family, with phonographic connections with all the members of the church—which might be assessed on the new pew rent basis—would be enough. The members could listen to the singing, hear the sermon and mail their contributions. Thus the expenses would be limited to the minister's salary, the parish-house and such contributions as the members desired to make to church organizations in general.

While it is too early to prognosticate the manner of receiving church consolations of the future, it might not be amiss to suggest that some such plan will be ultimately adopted. It could be done without any great loss of piety—indeed, maybe, with an access, for the show part of religion would disappear when closed in behind the curtains of the prviate dwelling. This might be a good thing or not, according to the point of view. But the beginning made for a sick man might well expand into a system for the well which would do away with the scrubbing of the boys Sunday morning that they might be presentable in church.

Divorce Is Not Too Easy.

"Every once in a while we have perfect hemorrhages of righteous indignation upon the subject of divorce," writes Edward Bok of "The Ease With Which We Marry" in the Ladies' Home Journal. "We say divorce must stop, or that there must be no divorce. But wouldn't it be a bit better if we let this subject alone for a while and concerned ourselves somewhat with the evil which leads to divorce? The fact of the matter is that there is a notion, which is altogether wrong, that divorce is easy in this country. Divorce is not easy. I am far from saying that our divorce laws are what they should be. But it is a senseless thing to make those laws more stringent while we allow our marriage laws to be as loose as they are. Let those who cannot see any farther than the revision of present divorce laws ask themselves this question: Is it fair to allow foolish, inexperienced girls to be led into what they believe to be a fairy-palace, and then, when they find it to be a prison—yes and worse, a positive suburb to the infernal regions—to refuse to let them out, if they can get out? Is that merciful? Is that just? Would we not come closer to the common-sense of this whole question if, before we go any further in this campaign against divorce, we turn back and tighten the door which leads to it? Divorce is not so easy but that we can afford to leave it precisely where it is for the time being. It isn't a particle easier than it should be, so long as we allow marriage to be as loose as it is."

Mammoth Docks.

The marine docks at Portsmouth, England, are the vastest in the world, covering more than 300 acres, and employing some 10,000 men. Two of the largest docks are 600 feet long and 85 feet broad. All are what is known as stone graving docks. They are dug out of a sufficient depth, length and width to enable vessels of a certain size to be admitted. They are constructed of granite and fitted with heavy gates; the vessel is floated into the dock and properly shored up on the keel blocks—the gates are closed—the water then pumped out. Such docks, says a correspondent of the Providence Journal, are all below the level of the dockyard. The walls are built with stairs like the seats in an amphitheater, so that workmen may go up and down; and great cranes lifting forty tons are used in handling materials. When a vessel is completed, all that is necessary to launch her is to open the gates, fill the dock, and she floats out without risk or trouble. The advantage of a number of docks at a station is the readiness with which a small vessel may be put into a small dock and a large vessel into a large one at once, this being done with so much economy of time and labor.

How He Won the Spurs.

Sir Dighton Probyn is well known as comptroller and treasurer to the Prince of Wales. Sir Dighton is now in his sixty-seventh year, but is still erect and soldierly in his bearing. He was a major general when he entered the prince's service in 1872, and had put behind him a great deal of very excellent military service. During the Indian mutiny alone he was seven times mentioned in dispatches, and won the Victoria cross, besides being thanked by the governor general. It was at Agra that he won his V. C. He was separated from his men and beset by six of the enemy, three of whom he cut down with his own sword. Then he saw a prominent standard, and sallied out single handed, slew the bearer, and brought back the flag under a perfect hail of grapeshot and bulets.

Tom (to his sister)—Kitty, if you give me a bit of your cake I'll spoil the piano so that you won't have to take a lesson for a month.

Modern Matrimony.

He—Will you be mine?

She—Hardly that, Henry. Why can't we arrange it so that each of us will be ours?

No Show at All.

Railroad Agent—Well, I beat you on that party of Kentuckians to go to Cleveland.

Steamer Agent—Of course you did. You didn't think I'd try to get them to go by water, did you?

She Had Statistics.

"Julia, dear," said young Mr. Gilley, timidly, to his charmer, "do you think that a married couple could live on a salary of $750 a year?"

"O, Dick," replied Julia, earnestly, "I saw an account of how a man supported himself, his wife and two children on $350 a year. I'll run and get the paper."

Invitations were issued the following week.

Caught in the Act.

Mrs. Newcraze—There, William McHenry, I've caught ye in the act of going through my bloomer pockets for money, and only last week I gave ye 10 cents. What on earth have ye done with it?

How Johnny Hurt Him.

Mother—What are you crying for, child?

"Johnny hurt me."

"How, pray?"

"I was going to hit him with my fist, when he ducked his head—and I struck the wall."

Spoiled the Surprise.

Amiable Hostess—Well, now you are here, I hope you will stay to lunch with me.

Gushing Visitor—Oh, thank you so much, dear Mrs. Browne, if we may. (To daughter.) There, Vera, won't that be delightful? Such a pleasant surprise for you!

Severely Truthful Child—Not a surprise, mother. You know you said Mrs. Browne must ask us to lunch if we only stopped long enough.—Boston Globe.

Preferred to Suffer.

"You look awful sick, old man. I'll telephone out to your house that you are coming home early."

"Oh, no! Don't let my wife know."

"But why not?"

"She has been trying to get me home early for a month, to move some furniture."

Different Shades.

Mr. Stubb—Legends say that the shade of Nero still hangs about Rome.

Mrs. Stubb—But I didn't know lamp shades were in use in the time of Nero, John.

A Saving Scheme.

Pete—Why do dey have dem axes in de railroad cars?

Lem—Well, when dey have a collision dey use dem axes ter kill de passengers, so as ter keep de damages below $5,000.

A Noisy Explosive.

Mrs. Bing—Didn't you discharge your hired girl last week?

Mrs. Wing—Yes. Why?

Mrs. Bing—Oh, she came to me, and I've heard all kinds of reports ever since.

Dangers of Luxury.

"Wouldn't you like to eat your breakfast in bed?"

"Goodness, no; eating breakfast in bed would demoralize me so I couldn't get up and earn money to pay for it."

In After Years.

Husband—When we were married you confessed entire faith in my veracity, but now you don't seem to believe a word I say.

Wife—Yes, but this is a progressive age and even a confession of faith needs to be revised occasionally.

Expansion for Weak Lungs.

Some twenty years ago I saw at the London Aquarium a strong man exhibiting feats of strength, breaking chains by expanding his chest and his biceps, etc., and, going out, bought a small pamphlet issued by him in which he stated that in early youth he was delicate and had been almost condemned by the doctors; idling in bed he had tied a string around his chest and tried to break it by expanding it, keeping on till he succeeded. He then found he could break a stronger string, and kept at it till he found himself in every way strengthened, freed from his trouble and ultimately able to exhibit himself as a specimen of extraordinary development and strength. I have personally tried the strong man's ideas and recommended them to others, with decided benefit, and however far-fetched and unpromising such simple rules seem at first, they are always easy to try.—New York Sun.

There is quite a difference between going in and going out of office. A man is sworn in, but he usually does the swearing himself when he goes out.

That Tired Feeling

Just as surely indicates that the blood is lacking in vitality and the elements of health as does the most obstinate humor that the vital fluid is full of impurities. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures that tired feeling by enriching and vitalizing the blood, creating a good appetite and invigorating every organ of the body.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"I had that tired feeling all the time. Was as tired in the morning when I rose as I was when I went to bed. I took four bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and it made me feel like a new man. I could work hard and not feel tired." A. P. Charter, Creston, Iowa.

Had Heard It Before.

Children have long memories and are not easily deceived a second time. Thus the Post-Dispatch reports the discomfiture of a St. Louis mother who took her 5-year-old son to the photographer's, being particularly anxious to get some good pictures.

The child's idea of the affair, however, seemed not to harmonize with that of his mother; for when the man with the camera began to adjust the lens and direct it toward little Edward, that young person set up a howl.

In vain did his mother do her best to quiet him. Edward did not want his picture taken.

"Why, my child," she said, soothingly, "the gentleman won't hurt you! Just smile and keep still a moment, and it will be all over before you know it."

"Yes, I know, mamma," whimpered Edward, with the tears running down his cheeks, "but that's what you told me at the dentist's."

FOR WOMAN'S HEALTH

Earnest Letters from Women Relieved of Pain by Mrs. Pinkham.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Before I commenced to take your medicine I was in a terrible state, wishing myself dead a good many times. Every part of my body seemed to pain in some way. At time of menstruation my suffering was something terrible. I thought there was no cure for me, but after taking several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound all my bad feelings were gone. I am now well and enjoying good health. I shall always praise your medicine."—MRS. AMOS FESCHLER, Box 226, Romeo, Mich.

Female Troubles Overcome

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I had female trouble, painful menses, and kidney complaint, also stomach trouble. About a year ago I happened to pick up a paper that contained an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and when I read how it had helped others, I thought it might help me, and decided to give it a trial. I did so, and as a result am now feeling perfectly well. I wish to thank you for the benefit your medicine has been to me."—MRS. CLARA STIEBER, Diller, Neb.

No More Pain

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Your Vegetable Compound has been of much benefit to me. When my menses first appeared they were very irregular. They occurred too often and did not leave for a week or more. I always suffered at these times with terrible pains in my back and abdomen. Would be in bed for several days and would not be exactly rational at times. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and menses became regular and pains left me entirely."—MRS. E. F. CUSTER, Brule, Wis.

In accordance with the recommendation of the President in his message the Senate on Thursday passed a joint resolution providing for the administration of civil affairs in Porto Rico, pending the appointment of officers under the Porto Rican Government law recently enacted. The Alaskan civil code bill was again under consideration, the debate continuing on the Hansborough alien miners' amendment. Mr. Carter presented formally his substitute for the Hansbrough amendment and delivered a speech in support of it. Mr. Spooner antagonized both the original and substitute amendments, holding that the courts ought to settle the conflicting claims without interference by Congress. The House spent the day considering the naval bill in committee of the whole. The most important action was the striking out of an appropriation of $100,000 for the use of the navy in making surveys and charts of the waters of our new island possessions. The regular appropriation of $10,000 was put in the bill, the work to be done by the coast and geodetic survey.

On Friday the Senate had under consideration the conference report on the Hawaiian civil government measure. Final action upon it was postponed until Saturday. The Alaskan civil code bill was considered for a brief time. Mr. Foraker pronounced a eulogy on Lorenzo Danford, a former Representative from Ohio, and the Senate adopted resolutions expressive of its sorrow. In the House after protracted discussion of the naval appropriation bill the provision enabling the Secretary of the Treasury to contract for Krupp armor for the battleships Maine, Ohio and Missouri, at $545 a ton, was ruled out of the bill. Also the provision to repeal the $300 limitation placed upon the price of armor by the current law. Two amendments to modify the provisions for the increase of the navy, which authorizes two battleships and six cruisers, were defeated. One proposed to add provision for six gunboats and the other to strike out the provision for the battleships.

The Senate on Saturday agreed to the resolution of Mr. Bacon asking the Secretary of War for information relating to the extra allowance for army officers stationed in Cuba and Porto Rico. The Quay resolution was taken up and Mr. Perkins (Cal.) spoke in favor of seating Mr. Quay as a Senator from Pennsylvania on the appointment of the Governor. At the conclusion of Mr. Perkins' speech the Quay case was laid aside until Monday. The House passed a naval appropriation bill without a record vote. As adopted the measure provides for two battleships, three armored cruisers and three protected cruisers. The $545 figure on armor was stricken out. After 1 p. m. the House devoted itself to eulogies of the late Representative Settle of Kentucky.

On Monday the Senate began a two days' debate on the right of M. S. Quay to a seat as a Senator from Pennsylvania. Speeches in favor of seating Quay were made by Chandler, Kenney and Penrose. Those speaking in opposition were Platt of Connecticut and Quarles. The House entered into general debate upon the postoffice appropriation bill. The minority dissented from the provisions relating to extension of the pneumatic tube service, special fast mail facilities and the cost of railroad transportation.

The Senate on Tuesday by a vote of 33 to 32 refused to seat Mr. Quay. Passed the bill in the interests of northwestern lumbermen, authorizing the Secretary of War to make regulations governing the running of loose logs, steamboats and rafts on certain rivers. The House passed the Senate Foraker resolution to provide for the continuation in office of the present military administration in Porto Rico, with amendments providing that franchises shall be approved by the President and placing certain restrictions upon charters, corporations, etc. Amended postoffice appropriation bill so as to authorize the employment of temporary clerks in first-class offices at 25 cents an hour; also adopted an amendment providing for extra compensation for letter carriers when they work in excess of forty-eight hours a week, work on legal holidays to be counted as eight hours.

On Wednesday the Senate agreed to the conference report on the Hawaiian civil government bill, the provisions relating to the right of franchise and imprisonment for debt having been amended to conform to the ideas of the Senate. The agricultural appropriation bill was passed, carrying a little over $3,000,000. The Alaskan civil government bill was under consideration for an hour, but no progress was made. Mr. Platt (N. Y.) moved into Mr. Quay's old seat. The House considered the postoffice appropriation bill, and after long debate struck out the entire appropriation for pneumatic tube service.

INDIANA STATE NEWS.

OCCURRENCES DURING THE PAST WEEK.

An Interesting Summary of the More Important Doings of Our Neighbors—Weddings and Deaths—Crimes, Casualties and General News Notes of the State.

Minor State Items

Frank Zimmer will this summer erect a large canning factory at Birdseye.

Mrs. Charles Thompson, aged 33, wife of a saloon keeper of Evansville, died from the effect of a spider's bite.

Willard Scott, aged 16, while stealing a ride on a freight train from Kokomo to Walton, fell and had his left leg cut off.

Forty-five men employed on the inside finishing of the new city building in Elwood struck over a disagreement about wages.

There are ninety cases of measles at New Buffalo, and the schools and churches have been closed by the Town Board of Health.

Cyrus Waite, the night policeman who shot and killed Fred Hardwick at Union City, has been arrested on a charge of murder.

The horseshoers and blacksmiths of the State in convention in Peru, elected Dennis Egan, Indianapolis, President, and John Volpert, Peru, Secretary.

William S. Watrouse, aged 18, died in the hospital in Muncie while having his left hand and right foot, which had been crushed by a train, amputated.

The Midland Railroad, whose general offices are in Muncie, will start its freight trains May 1. Passenger trains will be started shortly after the freight traffic commences.

Mrs. David Miller of North Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, attempted to catch the family horse and was knocked down with such violence as to fracture her skull.

Odd Fellows of Danville are preparing to erect a $15,000 temple. The first floor will be occupied as a business room, the second with suites of offices and a lodge dining-room, and the third by the lodge hall.

George Phillips, aged 33 years, married, a wholesale delivery wagon driver of Muncie, after a day's debauch, shot and killed himself. Remorse prompted him to the deed. He had been strictly temperate for years.

The Rev. W. A. Little of Bloomington, recently killed a fine specimen of the purple heron, which measured six feet from tip to tip and five feet from beak to toe. It will be mounted by an Indianapolis taxidermist.

Jonathan R. Fancher of Davis, south of Laporte, has fallen heir jointly with a mother in California to the large estate, valued at several millions, of his brother, George H. Fancher, of Merced County, California.

An oil well with an estimated daily production of 100 barrels was struck on the Armstrong farm near Alexandria. This is the first activity in this district since the recent decision of the Supreme Court against the Standard Oil Company.

The Colonnade Hotel at Culver was destroyed by fire. All the guests escaped. Two saloons, a restaurant and a barbershop were also destroyed. The total loss is estimated at $16,500, partially insured. Incendiaries are believed to have started the fire.

At Frankfort Elsworth Livingston, aged 19, committed suicide by taking morphine. He had been paying attention to Miss Cora Williams for a year, and her refusal to marry him caused the act. He said: "I've had a fuss with my girl." He was found dying later.

Jay County farmers give a most discouraging report of the crop prospects for this year. They say there will be practically no wheat, many of the fields being as barren as a road, while the pastures were nearly all frozen out. Another source of trouble is the constant rain this spring, which prohibits active work in the way of putting in spring crops.

Ruth, the 2-year-old daughter of John and Mrs. Lewellen, was run down at Kokomo by an electric trolley car. Her skull was crushed and the fingers of one hand were severed. Physicians removed a piece of the skull-bone two inches square, yet the little one was up "bright and early" the next morning, ate a hearty breakfast and was playing with her kitten as usual.

Three masked men entered the residence of Nancy Patterson, a maiden lady in the northern part of Tipton County, and demanded money. She resisted and the intruders knocked her down, beat her terribly and poured the contents of a pepper box into her eyes. Screaming with pain she at last revealed the hiding place of her treasure, which amounted to $160. The robbers then took flight. Her condition is alarming.

The saloon of Martin Molloy was broken into at Hanna and robbed of $70 and a quantity of goods. Bloodhounds were put on the trail of the robber, and tracked him to a house four miles south of town, where they rushed through the open doorway straight to the room occupied by Barney Glancy. The dogs would have attacked Glancy had they not been restrained. He was arrested and taken to jail in Laporte.

Harry E. Miller, the burglar who uses attics from which to descend into stores and buildings, and who, of late, has been making his headquarters in Indianapolis, was arrested at Rushville in the attic of the Lake Erie and Western ticket office. He had a complete kit of burglar tools in his possession besides pawn tickets and several pieces of jewelry. Miller confessed to the robbery of the L. E. & W. ticket office in Rushville in February.

The merchants and property owners of Converse are deeply disturbed over the closing down of the William L. Sharp Company's window-glass works three months before the season usually ends, because of labor troubles. The semi-monthly pay-roll was $2,800.

A tin box containing $300 in gold was found the other day by a woodchopper on the farm of Mrs. John Gruer, near Union Mills. The belief is expressed that the money was buried by John Gruer, who died a number of years ago in reported indigent circumstances, and further search will be made for buried treasure.

Mrs. Mattie Manning aged 26, of Muncie, took morphine and died, and John Ehrmann, aged 78, slashed his throat and wrists and bled to death. Mrs. Manning had been drinking, and was seized with remorse over her disgrace. Ehrmann had been an invalid for years, and became despondent over ill health.

Edward High, a miner of Fontanet, son of Justice of the Peace High of that place, shot Joe Powalski, a polish miner, during a drunken row at a miners' batch at Fontanet, and Powalski died. High was arrested, and it devolved upon the prisoner's father, Squire High, to commit his son to jail. Powalski went there a month ago. His wife lives at Zanesville, Ohio.

DAN. GROSVENOR SAYS:

"Peruna Is an Excellent Spring Catarrh Remedy—I am as Well as Ever."

Hon. Dan. A. Grosvenor of the Famous Ohio Family.

Hon. Dan. A. Grosvenor, Deputy Auditor for the War Department, in a letter written from Washington, D. C., says:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from one bottle of Peruna. One week has brought wonderful changes and I am now as well as ever. Besides being one of the very best spring tonics it is an excellent catarrh remedy." Very respectfully, Dan. A. Grosvenor.

Hal P. Denton, Chief National Export Exposition, Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "I was completely run down from overwork and the responsibility naturally connected with the exploitation of a great international exposition. My physician recommended an extended vacation. When life seemed almost a burden I began taking Peruna, and with the use of the fifth bottle I found myself in a normal condition. I have since enjoyed the best of health."

Almost everybody needs a tonic in the spring. Something to brace the nerves, invigorate the brain, and cleanse the blood. That Peruna will do this is beyond all question. Everyone who has tried it has had the same experience as Mrs. D. W. Timberlake, of Lynchburg, Va., who, in a recent letter, made use of the following words: "I always take a dose of Peruna after business hours, as it is a great thing for the nerves. There is no better spring tonic, and I have used about all of them."

Pretty Bad.

There have been many American humorists, good and bad, but only of late has the very worst one been discovered.

"How's Johnny?" asked one of the neighbors.

"Well," replied Aunt Ann Peebles, "he's got the hives this time. When he was a baby he had the nettle-rash. When he got over that he was troubled with a breakin' out that looked like measles. Then he had a ringworm on one side of his face. He has a bile every spring, and once in a while he gets somethin' the matter with his hands that the doctor says is salt rheum."

"He must have some kind of humor in his blood," suggested the neighbor.

"Yes," said Aunt Ann, shaking her head gloomily. "He's the worst humorist for his age that I ever see."

A Poor Fireman.

Mrs. A. told her new man-servant—a colored youth from the country—to make a fire in the drawing-room.

Coming in soon after, she found him hopelessly contemplating the andirons, tongs and so forth, with a pile of logs by his side large enough to warm a regiment.

"Have you never made a fire before, William?" she asked, somewhat sharply.

"Well, ma'am, I ain't never made what yo' call a refined fire—no, ma'am!" was the puzzled reply.—Harper's Bazar.

Tea Drinking in Europe.

The "cup which cheers," and which women have come to associate with all that is homelike and comfortable, has found favor in France, and "le fit o'clock" has now become quite a favorite little domestic function in Paris. Even in distant Italy the charms of a fragrant cup of tea have made themselves felt, and Italian society now chats over the tea cups and delights over the dainty accessories of the cosy and refreshing little meal with much the same satisfaction as we do.—Chicago News.

What Do the Children Drink?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing, and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs about ¼ as much. All grocers sell it. 15c. and 25c.

There were only five large cities in America in 1800. Philadelphia, with 66,000, was the largest, the seat of government and the centre of wealth and culture. New York was next, with 60,000. Baltimore was third, with 26,500; Boston fourth, with 25,000, and Charleston, South Carolina, fifth, with 19,000 people.—May Ladies' Home Journal.

Opium's Ravages in China.

Opium is said to kill about 100,000 persons annually in China.

AMERICAN OARS.

Used Pretty Much Everywhere in All the Waters of the World.

Oars are made of ash and of spruce—by far the greater number of ash—in factories located mostly in Western States east of the Mississippi River in proximity to the forests whence the wood of which the oars are made is taken. Oars are made almost wholly by machinery, some hand-work being done in finishing them. Ash oars are made in various lengths, ranging from six feet to twenty-four feet; they are used for all working purposes and for many pleasure boats. Spruce oars of six to ten feet in length are likely to be used by people who row for pleasure, and spoon oars from six to fourteen feet in length for racing are made of spruce.

American oars are used pretty much all over the world; in many countries almost exclusively. The British Government has for years bought all of the oars used on its war vessels in this country, making a new contract yearly. The contract for the present year's supply is held by a New York city firm having factories in the West. American oars are used also on French, German, Italian and Dutch ships.

The oars exported to European countries are chiefly of lengths from ten feet upward. Oars of shorter lengths they supply themselves. To Australia the United States sends oars of all lengths, and the same is true of South Africa. Up and down the coast of South America none but American oars are used, and in any harbor in the world where a man is seen rowing a boat, in China, Japan, anywhere, it is more than likely that he is pulling with American oars.

The present annual output of American oars is estimated at 5,000,000 feet, enough to reach in an unbroken line of oars placed end to end from, say, New York to Chicago. It has been greater. The decrease is due to the use of the bicycle and to the largely increased use of launches and various other small craft propelled by steam and other motive powers. These agencies have been most effective in this country, but they are now in some degree operative in all parts of the world. A great many more are still used, however, and there are factories in which nothing else is made.—New York Sun.

British Aristocracy Blamed.

Many people attribute their recent reverses to degeneracy. The life of luxury does not produce vigor. Indigestible suppers, constant nerve strain and lack of exercise upset the stomach. The blood that makes heroes must come from healthy stomachs. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters purifies the blood and strengthens the stomach. It cures constipation, indigestion and dyspepsia.

The Reason Why.

When it was the fashion for young Englishmen to go up in balloons with Green, the well-known aeronaut, Albert Smith, a friend of Dickens and esteemed a wit, ascended one day before an admiring crowd of onlookers.

Waving his hand to a young lady, an acquaintance of his, as he was starting, he said:

"If I come down again I will bring you a Skye terrier."

He came down again, and without the terrier. "We didn't quite make the dog-star," he said in explanation.

PROMPT, SURE CURE

REST

"I wish I knew what was the matter with me, my cheeks are so pale, my lips so white, my muscles so weak, and my nerves seem to be all unstrung. I am just about as tired and depressed in the morning as I am at night. If I could only get some rest, but sleep seems to do me no good."

Shall we tell you what is the matter?

That's Anemia

Anemia—it's another name for starved blood, thin blood, poor blood. Of course this isn't the kind to have. What you want is rich blood, red blood. You want the old color back to your cheeks and lips. You want your nerves once more strong and steady. To make this change you must take a perfect Sarsaparilla, a Sarsaparilla made upon honor, a Sarsaparilla that you have confidence in.

That's AYER'S

"The only Sarsaparilla made under the personal supervision of three graduates: a graduate in pharmacy, a graduate in chemistry, and a graduate in medicine."

$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

"Too much cannot be said in favor of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Since taking it I feel like a different person. I now enjoy and profit by my sleeping. My appetite is good, my nerves are strong and steady, and I know my blood is pure."—FRANK WENNERSTRAND, Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 9, 1899.

25 cents a box. All druggists.

If your liver isn't acting just right, if you are constipated or bilious, take Ayer's Pills. When the bowels are all right the Sarsaparilla acts more promptly and more thoroughly.

To Spare Her Pain.

Some of the "things one would rather have left unsaid" are really inspired by kindness of heart. In a case of slander, says the Green Bag, a lady had taken the stand in behalf of the plaintiff, whose attorney was examining her.

"Now, madam," he began, "repeat the slanderous statements made by the defendant, on this occasion."

"Oh, they are unfit for any respectable person to hear!" was the emphatic answer.

"Then," said the attorney, coaxingly, "suppose you just whisper them to the judge."

Try Grain-O! Try Grain-O!

Ask your Grocer to-day to show you a package of GRAIN-O, the new food drink that takes the place of coffee. The children may drink it without injury as well as the adult. All who try it like it. GRAIN-O has that rich seal brown of Mocha and Java, but it is made of pure grains, and the most delicate stomach receives it without distress. ¼ the price of coffee. 15c and 25c per package. Sold by all grocers.

ALABASTINE Is a durable and natural cement base wall coating, in 5 lb. paper packages, made ready for use in white and fourteen beautiful tints by mixing with cold water. It is a cement that goes through a process of setting, hardens with age, and can be coated and recoated without washing off its old coats before renewing.

ALABASTINE Is entirely different from all the various kalsomines on the market, being durable and not stuck on the wall with glue. Alabastine customers should insist on having the goods in packages properly labeled. They should reject all imitations. There is nothing "just as good."

ALABASTINE

Prevents much sickness, particularly throat and lung difficulties, attributable to unsanitary coatings on walls. It has been recommended in a paper published by the Michigan State Board of Health on account of its sanitary features; which paper strongly condemned kalsomines. Alabastine can be used on either plastered walls, wood ceilings, brick or canvas, and any one can brush it on. It admits of radical changes from wall paper decorations, thus securing at reasonable expense the latest and best effects. Alabastine is manufactured by the Alabastine Company of Grand Rapids, Michigan.

Notice of Sale of Real Estate.

Notice is herecy given that I, George L. Price, as commissioner of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, in a cause wherein Charles Humbarger et al. are plaintiffs and David Humbarger et al. are defendants, will offer for sale at private sale on Friday, May 11, 1900,

at my residence in Newville township, DeKalb county, Indiana, the following described real estate, to-wit;

The south half (½) of fractional section numbered twenty-one (21) in township numbered thirty-three (33) north, of range fifteen (15) east, containing ninety-eight and twenty-eight hundredths (98 28-100) acres of land more or less, excepting the right-of-way of the Baltimore, Pittsburg & Chicago Railroad Company passing over said tract.

Said sale will be continued from day to day until a satisfactory offer is received, or until the further order of the court. Such sale to be upon the following terms: One-third of the purchase price cash in hand on day of sale; one-third thereof in twelve months and one-third in eighteen months from said date, the deferred payments to be evidenced by the purchaser's notes bearing six per cent interest and secured by mortgage on the premises sold, with the privilege to the purchaser of paying all in cash if he prefers so to do.

GEORGE L. PRICE, Commissioner.
John W. Baxter, Attorney. 18

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Hannah R. Moss is plaintiff and Silas Franks, Alice Franks and Frank P. Seiler, auditor of DeKalb county, are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of seven hundred and sixty-two dollars and ninety cents ($762.90) with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on Saturday, May 5, 1900,

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the door of the court house of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following described real estate, to-wit;

The southeast one-fourth [¼] of the southeast quarter of section thirty-six [36] township thirty-four [34], north of range thirteen east, in DeKalb county, state of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

JOHN H. HATHAWAY,
Sheriff of DeKalb County, Indiana.

—Hon. S. S. Shutt was a visitor to the COURIER today and always finds a warm greeting awaiting him. He is looking the picture of health and is as genial as ever.

—You can not always tell whether your good are all wool or mixed goods. It makes no difference if you use Putnam Fadeless Dyes. They color everything. Sold by F. E. Davenport.

—Stuart Wartenbee of Newville township was calling on friends in Auburn today. He is one of the early pioneers of this county. We are glad to learn that he is in excellent health.

—Phil Seibert, on Railroad street, has a brood of young chickens among which is one with three perfectly formed legs. The bird seems to get around about as well as any of its mates and is quite a curiosity.

—Waterloo Press:—Jacob Sawvel, who resides northeast of Waterloo, celebrated the 93rd anniversary of his birth Monday, April 23. His naighbors and children helped to make the day cheerful. His friends hope he may round out the 100 years.

—Will Eckhart has secured the use of the old bottling works near his factory by the Lake Shore freight house, and will add it to the Specialty Buggy factory. He has increased his business so that he finds more room an absolute necessity. Calls for special jobs in his lines are good now.

—We were pleased to see Frank Swartz again yesterday. He was in town a short time he and his wife having been called back by the death of her sister, Mrs. John Witt. They now live near Athens Calhoun Co. Mich. where he has a farm. We are pleased to enroll them on our weekly list and hope they may receive their paper regularly.

—The postoffice department has under consideration the plan of placing a daily weather bulletin card in the box of each farmer on the free rural delivery route. The bulletin gives the weather predictions for twenty-four hours in advance and oftimes will be of great benefit to the farmer in arranging his work and by heeding it he can save many dollars.

—Mrs. J. Walde and her two daughters who have been here visiting relatives, the Ashley family, started today on the home journey. They have been visiting another daughter of George Walde who is at school at St. Mary's Academy, near Notre Dame, South Bend, and now will stop awhile at Delphos, Ohio, before returning to their home at Fremont, that state.

—After making a long drive in the country yesterday, T. A. Carter stopped at the residence of I. M. Thomas to order a bill of lumber, leaving a boy who had caught on for a ride to hold the horses. The animals indulged in a runaway, crashing into the residence of Oak Ruh, smashing a large window and giving the occupants of the house a bad fright. Luckily no one was hurt, but the runaway was an expensive one for the owners of the team.

Friday's Daily.

—Isaac Sawvel, John Frantz and Henry Gardner have thanks for recent favors.

—Ladies who take pride in beautiful, clear white clothes should use Russ' Bleaching Blue. Refuse imitations.

—Clerk Long expects to move back to Butler in a week or two. His term of Clerk does not expire till November.

—Deputy Prosecutor Pomeroy and T. J. Dreesson have formed a partnership in the real estate business and will buy, sell and lease.

—Pheumonia follows lagrippe, but never follows the use of Foley's Honey and Tar, the great throat and lung remedy.—H. B. McCord.

—Deputy Surveyor Scholes was out in Richland township yesterday afternoon looking after some matters connected with the Grogg ditch.

—We had a pleasant call from L. C. Oberlin and Chas. Webster of Stafford today. They were here paying taxes, but did not forget the Old Reliable.

—Frank Simington and Edward Smith are now in the employ of Henry Lochner who has a number of building contracts on his books for this season.

—There will be no 15 percent show when Gov. Allen goes into Porto Rico. Plans for a celebration with much pomp are being prepared to welcome him.

—John W. Buss was able to come up town today. He is still quite weak from his two weeks pull of lung fever, but still strong enough to join the procession of 1901.

—J. W. Doty of Ashley is now on the COURIER list to which we welcome him. He is now owner of the McCoy farm, this side of Ashley, as well as the old Heckathorn saw mill and its grounds.

—Uncle George Wagoner is making some fine wheelbarrows. They are neat, light, strong and durable, and every man who uses such an article should remember him when they buy.

—Hon. J. A. M. Adair of Portland is now a candidate for the nomination of treasurer of state on the democratic ticket. Since Mr. Dougherty withdrew, the field seems open and there may be others.

—Fifty Poles, employed in factories at Muncie, were found housed in twelve rooms. Nearby residents complained of their filth, but the excuse was made that the crowding was due to high rent and scarcity of homes.

—The Wabash paymaster left about $15,000 in cash at Ashley, Tuesday, with the employes of the road for March salaries. It is said to have been the largest payment ever made there in one month.

—The remains of Wesley Casebeer, who died at Longcliff asylum, were brought here for burial, the funeral services being held this afternoon at the home of his brother, E. L. Case beer on West Seventh street.

—Those who have a grudge at Mark Hanna ought to see the cartoon in the Chicago Record of today, April 26. There is nothing course or abusive about it, but it illustrates salient points in his Tuesday speech in the Ohio state convention in a way that is witty to say the least.

—A strange coincidence was the death, almost at the same hour of William Coulbert of Wabash and that of Robert C. Mayne of Huntington, both being survivors of the "Yankee Blade," on the Pacific Ocean, in 1854. From the day of their rescue until their death they were devoted friends.

The Dewey cannon at Three Oaks, Mich., boomed out yesterday for the first time. E. K. Warren, the famous "Featherbone" manufacturer was in Washington, interviewing Dewey, and having got a promise that the Admiral would visit Three Oaks in June, he sent word home to fire the gun.

—Among other crooked acts Monroe Wright, the absconding trustee of Salem township, Steuben county, forged a number of receipts for money alleged to have been paid to school teachers. One of these teachers, Elsie Wisel, was given a judgment this week for $546.85, for back salary, and other suits will follow.

—Two Austrian miners at Greensburg, Ind., Tuesday, made a bet of 25c that some blasting powder stored in their shanty would not explode by putting a match to it. A quantity was spread on the floor and a match applied. One man is having a funeral today and several doctors are collecting pieces enough to have the other.

—Miss Florence Newman, who has been a great sufferer from muscular rheumatism, says Chamberlein's Pain Balm is the only remedy that affords her relief. Miss Newman is a much respected resident of the village of Gray N. Y., and make this statement for the benefit of others similarly afflicted. This liniment is for sale by H. B. McCord.

—Fred Huelsenbeck of Avilla was in town yesterday and arranged to have the lot in the rear of his building on West Seventh street thoroughly cleaned. While a non-resident Mr. Huelsenbeck is prompt in his compliance with the orders of the board of health, but will hereafter keep up the bars against those who have been using his property for a dumping ground for all kinds of rubbish.

—A man at Williams Center, O., was called to Defiance to serve as a juryman in the case of one of the men implicated in the murder of Policeman Rath at Hicksville. The gentleman had formed an opinion; he was excused and received his fees, amounting to $4, and himself and wife added $3 more to the amount and sent it to Mrs. Rath. This is an example of practical, everyday christianity, though of a kind rarely developed in this part of the world.

Saturday's Daily.

—Cory Shugers is having his lunch room painted, papered and fixed up in first-class style.

—To be thrice happy, use Russ' Bleaching Blue, don't be deceived by fraudulent imitations.

—Miss Julia Hodge returned yesterday from Michigan City and will remain here during the summer.

—I. M. Zent and wife returned home last evening from their western trip which was a most enjoyable one.

—Chris. Aschelman and daughter Pearl have returned from Helmer where they were called to attend the funeral of Jacob Miller.

—Mrs. R. H. Murch of Frankfin called on the COURIER folks today while here paying taxes. We are glad to see her greatly improved in health.

—Daniel Shaw, 86, of Laporte county has been justice of the peace since 1840 when he received his first commission from Governor David Wallace.

—At the grand chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star at Indianapolis this week Mrs. Carrie Fanning of Butler was elected grand treasurer.

—Sound advise to those who have kidney and bladder trouble, is to take a safe, sure medicine like Foley's Kidney Cure. It always benefits the Kidneys.—H. B. McCord.

—Mr and Mrs. Washington Betz of Ashley were here yesterday and paid a year ahead for their own paper, and that of their daughter, Mrs. Bertha Barker, of Albion, Mich.

—Mrs. Sarah McDowell has purchased the residence on Cedar street recently vacated by Alva Baker and will move into it next week. Mr. Baker and family have moved to East Auburn.

—Now is the time to begin spraying your fruit trees. Never spray them while in blosson, but just before they bloom and just after the blossoms have fallen. By this means you will save the bees and have a better fruit crop.

—It may not be too late to recall the fact that two years ago Thursday (April 26, 1898,) Company K left Auburn for Indianapolis to enter the service of Uncle Sam in the Spanish-American war. They left Indianapolis for the south about three weeks later.

—Dr. Rock of this city was yesterday granted a license to practice medicine in this state by the Indiana board of registration and examination. The doctor made his application for license upon entering into partneship with Dr. Nusbaum several weeks ago.

—The Canal Fulton, Ohio, Signal, of November 30, last year copies the entire article from the Daily COURIER, which gave the dedication of Meese Chapel in Jackson township last fall. That was Mr. Meese's birthplace and goes to show that the good people there have yet a kind remembrance of him.

—Ligonier Banner:—A pretty good one is told of P. A. Carr. The other day he had occasion to walk from Auburn to Waterloo and when about half way across he saw two fellows in front of him. They waited until Phil came up, when he recognized Alex. McEnterfer, who once resided here. After Phil had greeted his old friend he said, "I guess I might as well unload," and reaching into his pockets threw away half a dozen big stones that he had provided thinking he was about to be held up.

—"It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recomm end Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says Druggest A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my show case, said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore,' and she became so enthusiasthic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in 15 minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever. Sold by H. B. McCord.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

QUESTION ANSWERED.

Yes, August Flower has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers' and grandmothers' never thought of using anything else for Indigestion or Billiousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart Failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Sample bottles at O. P Barber's, Corunna.

TURNED OUT.

I read the announcement in a paper one day that a certain factory in Cincinnati had "turned out" so many machines a month last year. Why did they turn them out? Not because they were worthless, as we turn out rubbish and refuse, but because they were finished. They were the completed work for which that factory was put into operation. Well, there is a factory in our town that turns out. I saw before it recently a finished specimen of what it can do. It was not a machine, but a man. He was blear-eyed, tottering, dressed in rags. He had been a welcome visitor to the drunkard factory as long as he had money. But now the legalized establishment had done all it could for him, and its manager kicked him into the gutter. Yes, he was a reeling, staggering advertisement of what the saloon is accomplishing. Turned out because they had finished him? But is that saloon going out of business now? No, indeed. It is hunting for raw material to work up into topers, and to turn out in due time as a specimen of the best, or, rather, the worst that it can do for humanity. How much longer are we going to endure it?

EXPRESSIONS ON LAW ENFORCEMENT.

"The idea that a mayor or chief of police is at liberty to permit any law or ordinance to be violated is monstrous. We choose excutive officers to enforce the laws, and not repeal or suspend them at their pleasure. It is subversive of our system and destruction of our social order to allow our executive officers to choose what laws they will enforce. What sort of a condition of society would we have if no man obeyed the law and no officer enforced it unless he liked it? To find fault with an officer for enforcing the law, is to repudiate our system of government, and to vote against a candidate because he is pledged to enforce the laws, is to associate one's self with law breakers" —Ex-President Harrison.

—Since the defeat of the six applicants to sell intoxicants in Tipton, which was done through power of attorney, the indications are that the eight remaining saloon keepers will meet with similar fate as their licenses expire.

To Succeed Mr. Saxton.

As foreshadowed in the Daily yesterday, Mr. Treesh was appointed assessor to succeed Mr. Saxton. He had been Mr. Saxton's assistant, and had always given satisfaction. As Auditor Seiler is a democrat, it was to be expected he would appoint a democrat. This is the usual and proper course. Mr. Saxton, a republican, had since health failed, two deputies, Capt. Otto a republican and Mr. Treesh a democrat. Someone asked him why he appointed a democrat, and he replied, "I could not have been elected without democratic votes. It is right that I give them a share of the work, when I find a good man to do it." So, the appointment would seem to fill Mr. Saxton's wishes.

As Pleasant as Maple Syrup.

Most remedies have something unpleasant to taste and in consequence many people, especially children, dread the dose and put off entirely or delay taking the medicine that can do them good. Mr. Saxton Dies.

T. J. Saxton died Thursday about 7:30 a.m. without a moment's warning. He was alone at home, and feeling a strange illness increasing, he went to Mrs. Cuppy's on the next lot and told her something was wrong, he was feeling so strange. She asked him to describe it, and he said there was a strange feeling in his head and stomach. She helped him to a chair and sent for a doctor, but he rapidly grew worse. Fred Bates came along and was called in and helped him into a rocking chair, but he did not speak again, his heart seemed to flutter for a minute or two and he was dead. Mr. Bates helped to carry him to his own home which was next door, and friends were summoned.

His son, Erle, who was married only yesterday afternoon, had gone east for a wedding tour, that was to take in Toledo, Cleveland, Buffalo, and other points, at they were not to return till some time next week. Efforts were at once made to locate him and bring him home, and within an hour and a half he was located at Toledo, and took the first train home.

OBITUARY.

Daniel Welch was born in New York state May 8, 1850. He came to Indiana with his people and settled near Logansport, Ind. When the B. & O. road was being built through the county he was a contractor, during which time he met and won Miss Emma Culbertson as his help-mate for life. They were married October 21, 1877. For twelve years they lived on the Culbertson homestead in Concord township. Ten years ago they purchased the farm near Auburn where they lived till last November 12, when on account of ill-health they moved to Auburn. Brother Welch was a man, he loved his home, his neighbors, his God. He died exultantly confident of a glorious and future immortality. One son, Dale, and his faithful wife with a large circle of friends occupy the mourners seat, with hope of future reunion. His funeral took place from his residence on South VanBuren street, Rev. T. M. Guild officiating, assisted by Rev. J. D. Brosy.

Maccabees at Fort Wayne.

Those who attended the Maccabee meeting at Fort Wayne last night say it was one of the most successful affairs of the kind ever held in this part of the state. It was under the auspices of Wayne tent No. 54 and a large class of candidates was taken in during the afternoon and evening. Over six hundred Knights participated in the parade in the evening which was witnessed by large crowds of people. After the initiatory work was completed at midnight informal addresses were delivered by several supreme and great tent officers, and this was followed by a banquet at which over 500 members of the order sat down. It was a great meeting and was attended by a large number of Knights from outside lodges.

ECKHART NOMINATED.

Auburn Man to be Candidate for Governor on the Prohibition Ticket.

The prohibition state convention was the largest and most enthusiastic ever held in the state, and probably larger than any other state that held. Over 1,000 delegates and others acting with them, were in attendance, and there was enthusiasm all along. From the first hour of meeting it was plain that Mr. Eckhart was the choice of the convention for governor, but he refused to be a candidate. Yesterday, however, when it came to nominations, it was given him in spite of his objections and by acclamation. Then followed a time of cheering and he was called to say something. He arose and responded in accepting.

"I thank God that I have been a prohibitionist for sixteen years, and I shall remain one until the end. I have said all along that I would not take the nomination, and I only take it now for the good of the party. My friends, we are assembled for a holy purpose; we are a party inspired of God, and I am firmly convinced that we will win in the end. I shall make a good fight and do the best I can. Don't ask more than I can perform."

More cheers followed and then the work of the meeting proceeded. Only in a few cases, were the nominations contested enough to require a vote. The ticket as completed is:

For Governor—Charles Eckhart of Auburn.

Lieutenant Governor—Robert Clark of Oakland City.

Secretary of State—R. E. Pretlow of Thorntown.

Auditor of State—M. G. McKinzy of Clinton county.

Treasurer of State—Edwin Hiatt of Henry county.

Attorney General—M. H. Krauss of Peru.

Reporter of the Supreme Court—Isaac S. Wade of Lafayette.

State Statistician—Henry S. Bonsib of Vincennes.

Superintendent of Public Instruction—B. O. Ayers of Upland.

Judges of the Supreme Court—First district, C. B. Kessenger of Vincennes; Fourth district, James Graham of Fort Wayne.

National Delegates—Homer J. Hall of Franklin; F. T. McWhirter of Indianapolis; Aaron Worth of Portland; Chas. Eckhart of Auburn.

State Evangelist—Quincy Lee Morrow.

Several of the congressional districts held meetings and selected candidates for congress.

DeKalb fared well in the convention. M. T. Bishop of St. Joe is the member of the state committee for the Twelfth district; S. Arnold of Ashley was a member of the committee on credentials; Charles Eckhart was on the committee on resolutions; Emory Johnson of Hudson was on the committee on rules and organization, and Mr. Eckhart is one of the delegates-at-large to the national convention.

Money for the cause was freely subscribed, and Mr. Eckhart headed a list of eleven who gave $100 each.

CHAPTER XXX.

Back in 1885 North and South Dakota were in one large territory, and no one knew whether the two states likely to be formed out of it, would be East and West Dakota, or North and South as was finally done. Several ambitious little towns wanted to be the state capital. If it was to be east and west Dakota, Ordway, Huron and Columbia stood ready to be the capital. If was to be north and south, then Huron and Pierre had their lightning rods up for the south state, and Bismarck and Grand Forks in the north.

Of the towns named in the south part Huron and Pierre alone had much of a show. The states became "north and south" and Pierre got the prize in the south.

But in the year named Pierre was not so good a town as Huron. It was on the Missouri river, and was then the terminus of the western branch of the Chicago & Northwestern road, which had built large freight houses near the river and from there goods and freight of all kinds were taken across the river, made up into wagon trains and hauled at a great waste of time and labor to Deadwood and other mining camps in the Black Hills. And every morning a big stage with several spans of smart horses would start off with a load of passengers to the same destination. Though the distance was about 150 miles, it took the wagon trains, drawn by oxen, nearly two weeks to go out or back, and a month was required for the round trip including stops along the road to let the oxen graze, and a few days' stay at Deadwood.

We said Pierre was not as good a town as Huron then. The latter had become quite a central location, and the site it occupied was an ideal one. It stands on a level plain high above the Dakota or James river, "Jim river" the people call it. But Pierre was building mainly on the level, strip that lay between the terraced bluffs, and the lowest flats near the river. Two miles down and on the same level strip was a rival in what was known as "Wells' Addition." It was a mere cluster of houses, or a "settlement" that year but it had money to back it, and its owner, Wells was ambitious and a hustler. He had made up his mind to beat Pierre at any cost. Parties in Pierre had put up a big frame hotel on the first bench of the bluffs. It was three stories, with a brick basement and the most pretentious building in town, not even excepting the newly made court house. The basement was finished, all the frame was up and sides, and the roof put on. Men were at work finishing the inside and getting windows and doors. This was its condition one evening, a day or so after we reached the town. The next morning, we went to take another look at it. There was a big gang of men taking it apart and pulling it over, and by night it was mostly down. Wells had quietly bought it the evening before and now was moving it to "Wells Addition," which he succeeded in doing. He had made a point on Pierre by buying it and moving it to his town, the most imposing structure in Pierre. But it is all right now, for Pierre is the state capital and "Wells' Addition" is a part of the growing city.

Across on the west side of the Missouri, was another suburb, "Ft. Pierre." True, there was no fort there, and never had been, although in point of fact, a few companies of regulars had pitched a camp there for a few months during the Sioux troubles of 1876. The real Ft. Pierre stood a few miles down the river, almost in sight, but it never was much of a military post. There is no post there now.

But Ft. Pierre was a scattered village in 1885, built on "No man's land" for all along on that side of the river, was the great Sioux reservation, territory nearly half as large as Indiana. No one could buy a lot there, for the Indians could give no title, and government was bound not to sell it. So any one could become a squatter at his own risk. He could pick out ground enough for a lot, build on it, and conduct his business free from taxes or any other regulations except that he could not sell liquors or in any way break either the territorial laws of the United States, or treaties with the Sioux. And as long as the Indians did not object, he could stay.

So these men had made a success of several lines of business. One had a large store, another a fair hotel, another a bakery, and so on. The occupants were careful to have lots of the usual size and situated in convenient plats; there was no title and Uncle Sam or the Sioux council could send them off at any time. But business was active, depending altogether on two classes of patrons. There were no farmers, so the patronage all came from Indians and from men employed by the freighting lines, that were carrying goods and supplies into the Black Hills. The stores were filled with goods for these two classes. For the Indians, there were beads, furs, guns, saddles and such lines of dry goods as could be worked into garments for Indian men and women. These were not all cheap goods either, for there were richly embossed saddles, worth $100; gun cases richly worked, worth from $30 up; ladies cloth, mostly a lovely blue and quite fine, and so on through a list likely to tempt the dusky women of that rather intelligent nation. Then there were cheaper goods, for every day dresses, such as strong calicoes and ginghams.

Much of the bargains were made by the men. We saw one Indian trading out an order for $4.50, that he had received in pay for cutting and furnishing some wood for freighters. He had the merchant explain to him how much it was, and then he pointed to a bolt of goods that suited for a work dress for his wife. He had that cut off and done up, and then he settled up to start in again. Then he bought something else, and again settled up and again opened his account, and so on till the order was traded out. The merchant explained that an Indian could not understand by the usual process of trading till the several items added should cover the bill.

Much can be learned at these Indian trading stores, and we feel justified in adding another "Saturday" by way of closing up, what to us at least was very interesting.

ROYAL Baking Powder

The strongest, purest, most efficient and wholesome of leavening agents. Not lowest in price, yet the most economical; indispensable to all who appreciate the best and most healthful food.

Our country is enjoying prosperity almost unsurpassed in its history.

For every one there is money enough to buy that to eat which is pure, sound, good, wholesome.

Why should we use cheap, impure, unhealthful articles of food? There is no economy in them; they endanger the health, they may cost life. There are reported almost daily cases of sickness caused by eating cake, puddings or biscuit made with the cheap, alum baking powders.

In all articles for food buy and use only the best. The good health of the family is of first consideration.

Alum is used in many baking powders because it makes them cheap. It costs less than two cents a pound. Alum is a corrosive poison. Think of feeding it to children! Yet the manufacturers of well-known alum powders are actually denying that their goods contain it.

Our Memorial.

At a regular meeting of DeLong Post No. 67, G. A. R., Department of Indiana, April 30, 1900, the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, that in the death of Joseph Cullers, the post has lost a valuable member and the country a true patriot, one who always exemplified by his deportment in the post room and grand army circles the principles of fraternity, charity and loyalty, a true friend and comrade.

Resolved, that while we bow in humble submission to the divine will we tender to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy in this their sad affliction and may God's bright angels comfort them.

Resolved, that these resolutions be recorded in the post records; published in the city papers and copy forwarded to the afflicted family.

HISTORY OF A WEEK.

PEOPLE, PLACES AND THINGS OF THE WORLD.

News of Crimes and Criminals, Accidents, Fires, Etc., from North, South, East and West, Sandwicked with Minor Affairs.

Victory for Laymen.

By a unanimous vote the delegates to the Methodist General Conference in session at Chicago decided to give equal lay representation in all Methodist conferences. The announcement of the vote was greeted with cheers, as it was a victory which had been fought for for a hundred years. A fight was expected over the matter, but it did not materialize. The matter was introduced by the Rev. J. M. Buckley of the Central New York Conference. He moved the adoption of the rules of the last General Conference with the exception of 1 and 18. This was carried almost unanimously and Dr. Buckley asked the vote on the Rock River proposition.

The proposition made at the Rock River Conference was equal lay representation in all Methodist conferences, annual and general. The proposition was read and the unanimous approval followed.

A Fierce Battle.

A dispatch received at Manila from Iloilo reports that a desperate fight took place at Leambano in the center of the Island of Panay. It appears that a reconnoitering party of the Twenty-sixth Infantry was surrounded and that four of the Americans were killed and that sixteen others severely wounded were left on the field. The remainder of the soldiers had a narrow escape.

The dispatch adds that reinforcements were sent from Iloilo as soon as news of the affair was received, whereupon the Filipinos retreated to their mountain stronghold.

Aguinaldo Is Dead.

Manila special: Gen. Funston has discovered a rebel warehouse near Cabanatuan, province of New Egija, containing all the archives of the Malolos government, Aguinaldo's correspondence up to the time of his flight, and much valuable historical matter. The belief is growing that Aguinaldo was killed by the Igorotes. There is no proof that he has been alive since Maj. Peyton C. March of the Thirty-third Regiment, abandoned the chase after the Filipino leader in the Benquet mountains. An insurgent officer who recently surrendered to Gen. Young, says that the insurgent Gen. Tinio holds this belief.

To Work Czar's Gold Mines.

The London Daily Express professes to have received authentic information from St. Petersburg that the Czar has granted to a British syndicate a concession to work the gold deposits on His Majesty's private estate in the Nertchinsk region, in Siberia. Overtures of French and German applicants for this concession have been repeatedly refused, and the present concession, it is declared, is intended as a practical proof of his desire to stand well with Great Britain.

To Be Largest in the World.

The American Ax and Tool Company has purchased thirty-eight acres of river frontage at Glassport, near Pittsburgh, Pa., and will erect thereon a $500,000 plant, the largest of its kind ever built. It is intended to centralize the plants of the company at this point. The works will employ 1,000 men and will be in operation before the end of the year.

A Severe Storm.

During the electrical storm at Montpelier, Ind., several thousand dollars' worth of oil property was destroyed. The big power house belonging to Long & Brown, on the Showalter farm, north of the city, was struck by lightning, and, with several tanks of oil, was burned. The loss is $2,500. Other tanks of oil and derricks were demolished by lightning.

Small Town Burned.

The small town of Barrett, in Grant County, Minnesota, was burned away the other night. The fire is supposed to have been of incendiary origin. There was no fire protection and twenty-three buildings burned to the ground. The combined losses are nearly $60,000, with light insurance.

Big Four Elevator Burns.

The elevator of the Big Four Railroad at New Paris, Ind., was destroyed by fire. The contents, consisting of several thousand bushels of corn, oats and wheat, were consumed. The loss on building and grain is estimated from $8,000 to $10,000; insurance, $5,000.

A Town Destroyed.

A dispatch from Metropolis, Ill., says: Grantsburg, a small village nineteen miles north of here, was almost totally destroyed by fire. Only two business houses were left standing. Loss about $50,000.

Mafeking May Be Free.

London special: The Central News learns that Commandant Eloff has left Mafeking, practically abandoning the siege. A recent dispatch from Mafeking said that Gen. Snyman, the Boers' commander, had left the vicinity of Mafeking.

All Must Go.

President Kruger of the Transvaal, has issued a proclamation ordering all British subjects to leave the country within thirty-six hours. This is the result of the agitation over the Begbie & Nicoll factory explosion which is attributed to the Britishers.

Two Killed by Falling Beams.

An immense truss in the building of the Dimmick Pipe Company, in the course of erection in North Birmingham, Ala., fell, causing the collapse of the entire framework of the structure with a terrific crash. Two were killed, two fatally hurt, and nine badly injured.

More than 200 Lives Crushed Out.

More than 200 men were killed and more than a score of others will be crippled for life as the result of an explosion in tunnel No. 4 of the Pleasant Valley coal mines, located at Winter Quarters, 100 miles south of Salt Lake City, Utah.

LITTLE EXPANSION IN TRADE.

Gold Continues to Go Abroad—Review by Dun's Agency.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: "Gold begins to go abroad and prices of iron products break sharply in the same week. Four months of the new year have passed and business does not so expand as to feed the large increase or circulation which the new monetary bill has permitted, nor enough to sustain all the extraordinary advance in prices last year. The abundance of gold and of currency and the large disbursements of the treasury in exchange for bonds have rendered rates for money unusually low for the season here, while rare industrial and speculative activity in Europe, with the war in South Africa, have tended to make money dearer abroad. So new gold from Alaska answers the loss of supply from the Transvaal, and America builds up in credits abroad a breastwork against prostration in future here as in the past, caused by troubles in Europe. The reaction in prices here came where it was expected least—in the industry more fully organized than any other to check competition and in the branch which, through contracts covering rod-making and other machinery and through patents, seemed more fully controlled than any other. Reduction of $20 a ton in wire nails, barbed wire and galvanized fence, and $18 in smooth wire, showed that no control can afford to hold prices so high as to check consumption. The tendency toward lower prices is strengthened by the idea that overproduction may appear in other branches. In staple goods no change is seen, but in other lines and fancy goods irregularity is increasing. The demand for woolen goods is small and disappointing. The produce market is inactive, though wheat yielded a fraction and corn gained 1 cent for the week. Failures for the week have been 204 in the United States, against 184 last year, and 22 in Canada, against 23 last year."

ENGINEERS FACE A PROBLEM.

Difficulty in the Way of Erecting a Shaft on Lookout Mountain.

A serious problem confronts the engineers in charge of the erection of the great New York peace memorial on the summit of Lookout mountain, Tennessee. The question is how to get the material for the monument to the top of the mountain, 2,000 feet above the surrounding country. The railroad which has been running to the top of the mountain as a freight line has been discontinued and the rails will be sold for old iron. It is unsafe even in running, the trestles and cross-ties being worn out and rotten. The track in its present condition will only safely stand a load of 30,000 pounds, the engineers say, while one of the stones to be used in the monument will weigh nearly 60,000 pounds, and many of them 50,000 pounds. There is no roadway near the spot where the monument is being erected, it being high above all surrounding country.

KANSAS WILL SUE COLORADO.

Former State Declares It Suffers Because River's Water Is Diverted.

The State of Kansas will sue Colorado. Attorney General Godard has been in Washington to present to the Supreme Court of the United States his motion for leave to file a bill in equity on behalf of Kansas against the State of Colorado, to enjoin that State from further diverting the waters of the Arkansas river and its tributaries for irrigation and other purposes. This action is a matter of vital and colossal interest to the State of Kansas, and especially to the settlers in the Arkansas valley. This river flows through thirteen Kansas counties, forming a valley almost as rich as the valley of the Nile of 2,500,000 acres, and with the natural flow and underflow of the river in its unimpeded condition this is one of the richest valleys in the West. Colorado has for many years attempted to appropriate all the water of this river.

Police Officer Shot Dead.

Desk Officer Timothy S. O'Connell of the Woodlawn police station was shot and killed on the Eighteenth street viaduct at Chicago. O'Connell was dressed in citizens' clothes at the time. In the dead man's hand was clutched his police revolver with every chamber full. Near the body lay a battered black derby hat. This hat is the only clew to the mystery thus far found.

Organizing a Farmers' Trust.

The first lodge in Kansas of a new farmers' organization to be known as the Knights of the Soil was organized at Abilene. Similar lodges are to be started throughout the State, and it is intended that the whole shall finally form a farmers' trust that will endeavor to influence the price of grain by regulating the acreage and controlling the quantity placed on the market at any one time.

Jury Acquits Mrs. Jessie Adams.

At Cincinnati Mrs. Jessie Adams was acquitted of the charge of murder in the first degree. She recently killed her husband, who was the agent of the Union Pacific Railway there. The evidence showed that Mrs. Adams had suffered from cruel treatment and was acting in self-defense.

Carter to Be a Bookkeeper.

Oberlin M. Carter, formerly captain in the engineer corps of the United States army, has arrived at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., to begin his term of imprisonment for defrauding the Government. Carter's first assignment will be as bookkeeper.

Verdict Against Havemeyer.

Dominic Vigeroti, an Italian bootblack living in Long Island City, has secured a verdict for $200 against Henry O. Havemeyer, the millionaire. The verdict was rendered in an action for $5,000 damages for alleged persecution.

Life Imprisonment for Lamb.

A jury in Judge Baker's court in Chicago brought in a verdict of guilty in the case of Charles D. Lamb, who shot and killed his father-in-law last December, and fixed his punishment in the penitentiary for life.

Collapse of a Bridge.

An accident within the exposition grounds in Paris caused the death of nine persons and injured forty. A temporary bridge, although closed to traffic, collapsed, burying scores under the broken timbers and heaps of debris.

Labor Men in a Fierce Riot.

A battle was fought between union and non-union stonecutters in the yards of the Humphreyer Stone Company in Chicago. One union man was shot in the left thigh by C. MacCreary, bookkeeper for the company.

Rivals in Love Fight a Fatal Duel.

At Maybury, W. Va., John Hasbrook was killed while in an altercation with Walter Sweetman. Both men used revolvers, but Sweetman proved the better marksman. They had a falling out over a young woman.

Eight Lives Lost in Rushing Waters.

A cloudburst, accompanied by a high wind, descended upon Waco, Texas, at noon the other day, and the result is that eight people perished in the city limits and property valued at several thousand dollars was destroyed or injured.

Seely's Prison Term Is Up.

The prison term of Samuel C. Seely, convicted in 1895 of the theft of $345,000 from the National Shoe and Leather Bank of New York City, expired the other day. His confederate, Frederick Barker, committed suicide. Since his incarceration in the Kings County penitentiary Seely's wife obtained a divorce and was married to a rich and elderly resident of Brooklyn.

LABOR WAR BRINGS BLOODSHED.

Violence Follows Strike on St. Louis Electric Line.

One hundred employes of the St. Louis and Suburban Railway declared a strike on the ground that members of the union had been discharged simply because they belonged to a labor organization. Their places were filled immediately and the system ran as usual during the afternoon and evening. The next morning early four armed men boarded the east-bound owl car and at the point of revolvers forced the motorman and conductor to abandon the car half way downtown. They did not interfere with the passengers. The motorman was shot in the right hand and the conductor was shot on the heels. The armed men then disappeared. A new crew had to replace the disabled men.

BAD FIRE IN BEAVER DAM.

Malleable Iron Works, Freight Depot and Loaded Cars Burned.

Fire broke out in the engine room of the Beaver Dam, Wis., malleable iron works at 1 o'clock the other morning and razed the plant to the ground with a loss of over $100,000. The fire also communicated to the freight depot of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway, which, with five loaded cars and contents, was also destroyed with a loss of $10,000. Other property in the business part of the city caught fire, but was not damaged to any great extent. The burned factory was insured for $37,500.

Four Hurt in an Explosion.

An explosion in the soap factory of B. McGurri & Sons in Chicago almost completely demolished the plant and injured four persons. Two of those hurt were taken to the county hospital in a serious condition. The accident was due to the boiling over of a large caldron of grease in the mixing room. Pieces of timber and bricks were blown to a great distance.

Dies Looking at Hearse.

Henry Schulte came to Cincinnati from Germany many years ago and amassed a competency. Ill health compelled him to retire from business. His wife also fell sick and she died. He asked that the funeral carriages be driven past his home. He was propped up at the window by loving hands, and as the hearse passed, the old husband fell back in his daughter's arms dead.

Chadwick Gets a Reprimand.

Secretary Long has written a letter to Captain F. E. Chadwick, reprimanding him for his criticism of Rear Admiral Schley. After a careful study of the naval regulations the department officials were convinced that it was no offense against naval discipline for an officer to criticise another officer in a private conversation with a friend.

Springfield, Ohio, Core-Makers Strike.

The coremakers at the O. S. Kelley Company, Springfield, Ohio, went out on strike, demanding a uniform schedule of $2.25 per day. The men at the Architectural iron works, Grey Iron Foundry Company, E. W. Ross Company, Bettendorf Metal Wheel Company and the Armstrong Foundry Company, about 250 in all, also went out.

Dynamite a Safe.

George Hilderbrand, night watchman at the Val. Blatz brewery, Union and Erie streets, Chicago, was seized and bound hand and foot by five masked cracksmen, who dynamited the office safe and secured more than $700 in currency. They escaped with their booty.

Demands for Higher Wages.

Union workmen struck at Duluth for higher wages and shorter hours. Carpenters want 35 cents per hour, plumbers 50 cents and a Saturday half-holiday paid for, painters 40 cents, and other trades in proportion, with a general eight-hour day.

Fire Loss of $50,000.

At Steubenville, Ohio, fire nearly destroyed the plant of the Steubenville Wall Paper Company and machinery; also a half-million rolls of wall paper. The loss is $50,000; fully insured.

Cloudburst in Mexico.

Meager information from Hondo, Mex., states that much damage was done by a cloudburst, with possible loss of life. The mines were badly flooded.

Abducts Daughter and Flees.

In Los Angeles, Cal., C. Cole took his 3-year-old daughter from in front of her mother's eyes because his wife would not return to his home in Massachusetts.

Lawyer Stabs Justice in Court.

In a quarrel in a court room at Paris, Texas, Lawyer E. P. Scott stabbed Justice J. J. Hooks in the stomach. Judge Hooks is badly injured.

Thomas Harland Is Dead.

Thomas Harland, a well-known lawyer, is dead in New York, aged 70 years. He was the practical framer of our existing patent law.

Celebrated Painter Expires.

A dispatch from Bonn says that Michael Munkacsy, the celebrated painter, died in an asylum there.

KILLS 250 IN A MINE.

EXPLOSION TRAPS WORKERS IN UTAH SHAFT.

Not One Escapes to Give Facts of Disaster—The Rescuers Recover Charred Bodies of Many Victims—Blasting Powder Believed to Be to Blame.

Two hundred and fifty lives were lost in an explosion in mines No. 1 and No. 4 of the Pleasant Valley Coal Company at Winterquarters camp, two miles north of Scofield, Utah. Every man in the two shafts was killed, not one escaping to give details of the disaster.

At midnight 137 bodies had been recovered and rescue parties, made up of friends and relatives of the victims, were working in the leads in the vain hope that some might have lived through the accident. Help was sent from Colton, sixteen miles away, on the Rio Grande Western Railway, and all possible was done to bring out the dead from the wrecked mines.

The accidental igniting of blasting powder, of which a number of kegs were stored in mine No. 4, is believed to have been the cause of the disaster. This mine was the first to suffer and the explosion in shaft No. 1 followed almost immediately. The supposition is that the flames were communicated to the second mine by a gallery which connects the two workings.

All the dead taken out of No. 4 were burned and charred, showing that the fire must have swept like a wave through the entire shaft. In the other mine the bodies were not so seriously disfigured, death having come from suffocation.

Many who were in the vicinity of the mouths of the shafts were injured by the blast which issued from the openings. The buildings at the mouths were damaged seriously, and the whole country around trembled from the force of the explosion.

The disaster occurred while the 250 men of the day shift were busy in the various galleries and not one who was inside had warning of the peril. Those outside saw flame and smoke burst from the openings, followed by a dull rumble, the tearing of timbers and crashing of falling masses of earth and rock and then all was silent.

Immediately, from every direction, came men, women and children to whom the ominous sound could have only one meaning. It was some time before aught could be done and the wives, mothers and children of those entombed in the awful death trap crowded to the entrance wailing and crying for their loved ones.

News of the explosion spread with lightning speed through Scofield, which is chiefly made up of families of employes of the coal company. Dispatches were sent to Colton, from which place a train with doctors and hospital supplies was hurried to the scene. As soon as possible the rescue work was begun, but the task was not rescue, only the bringing out of the dead that was before the terror-stricken workers. Despite peril from broken timbers and loosened masses of rock, the miners and trainmen entered the blackened shafts and dragged to the light the mutilated corpses of their friends and neighbors.

Officials of the company are unable to explain the cause of the explosion. The mines were comparatively free of coal gas and it is said that an ordinary flame could not have caused the disaster. The story that an explosion of powder was responsible for the igniting of the gas and the awful havoc that followed seems borne out by the statements of all familiar with the interior of the workings.

CURRENT COMMENT

The bureau of statistics of the Treasury Department has compiled a statement of the traffic through the Sault Ste Marie canal between Lakes Superior and Michigan last year. The total number of vessels passing through the canal was 20,055, which was more than double the total for 1889. The total freight passing through the canal in 1899 was 25,255,810 tons, against but 7,516,022 tons in 1889, showing that the freight has increased much more rapidly than the number of vessels, thus indicating in some degree the rapid increase in the size and capacity of the freight carrying vessels of the great lakes. The development of grain production of the extreme Northwest during the decade is indicated by the fact that the wheat carried through the canal in 1899 was 58,397,335 bushels, and in 1889 16,231,854 bushels, while "grain other than wheat" in 1899 was 30,000,935 bushels, and in 1889 but 2,133,245 bushels.

A report recently issued gives some insight into the doings of New York's army of criminals during the past year. During 1899 there were 98,917 prisoners arraigned in the police courts of Manhattan and the Bronx. Of these 77,127 were males and 21,709 were females. There were 7,607 prisoners discharged on hearing the evidence, and 61,116 persons were held for trial at general and special sessions, which, compared with the figures of 1898, shows a falling off of 2,294.

People keep asking whether it should be spelled Porto Rico or Puerto Rico. The Spaniards spelled it with a "u," and the board of geographical names, appointed by the United States Government to decide disputes in spelling and pronunciation, adopted the Spanish style, but Senator Foraker's bill establishing a civil government on that island provides that the official spelling shall be Porto Rico.

The report comes from Cape Nome, the new Alaska gold field, that coal and wood are very scarce. All available wood has been used for ten miles on either side of Nome City. Wood brings $50 to $60 a cord, and it is a very poor article at that. The coal supply is very meager and coal is sold by the pound, bringing seven and as high as eight cents a pound.

CONGRESS

In the Senate on Thursday almost the entire session was devoted to consideration of the right of Nathan B. Scott of West Virginia to retain his seat in the Senate. Mr. Pettus (Ala.), who alone of the member of the committee on privileges and elections is opposed to the claim of Mr. Scott to a seat, made an elaborate argument to sustain his views. Mr. Morgan (Ala.) spoke in favor of his colleague's contention. Mr. McComas (Md.), Mr. Turley (Tenn.), Mr. Chandler (N. H.), Mr. Teller (Colo.), and Mr. Allen (Neb.) supported the resolution declaring Mr. Scott entitled to his seat. The case went over without action. The House after four days' discussion, passed the postoffice appropriation bill. The attempt to strike out the $100,000 for special mail facilities from New York to New Orleans and from Kansas City to Newton, Kan., was defeated. The amendment providing for pneumatic tube service was defeated. The one allowing extra compensation for letter carriers for work in excess of forty-eight hours a week was adopted by a big majority. The bill to increase the salary of the director of census to $7,500 and the salaries of supervisors of census by 2 per cent. of the amount received by their enumerators was passed.

On Saturday in the Senate Mr. Pettigrew asked immediate consideration of a resolution extending sympathy and hopes for success to the Boers in their war with Great Britain. A motion to refer the resolution to the committee on foreign relations was carried by 31 to 11. Efforts to secure a quorum failed, and the resolution remains subject to call at any time. A resolution was adopted providing that the exercises appropriate to the reception and acceptance from the Grand Army of the Republic of the statue of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, to be erected in the capitol, be made the special order for Saturday, May 19, at 4 p. m. The following bills were passed: For the establishment, control, operation and maintenance of the northern branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, at Hot Springs, in South Dakota, and appropriating $150,000 for the purpose. The House passed a number of bills of importance, and the major portion of the session was devoted to the Senate bill to create a commission to adjudicate the claims of citizens of the United States against Spain, assumed by this country by the treaty of Paris. The bill was finally recommitted to the committee on war claims, with instructions to report back a bill to refer the claims to the court of claims. The Senate bills to recognize the services of Lieut. Newcomb and the officers and men of the revenue cutter Hudson, which rescued the torpedo boat Winslow at Carnedas, Cuba, by conferring gold and silver medals upon them and to retire Captain Hodgsdon of the revenue cutter Hugh McCulloch, for meritorious services, were passed.

On Monday the Senate, by a vote of 29 to 20, refused to consider the pro-Boer resolution introduced by Mr. Pettigrew. Agreed to the conference report on the amendatory Porto Rico resolution. Passed bill appropriating $40,000 to enlarge and improve the public building at Burlington, Iowa. Agreed to the conference report on the bill in behalf of northwestern lumbermen, authorizing the Secretary of War to make certain regulations on the management of loose logs on several specified rivers. The House sent to the committee on judiciary the joint resolution for a constitutional amendment to disqualify polygamists for election as Senators or Representatives. By a vote of 144 to 26 passed the Lacey bill to prohibit the transportation by inter-state commerce of game killed in violation of local laws. Agreed to the conference report on the Porto Rico amendatory resolution. In committee of the whole considered the Senate bill for the creation of a commission to study and report upon the industrial conditions in China and Japan. Struck out the enacting clause by a vote of 58 to 54 after amending it by reducing the number of commissioners from five to three, providing that not more than two of these shall be of the same political party, and that none shall be members of either branch of Congress. Motion to strike out enacting clause was pending in open session when adjournment was voted.

Alaskan civil code bill passed the Senate on Tuesday, amendments being withdrawn. Harris' resolution passed concerning conservation of the water of the Arkansas river for the benefit of Colorado and Kansas. Tillman's resolution concerning tests of Krupp armor at Indian Head was agreed to. Consideration of army appropriation bill, carrying $114,951,590, was resumed. Lodge's amendment forbidding establishment of telegraph or cable lines in Alaska not owned and operated wholly by citizens of the United States was adopted. Berry's amendment giving preference to non-trust bidders on army contracts was defeated, 18 to 29. Stewart's amendment, "intended to prevent a Cuban cable monopoly," was rejected. In the House the entire day was devoted to consideration of the Nicaragua canal bill.

The Senate on Wednesday passed bill for the creation of linked memorial parks on the battlefields of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, the Wilderness and Spottsylvania, in Virginia. Received notice from Mr. Hoar that on Thursday he would call up the Clark contest case for consideration. Heard Mr. Mason in support of his proposition to enact legislation to prevent the adulteration of food. Devoted the rest of the day to debate on the army appropriation bill, with the treatment of American soldiers in the Philippines as the chief subject. The House by a vote of 225 to 35 passed bill providing for the construction of a protected but not a fortified Nicaragua canal.

This and That.

METHODISTS AT WORK

QUADRENNIAL CONFERENCE IS BEING HELD IN CHICAGO.

A Large and Notable Assemblage of Christian Workers—Much Important Business to Be Transacted—Measures Which May Mark Innovations.

One of the largest and most notable gatherings of Christian workers ever held assembled in Chicago Wednesday, when the twenty-third delegated general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church began its session, which will continue throughout the month. About 650 delegates are in attendance, and there is a large representation of laymen. Delegates have come from all parts of the world, including four from Germany, two from Italy, two from Norway, two from Sweden, two from Switzerland, two from Liberia, six from India, four from China, two from Japan, two from Mexico, and two from South America, and the list of laymen embraces many Methodist leaders of distinction and eminence.

The general conference, which is the highest legislative and administrative body of the church, acts on behalf of a constituency of nearly 3,000,000 and an organization embracing nearly 18,000 ministers and 14,000 local preachers. The delegates at the conference naturally include the most able and experienced of church workers, and they came from widely remote regions—from all parts of this country and Canada, from Germany, from Europe and even from the orient.

The work which this body must perform is arduous, and includes, besides the consideration of questions affecting the general policy of the church, the election of bishops and the administration of the immense business involved in the conduct of church finances and the various enterprises in which the church is engaged. This year, moreover, several questions of vital importance and unusual interest will come up for settlement. Some of these contemplate measures which would mark an innovation upon the accepted policy of the church. A new constitution will be considered; the question of "lay equality" has been brought forward; much time and attention probably will be given to the subject of the time limit now placed upon the pastoral term. And among other things the conference is expected to witness a warm debate between the conservative and the liberal elements upon the question of amusements and the advisability of abolishing certain restrictions regarding card playing, dancing and other similar pastimes.

Both on account of the character of the work to be performed and the eminence of the representatives assembled, the sessions of the conference will be of wide general interest by no means confined to the church constituency. The business to be done is as formidably complicated in variety and detail as that transacted in an ordinary session of Congress.

Bishop Merrill Presides.

Bishop Thomas Bowman called the conference to order in the great Auditorium and presided over the half-hour religious service. Then he laid down the gavel and Bishop Merrill, the senior effective bishop, took his place and announced the opening of the business session. David S. Monroe, who has been secretary of four conferences, then called the roll of districts and delegates in alphabetical order.

The provisional delegates were admitted without a contest. There were 157 provisional delegates elected to fill up the disparity in their proportional representation. Only eighty-five, however, responded to the roll call following their admission. The limited lay representation gave the pews 215 votes. Four ministerial delegates were absent. As the roll was made up on the opening day there are 365 preachers and 236 laymen on the regular list.

Without a dissenting vote the conference at its first session ratified the action of the annual conference in extending equal representation to the laity. The pulpit and the pew share equally in the highest governmental body of the Methodist Church. The ministers were more enthusiastic over the loss of their authority than the laymen over their additional powers. The victory was celebrated by singing the doxology. The "Old Hundred" is the battle hymn of the Methodists. It announces the conversion of the penitent at the revival. It is the pean of rejoicing when a church debt has been raised. It is the safety valve of pent-up enthusiasm. It rang through the vaulted chamber of the Chicago Auditorium in a roar that drowned the roll of the organ.

The step taken makes the Methodist Church a democratic body; the rule of the preacher passes with the century. The episcopacy in the church long since has been restricted to a superintendence without any authority beyond the placing of ministers and suggestions to the general and annual conferences.

The bishop's address was read to the conference Thursday. It deals with the state of the church and the progress of the past four years. The committees were announced and organized. All the proposed revisions of the book of discipline, especially those relating to amusements and dress and creation of bishops with limited powers, were initiated Thursday by resolutions that were referred to committees.

INDIANA INCIDENTS.

RECORD OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK.

Illicit Attachment Causes a Suicide—Fatal Quarrel Over a Young Woman—Female Hermit Dies Near Muncie—Killed by Fall from a Car.

News reaches Eckerty from Newton Stewart of the death by morphine of Frederick James Barriot, a young attorney. A letter addressed to his mother tells of his love for another man's wife and his too keen sense of honor to accept the reciprocated passion and says that suicide was his only means of escape from dishonoring his name. Barriot had talked of quitting law for the ministry.

Dead with an Ax Beside Her.

Mrs. Cadis Sutton, living a hermit a few miles from Muncie, though having an income of $6,000 from oil wells, was found dead with an ax on the bed beside her. She always feared robbers, but never kept sums of money in the house. Her husband has been dead twenty-two years. Since his death she has lived on the farm. Death, it is believed, was due to natural causes.

Elopes with a Girl of 13.

Henry Brokaw, aged 45, and Essie McAllister of Indianapolis, aged 13, eloped to Jeffersonville and were married. Letters were found here written to Brokaw from a justice of the peace at Jeffersonville, telling him he would have no trouble to get married there, as there were "plenty of fellows around who would swear the girl was of age." Gov. Mount is preparing to deal with the justice.

Upholds the Barrett Law.

The Indiana Supreme Court has affirmed the constitutionality of the Barrett improvement law. The title of the case was Thomas B. Adams against the city of Shelbyville. The suit was to enjoin the city from making a street improvement in front of Adams' property. The Supreme Court, while upholding the law, reversed the decision of the lower court and granted Adams an injunction.

Farmer Fires to Kill.

Joseph Reese twice shot and mortally wounded S .C. Campbell near Thorntown. Soon afterward Reese went to town and surrendered voluntarily. He says he acted in self-defense. Reese was taken to Lebanon and gave bond for his appearance. The trouble is said to have arisen over a slander involving a young woman. Both men are prominent farmers.

Mail Clerk Falls from Car.

As train No. 18 on the Panhandle was passing Hagerstown at the rate of sixty miles an hour Daniel W. Deardorff, a mail clerk, fell from the door of his car and was instantly killed. Deardorff was 45 years old and had been ten years in the service. He was one of the most careful men in the service and his death is the result of an accident.

OLD TIMES.

There are no days like the good old days—
The days when we were youthful!
When humankind were pure of mind
And speech and deeds were truthful;
Before a love for sordid gold
Because man's ruling passion,
And before each dame and maid became
Slaves to the tyrant fashion.

There are no girls like the good old girls—
Against the world I'd stake 'em!
As buxom and smart and clean of heart
As the Lord knew how to make 'em!
They were rich in spirit and common sense,
A piety all-supportin';
They could bake and brew, and had taught school, too,
And they made the likeliest courtin'!

There are no boys like the good old boys—
When we were boys together!
When the grass was sweet to the brown bare feet
That dimpled the laughing heather;
When the pewee sung to the summer dawn
Of the bee in the willowy clover,
Or down by the mill the whip-poor-will
Echoed his night song over.

There is no love like the good old love—
The love that mother gave us!
We are old, old men, yet we pine again
For that precious grace God gave us!
So we dream and dream of the good old times,
And our hearts grow tenderer, fonder,
As those dear old dreams bring soothing gleams
Of heaven away off yonder.

A LATIN LESSON.

IT was a year since he had left Chicago, and in all that time she had heard nothing from him. It seemed strange! they had been such friends—indeed, more than friends, for he had seemed to like her much, and had sought her society on every possible occasion. The day before he was to leave he had come by appointment to see her. She had noticed with concern that his manner was chill and constrained, but had had no opportunity to dissipate that chill by her own cordiality. Although it was not their regular reception day, the drawing-room was full of people, and her sister, who was apt upon occasion to monopolize his attention, never left them alone for a moment, although he prolonged his stay until after the last visitor had left.

"Surely he will write," she had said to herself, and for weeks the postman's ring had caused a quick fluttering of the heart which subsided into the dull ache of disappointment when the long-ed-for letter never came. She had heard of him often from common friends, of his success socially and financially in the distant city which he had made his home, and had slowly and unwillingly resigned herself to the conviction that their friendship had been but an episode. And now she held in her hand the announcement of his marriage to another woman. She felt glad that the family had regarded him as her sister's admirer.

SHE HAD NOT BEEN MISTAKEN; HE HAD LOVED HER AFTER ALL.

Slowly she went upstairs to her room and unlocked her desk, taking from an inner drawer a small stock of treasures—a dozen notes, some dried violets, candy box, ribbons, and other souvenirs equally trifling. She must destroy them now, she was too old-fashioned to preserve such memorials of another woman's husband. Violets and ribbons were soon in ashes on the hearth, but each note in the packet was opened and read before being sacrificed. She was naturally methodical and they came in correct order. She smiled bitterly to herself to see how little there was really in them. Even Mrs. Bardell's lawyer would have been puzzled to find on those pages anything tender or committal. What a fool she had been! She finished the holocaust and turned to replace the empty drawer. It stuck and had to be pulled out again. Looking for the obstruction, she found another note—the last one—which she had mourned as lost. Now she remembered that she had put it away, after reading it hastily, for there were people waiting below. It announced that he was coming to see her that afternoon and requested that she would not fail to be in. Just above the signature was a sentence in Latin, rapidly and illegibly written—his handwriting at its best was difficult to decipher. She started as she remembered that in the hurry of that long-ago afternoon she had put off translating Latin. He knew that she had studied the language, for he had once asked her, seemingly apropos of nothing, but she had not told him that she had forgotten nearly all of it since leaving school. She rushed for the dictionary and read understandingly for the first time the neglected message, the gist, as it proved, of the whole:

"O love of mine; my bleeding heart lies at thy feet; deign to accept the offering of thy slave."

She had not been mistaken; he had loved her, after all, but why did he—how could he—trust a living story to a dead tongue? And why had she, however hurried, left a word of that letter unread?

The letter was clutched convulsively, the lexicon dropped to the floor, and her head went down on her arm in a passion of futile tears.—Philadelphia Item.

M. GALLIFET AND HIS FISH.

He Caught It in the Presence of Napoleon III. and It Made Trouble.

In the etats de service of Gen. Gallifet, the present War Minister of France, there is a curious note which should endear him to the hearts of all fishermen. After paying a just tribute to his abilities, the note reads:

"But, unfortunately, he selects extraordinary companions."

Thereby hangs a fish story. Long ago, in the days of the second empire, Gallifet was the aid-de-camp of Napoleon III. At St. Cloud his quarters were just over the imperial bedroom. Everything around him was very grand and very gloomy. The window of his room looked upon the pond that washed the walls of the chateau. The water was clear, and the surrounding scenery was beautiful; but the young lieutenant felt like a prisoner. Early one morning while seated at his window trying to drive away the blues with a cigar he espied below in the crystal water an enormous carp. The instincts of the angler, strong in Gallifet, made the young man's eyes snap and set his heart a-throbbing.

The big fish was the private property of the Emperor. Consequently, for Gallifet it was forbidden fish. But it was such a fine fellow! The resistance of the soldier's conscience was useless. It surrendered unconditionally. The remaining part of the campaign against the carp was simple enough. Gallifet went to his trunk, brought out his trusty line, to which he fastened a hook and an artificial bait. With his accustomed skill he cast the line. The carp was hooked and hauled in through the window.

Here the lieutenant's fun ended and his trouble began. The fish landed upon a table, overturned a large globe filled with water, and caromed from that to a magnificent vase, which it also upset and smashed to pieces upon the floor. Then it began to execute a genuine pas de carpe among the smithereens.

The Emperor, hearing the strange racket overhead and seeing the water trickling through the ceiling, was astonished. He rushed upstairs to find out what was the matter. Gallifet heard him coming and endeavored to grab the carp and throw it out of the window, and thus destroy the evidence of his poaching in the imperial pond. But the slippery thing was hard to hold; so he tossed it into the bed and covered it up with the bed clothes. When the Emperor entered the room he noticed immediately the quivering bed clothes. He pulled them down and uncovered the floundering fish. His majesty's face assumed an almost jim-jamic expression, which gradually faded into a faint smile. He took in the entire situation, saluted, and left the future War Minister to meditate upon the mysteries of a fisherman's luck.

ENGINEERED OUT OF TOWN.

How West Virginia Liquor Men Got the Best of the Prohibitionists.

"I reckon we're got the oddest town in our State that there is in the United States," said a West Virginia man. "Ever hear of Culloden? I don't mean the clans of Culloden described by the poet Campbell. I mean Culloden, W. Va. Well, sir, about half the population of the town doesn't live in the town and can't vote in the town, although they are right in the town.

"I'll explain. The good people, and they are in the majority, too, are down on saloons and liquor in any shape. They got up a temperance meeting and purposed to drive the liquor men out of the town. When you find a West Virginian who believes in liquor you find a man who is ready to fight for it. The liquor people got together and in some way got the confidence of the town engineer. I don't know whether he was a liquor man or not, but they got him on their side. The engineer discovered that the town was not laid out right, and he got authority to change the metes and bounds. When he finished the job the temperance people found out that they lived just outside of the line of the town, no matter what part of the town their houses were in. A man could stand in his back yard and talk to the man whose place was right up against his place and who was a voter, but the first man had lost his vote.

"The lines of the engineer excluded, as I have said, the temperance people. It took in the license folk all right. The map of Culloden as it now is looks a good deal like a sheet of paper after a fly with ink on its feet meanders across it. You can tell how a citizen of Culloden stands on the liquor question by the place where he builds a house, if he builds one, which doesn't often occur. In spite of its zigzag boundaries, however, Culloden is a contented community."—New York Sun.

Not to Be Outdone.

James Russell Lowell was a great student of dialect. One day while in England he entered a South Shields restaurant, and sat down opposite a barefooted Shields yokel, who had been walking, and whose feet were tired.

"Waiter," he said, "bring he a steak and fried potatoes."

The yokel leaned his elbows upon the table. "Bring me yan, tee," he said.

"Bring me a cup of coffee and rolls," continued Lowell.

"Bring me yan, tee," said the yokel.

"And, John, you may bring me a bootjack."

"Bring me yan, tee," added the yokel.

"Why, what on earth can you want with a bootjack?' asked Lowell, surprised into asking the question. The retort nearly took away his breath.

"Gan away, ye fule," said the yokel; "d'ye think I canna eat a bootjack as well as ye?"—Glasgow (Scotland) Times.

Fifty-two Years Without a Drink.

Some animals can live many years without water. A paroquet lived fifty-two years in the London zoo without taking a drop of water. A number of reptiles live and prosper in places where there is no water.

HER "SECOND SIGHT."

MYSTERY CLEARED UP BY A TEN-YEAR-OLD GIRL.

She Locates a Dead Body in the Bottom of the Illinois River—Claims that, in a Vision, She Saw the Woman Drown.

When the sullen waters of the Illinois River gave up their dead in the person of Mrs. Lucy Sommers some time ago there was not only cleared up one of the deepest mysteries that has ever occurred in Peoria, but at the same time there was evidence established corroboratory of a most extraordinary case of second sight.

One night early in January Mrs. Lucy Sommers, who was visiting her sister, Mrs. R. B. Craig at 822 Fayette street in Peoria, suddenly disappeared. She had been ill and suffering at times from slight attacks of dementia, though it was not supposed that they were of a serious nature. But on the night mentioned she arose from her bed, and announcing to her mother, who was watching with her, that she was going to get a drink she left the room and was never after seen alive. When she did not return her mother gave the alarm and the inmates of the house turned out to hunt for her, supposing, of course, that in a fit of temporary aberration she had wandered to the house of one of the neighbors. But the most diligent inquiry failed to reveal her whereabouts and then the family became genuinely alarmed. A searching party was organized and they set out to find her. The ground was not frozen and they soon came upon footprints in the mud and going from the house.

SHOWING WHERE THE BODY WOULD BE FOUND.

These were followed as far as they could be in the darkness, when the party returned home to await the coming of day before renewing the search. When the morning broke, however, the earth was frozen hard and the trail abandoned the night before was hard to follow. New parties were added, and a reward offered for the discovery of the woman dead or alive. The country was scoured for miles in either direction, but always without result.

Sometimes they fancied they had discovered the broken trail, but these fragmentary discoveries led to nothing tangible. At last, in despair, the relatives invoked the aid of bloodhounds. The trail they followed was a devious and winding one, running from the Craig home, on Fayette street, north by northeast to Glen Oak Park, thence in a westerly direction to Bradley Park, outside the city's limits and on its western border. Here the trail grew faint and it was only with difficulty that it was continued to the Easton farm, where it was lost, and the dogs stopped and never after did they get any further.

At this juncture little Grace Holmes appeared on the scene. She is a child about ten years old and especially bright for her age. Her parents are uneducated people and not in the best of circumstances. She declared that while lying in her bed at home more than a mile from the Craig house she had seen the unfortunate woman come out of the house, climb over the fence and make her way stealthily to the river, where she had plunged into an opening left by the icemen the day before.

This statement was borne out by the parents, who asserted that she had told the story identically as repeated on coming downstairs in the morning, and that this was long before she could possibly have had an opportunity of learning the facts in the case from any source whatsoever. The child was questioned closely, but she stuck to her story with a persistence that began to disarm suspicion. She described the garments worn by Mrs. Sommers at the time of her departure, and to the surprise of her listeners her description proved to be entirely correct.

At length in response to her earnest solicitations she was allowed to go out and point out the resting place of the woman she insisted was in the river. She started from the house accompanied by her father and others and followed the streets she claimed to have seen Mrs. Sommers follow until she came to the foot of Spring street.

From there she pointed out the exact spot at which Mrs. Sommers had gone down. She said that she walked calmly into the water and went down, down, down, until finally she disappeared altogether. The next night she saw the body again. It rose slowly from the bottom of the river, being caught in an eddy, and after whirling around several times moved away slowly down the stream, sometimes floating and sometimes rolling along the river bed. Once, according to her story, it stood erect in the water, but did not rise to the surface.

At her request she was then taken to a point at the foot of Fayette street. By this time the news of the child's attempt had became noised abroad and the river bank was lined with thousands of spectators eager and anxious to see what the outcome would be. After sitting quietly in her place for a few moments she rose quickly and with a hurried gesture pointed to a spot a few hundred feet from the shore, exclaiming as she did so: "She lies there."

The multitude broke up and a dragging party was at once put to work searching the hidden depths to wrest from them their secret. The hour passed, the afternoon and the day, but nothing was brought from the lake. In strict justice it must be said that the dragging process was not carried on according to her directions. She now declares that the net never touched the body reposing on the bottom of the lake.

When it was known that the dragging had been unproductive those who had based their faith on the child's judgment began to waver and she was denounced as a fraud of the most pronounced type. Then a severe cold spell set in and the lake was locked in ice and the matter began to fade from the public mind. Not so the little girl. It was useless to tell her that she must be mistaken.

She declared that the body was still in the water, that she could see it and persisted in going to the river at intervals. During these visits she made the acquaintance of Captain Hefele, of the steamer Gazelle. She went to the captain and solemnly asserted that the body was fast to a snag in the bottom of the river. The captain paid no attention to the child, regarding the whole thing as one of her hallucinations. Again and again she went to him, begging him to go and release the body. Nothing would put her off. She declared that she could see the body and would not rest until it was released.

At length there came a day when the waters of the staid Illinois were far above their banks. The wind was blowing a hurricane and when the occupants of a cabin boat on the Tazewell side of the stream looked out of the window they saw what looked like a bag of some kind floating in the water among the willows in which their boat was fastened. A hasty examination convinced them that it was a human body, and upon rowing to its side it proved to be the body of the long-lost Mrs. Sommers. When the body was taken from the water the condition of the dress garments confirmed even to the smallest detail the statements of the child.

Shaved Without Arms.

American men think it a very meritorious and remarkable accomplishment to be able to shave themselves. Yet Charles Francis Felu, the armless Belgian artist, who has just died in his seventieth year, performed this arduous office every morning for himself, and did not consider that he was doing anything unusual.

When a baby Felu related how he used to sit in the garden with his mother during the long summer days while she taught him to pluck with his little toes the bright colored flowers with which their garden abounded. Fortified by this practice his baby feet became daily more flexible and useful to their little master, and when he had reached the age of 6 he could do almost as much with them as his little companions and playmates could do with their hands.

In later years, when he commenced the study and pursuit of his favorite art, painting, it was a wonderfully interesting sight to watch the gifted boy at work.

He always held his palette with the great toe of his left foot and manipulated the different brushes, crayons and pencils with the toes of his right foot. Always when at table he skillfully managed his knife and fork.

Take Care of the Old Newspapers.

Old newspapers form an important item in domestic economy, and are useful for polishing window-glasses, for cleaning lamp-chimneys, for testing and cleaning flat-irons, and for a dozen other things. You will also need heaps of them when you come to pack away the winter clothing. The cloth-moth, like other evil-doers, has an aversion to printer's ink. An excellent moth-proof bag, second only to the expensive tar paper, and costing nothing, may be made of two thicknesses of newspaper, with the edges folded as if for an inch-wide hem, and securely pasted. Bags of the same kind are about the best thing you can use for keeping seeds and dried herbs. They are dust and insect proof, and can be labeled and hung in the store room until needed.

TO RUN CORRECTLY.

SERVICEABLE ADVICE BY A FORMER CHAMPION.

The Running Gait of Many Young Men Would Make Mercury Weep—Speedy and Graceful Gait Is Easily Acquired—Physical Director's Advice.

Anything faster than a walk in stiff, measured steps is considered by most people undignified, probably because a faster gait than a walk—a good, easy, graceful stride for running—is a thing almost impossible to them. To see many, even of our young men, speeding after a car or attempting to catch the last boat is a sight to make Mercury, the swift messenger of the gods, weep for very shame and to make an old trainer curl his lip with honest contempt.

A speedy and graceful gait, physical instructors say, is easily acquired. But attention must be paid to the proper position one should assume in order to obtain the greatest amount of progression with a maximum velocity and a minimum expenditure of bodily energy.

The correct position to be assumed when running is set forth clearly by Randolph Faries, the intercollegiate mile and half-mile champion runner, former president of the Inercollegiate Amateur Athletic Association of America, and now the director of physical education at the University of Pennsylvania.

"When running," declares this authority, "no matter what the distance, the arms, or, more properly speaking, the upper extremities, should be used chiefly from the shoulder with precision, and should swing in harmony with the legs or lower extremities. The right arm should move with the left leg, and the left arm with the right leg, in order to maintain perfect balance and to gain greater speed. The trunk and head should be allowed to assume their natural position, which, if a person carries himself properly, will be in the erect posture or nearly so. The runner bught never to lean forward.

"All distances under and including one mile should be run upon the toes, while distance over one mile should be run upon the ball of the foot, or the part just back of the toes. Runners should put their feet out in front of them in a perfectly straight line, making the advanced step with one foot when the other is directly beneath the body, keeping each arm in its relative position and the legs close together, in order to concentrate energy. A good stride will cover about seven feet, seven feet two inches, seven feet four inches or seven feet six inches. It is a great mistake to overstride, because in so doing an unnecessary amount of energy is wasted, and fatigue comes on more quickly. If one is able to stride seven feet at first he is doing well. It is best to increase the stride by inches. In this way a good stride may be obtained without unduly taxing the muscles.

"Never kick your heels up behind you—that is, behind the axis of the body—because it will cause a loss of locomotion and also of time by making the legs trail through a greater space, unnecessarily. As one progresses, alighting first upon one set of toes and then upon the other, or ball of the foot, as the case may be, great care should be exercised in coming down upon the ground lightly. If attention be paid to this the body will escape much jarring, which is important to the muscles and nerves."

INGENIOUS MESSAGE BOX.

Invention of a Canadian Is a Sort of an Automatic Office Boy.

A letter-box might be styled a message box, but the latter in reality is something very different and does duty for the small boy who is supposed to preside over the office during the absence of his employer. It consists, as shown, of a small writing desk attached to the outside of the office door. In it is a roll of paper. The strip of paper is exposed in an opening in the top of the desk, in a position convenient to write upon. Means are provided to permit of the paper being unrolled in a forward direction, but a ratchet and pawl prevents it from being turned in the opposite direction. After the paper is moved forward it passes through a slit in the door, into the office.

The convenience of this arrangement, devised by George E. Tomis of Vancouver, Canada, is evident. Suppose you call at an office and find it closed. With the paper and desk before you you would jot down the nature of your business and give the roll a few turns forward with your fingers, when your message would be passed into the office. The next man coming along would do the same thing, but as he could not turn the paper backward he would be unable to discover what your message was, even if he wanted to pry into your affairs.

Memory Stronger in Summer.

Scientists have discovered that the memory is stronger in summer than in winter. Among the worst foes of the memory are too much food, too much physical exercise, and, strangely enough, too much education.

One of the most cruel impositions in the world is to convince a child that the Lord has been good to it in bringing it a little red baby brother.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, postoffice as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.....MAY 10, 1900.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

The County Ticket Named in Auburn Tuesday.

Tuesday forenoon the democratic voters of the county began to assemble in town, and though the canvass has been a quiet one, there was about the usual number of delegates. At 11 a. m., all gathered at Henry's opera house, led there by the Waterloo band, composed mainly of ladies.

At 11:30 County Chairman Walter called the meeting to order and the call was read by John C. Loehner, who is the county secretary. Then came the selection of chairman for the meeting. W. W. Sharpless of Garrett, named Herman Boozer of Waterloo. several seconds were heard and it was made unanimous. Mr. Boozer took the gavel, and thanked the meeting in a neat and able speech, which elicited frequent cheers. W. W. Sharpless was made secretary, with the democratic editors of the county for assistants. The meeting then adjourned for the dinner hour.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

At 1:30 Chairman Boozer called the convention to order. A resolution was handed to him by Chairman Walter, who had received it from a delegate. This Mr. Boozer read, as follows:

Resolved, That it is the wish of the democratic party of DeKalb county to endorse the democratic platform made at Chicago in 1896 That we oppose the policy of the present administration in its legislation tending to foster trusts and combinations of capital which are detrimental to the welfare of the American people, and its apparent abandonment of the "Monroe Doctrine" and we are heartily in favor of the renomination of William J. Bryan, for president in 1900.

This was unaminously adopted. The chairman then gave notice that the well-established rules of the democracy would then be enforced, that is, that when the voting begins, each delegation must keep in its place and no candidate be allowed a place among the delegates. Nominations were then declared in order.

As representative came first, W. W Sharpless in a neat speech named Edwin P. Fitzgerald of Keyser; Phil Plum named J. W. Jackman of Grant; O. V. Baxter named Wm. McMorgan of Wilmington. Ballots were prepared and the chairman was instructed to name two men to act as tellers. The men chosen were Sol. Barney and W. F C. Francis. The first ballot resulted:

FIRST BALLOT.

Fitzgerald	109
Jackman	107½
McMorgan	67½
Total votes cast	285
Necessary to a choice	143

Mr. McMorgan withdrew his name and the second ballot was:

SECOND BALLOT.

Fitzgerald	119
Jackman	166

Mr. Jackman having received a majority of all the votes cast, was declared the nominee for representative. He was called and thanked the convention in a neat little speech.

When nominations for sheriff were called a delegate from Keyser presented the name of Sheriff Hathaway. It was made unanimous and Mr. Hathaway made a brief speech, saying that this was one of the most acceptable birthday presents he had ever received. He is 35 years old today.

Another wave of enthusiasm struck the convention when nominations for treasurer were called for. There was only one name—that of Dr. F. M. Hines, and after his nomination had been seconded by Sol Barney of Concord it was made unanimous. Dr. Hines' little speech was heartily applauded.

Surveyor was next in order. The names announced were: Philip Holman of Butler township; John H. W. Krontz of Wilmington; C. P. Hamman of Franklin; Frank Scholes of Concord; G. R. VanAuken of Union.

FIRST BALLOT.

Holman	48
Krontz	45
Hamman	95
Scholes	86
VanAuken	51
Total votes cast	325

Krontz made a rousing speech and withdrew his name. He was highly applauded.

SECOND BALLOT.

Holman	73
Hamman	136
Scholes	67
VanAuken	9

VanAuken's name was withdrawn.

THIRD BALLOT.

Holman	62
Scholes	71
Hamman	151

On motion of Mr. Scholes the nomination of Mr. Hamman was made unanimous. Mr. Hamman briefly thanked the convention for the honor conferred.

As we go to press the convention is selecting a candidate for county assessor, and other nominations will follow.

The office of county assessor came next. R S. S. Reed of Union was named and there being no other candidate is was given him by acclamation.

For commissioner of the north district, Allen Shultz was re-nominated by acclamation.

For commissioner in the southwest district, E. R. Shoemaker was also renominated by acclamation.

For coroner. Dr. E. V. Campbell of Wilmington and Chas. Comiskey of Jackson were named.

THE BALLOT.

Campbell	89
Comiskey	278

And Comiskey was declared nominated. He thanked the delegates in a brief but pointed speech.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

When it came to this new office it was realized that an unusual difficulty presented itself. If the convention should go ahead and make nominations it was not certain whether the seven men chosen would all serve. Possibly none of them would accept. It was also not certain that the districts would each present a man. Besides, it was getting late and in the hurry, mistakes in selecting the right kind of men were feared. So Mr. Boland made a motion that the selection of the nominees of the county council be left for the members of the county committee, as he said they would not only have ample time to make good selections, but also to find out whether the men selected would accept. Dr. Nusbaum offered an amendment that we leave the selection to be made jointly by the republican and the democratic county committees, with the understanding that as this is a democratic county, the democrats select four and the republicans three. He said this plan is being followed in several counties. This would take the county council out of politics. There was a good deal of discussion over this amendment, mostly opposed to it, and the Doctor finally withdrew it. The original motion by Mr. Boland was then adopted unanimously. The meeting having completed its labors, Judge Hench, who was present, was called to the stage and made a brief but brilliant speech, in which he advocated standing by the ticket from head to foot. He was generously cheered. The convention then adjourned.

OBITUARY.

Morris Hamilton Boren was born in Knox County, Ohio, November 12, 1836. When a boy seven years old he came with his parents to DeKalb County, Ind., where he has since lived. When he had grown to young manhood he learned the carpenter's trade, which occupation he followed until a few years ago, when he had to abandon it on account of ill health. In 1859 he was united in marriage to Miss Harriet Essig, who preceeded him to the spirit world three years ago. To this union were born nine children, five sons and four daughters. Mr. Boren was an industrious man, an honest and respected citizen of this county. He was a kind husband and indulgent father. After a long siege of sickness he closed his pilgrimage on the 2nd of May 1900, at the ripe age of 64 years, 5 months and 20 days. He leaves to mourn his death four sons, two daughters, twelve grandchildren, besides many other friends. The funeral service was conducted from the Rehobeth church in Jackson township Friday at 2 p. m.; interment took place in the Bear Creek cemetery. Rev. J. D. Brosy, officiating.

Must Pass Examination.

The state board of education has directed that all persons holding licenses to teach must take an examination in American literature. This is in accordance with an act of the last legislature, which made provisions for the teaching of the branch, American literature in the common schools. Another law provides that when new subjects are taught the teacher must pass an examination on these subjects.

There are a large number of teachers throughout the state who hold what are termed exemption licenses. These are obtained after teaching a certain number of years if the teacher holds a diploma from the state normal college, or has passes a certain examination which is to show the qualifications of a graduate of the state normal. All these will now have to report for examination in American literature on questions submitted by the state board.

Club Notes.

The L. L. C. met with Mrs. Willis last Saturday and enjoyed a very pleasant session. A most excellnt paper was given by Mrs. Hortense Robbins, entitled "America as a Refuge." Mrs. Hartman of Wabash who was present, gave some back work which was a short history of "The Venezuelan Boundary Dispute." This was followed by a bright spicy paper by Miss Hague entitled "Dont's for Club Women." All the papers were freely discussed. A motion was made the club year be shortened; this is to be decided in two weeks. A few weeks ago the name of Mrs. Welsheimer was placed on the waiting list and the reporter neglected to make mention of it. After current news the club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Mollie Rose next Saturday.

OBITUARY.

Prudence Grover nee Morse, was born at Bee, Maine, September 15, 1833, and died at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. Amos Rothgeb, three and one-half miles north of Auburn, May 6, 1900, aged 67 years, 7 months and 21 days. The deceased came with her husband to Allen county, Indiana, in 1856, where she has since lived until the last few years she has made her home with Mr. Rothgeb. She leaves a son and daughter, five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, with many friends and neighbors to mourn their loss. The funeral was conducted from the Immanual Reformed church three miles north of Auburn, May 8, the sermon being delivered by the writer, based on scripture found in Job 14:14. The body was laid to rest in the church yard.—CHARLES A. ROW.

Dyspeptic's Debility

A Common Condition that Robs Men of Success and Women of Their Beauty.

Dr. Stone makes it clear with a common illustration: You eat a hearty meal which you have difficulty in digesting how do you feel? You are bloated and distressed. You may have a pain in the stomach, in the region of your heart or in your back. You are dull and heavy and your energy is gone. A perfectly well person can have these symptoms. Make these symptoms permanent and the result is that modern bugaboo, debility. Every dyspeptic is debilitated. Every sufferer from debility is a dyspeptic. Debility means lack of proper nutrition. Imperfect digestion robs you of the benefit of your food; debility must follow. The usual result from the use of Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure is a prompt increase of zest and energy. You are comfortable and cheerful and you feel like work. Your stomach is supplying your nerves, muscles and brain with material to work with. The starvation is over. The nutritious elements of your food are being assimilated once more, and you feel like a new person.

NO RESULTS, NO COST.

Dr. Stone's New Despepsia Cure is guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Chronic Headache, Nervous or Mental Debility, and Liver Troubles. Its remarkable feature is the quickness with which it helps—often from the first dose. If it does not benefit you, go back to your druggist and get your money. Price 50 cents. Sold by H. B. McCord.

REWARD.

We, the undersigned druggists, offer a reward of 50 cents to any person who purchases of us, two 25 cent boxes of Baxter's Mandrake Bitters Tablets, if it fails to cure constipation, billiousness, sick-headache, jaundice, loss of appetite, sour stomach, dyspepsia, liver complaint, or any of the diseases for which it is recommended. Price 25 cents for either tablets or liquid. We will also refund the money if it fails to give satisfaction.—E. M. Fischler, F. E. Davenport and H. B. McCord.

Waterloo Election.

There were three tickets in the field there yesterday, but not much politics. It was chiefly a struggle on local matters.

THE RESULT.

The councilman elected in the first ward, is Lon Lower, a republican.

In the third ward, D. L. Leas, democrat.

In the fifth ward, C. O Blanchard.
Clerk, S. A. Bowman, re-elected.
Treasurer, J. C. Day, re-elected.
Marshal, Robert Price.

Monday's Daily.

—R. Sawvel of Franklin was here today paying taxes.

—Mrs. S. L. Olinger was a cash contributor Saturday. They have moved from Garrett back to the farm again.

—R. H. Sherlock went on our 1901 list Saturday, also paying for our old friend, Mrs. Sophia McNabb, of the same township.

—It is reported that Frank B. Burke, at one time U. S. Marshal for Indiana will be a candidate for the nomination for governor on the democratic ticket.

—J. E. Albert at the south end green house is giving a good deal of attention to the manufacture of cement burial cases. They are a good thing in such cases.

—Manager Henry informs us that a pocket book was found at the opera house and that the owner can have it by proving property and paying for this notice.

—John W. Tarney of Newville was here Saturday. It will be remembered that he lost his wagon and blacksmith shop by fire, entailing the loss of many years of hard work and saving.

—John Lochner today received a business letter from Hamilton in the Bermuda Islands. DeKalb people are known the world over, and are generally found sitting on the top rail of the fence.

—W. B. Campbell, editor of the Anderson Herald, is a candidate for delegate to the republican national convention from his congressional district. Mr. Campbell is entitled to this recognition from his party.

—Gen. W. J. McKee of Indianapolis is now talked of as democratic candidate for governor. As he had a good deal to do with the Spanish war preparations, it is believed he would be a good man to run against Col. Durbin.

—Jacob Bogert, agent of the B. & O. land and improvement company at Garrett, died at his home in that place at 4:30 this morning. The deceased had resided at Garrett for a number of years and his death will be deplored by a wide circle of friends.

—S. Z. Dickinson of Waterloo was here Saturday. He has been around with the children a part of the time for the past year. Charles is at Tecumseh, but owing to an injury has not been able to work for some time. Forrest is there running a meat market, and Will has a jewelry store. Bird is in the jewelry business at Cripple Creek, Colo. He is trying to get some of the brothers to join him there.

—Several Auburnites went to Waterloo yesterday, and stopped at the Locke Hotel for dinner. Those who were there for dinner, were: S. C. Snyder and wife, C. A. Schaab and wife, W. H. Schaab and wife, W. C. Hartman and wife, A. C. Robbins and wife. For supper were: Elmer Bachtel and Miss Helen Ralston, C. F. Scoville and Myra Watson, W. H. Frank and Miss Eva Watson, Will Raut and Miss Anna Trentman.

Tuesday's Daily.

—To be thrice happy, use Russ' Bleaching Blue, don't be deceived by fraudulent imitations.

—John B. Bryan, a Troy delegate, was a caller today and went on the COURIER 1901 list of honor.

—The Waterloo ladies band gave our people some nice music while in attendance at the convention today.

—Ethie Sfonebraker is up here for a visit. She is living at Fort Wayne with her sister, Mrs. E. B. Johnson.

—Lloyd Obenchain, formerly foreman of the COURIER office, is now holding a good position on the Sentinel at Peru.

—Isaac Speer of Waterloo was here today on his way to Garrett to bring his daughter and her children home for a visit.

—Don't forget that you can dye all kinds of fibers, cotton, wool or silk at the same time, in the same vessel with Putnam Fadeless Dyes. Sold by F. E. Davenport. 19-21

—Under the apportionment of the endowment fund of Indiana Uuiversity at Bloomington DeKalb county receives $278 43. This is to be loaned and the interest applied on the payment of salaries of professors at the university.

—In Indiana, 110 rural mail routes are now in operation, and 160 applications for routes are now pending Fifty of the 92 counties now have rural free delivery, and it is probable that half of the remaining counties will have the service within a year.

—The Lake Shore railroad will organize a police force along its lines similar to that maintained by the Pennsylvania company. This will aid very materially in ridding the road of the gangs of thugs and thieves which have held sway for several years.

—H. C. Shull of the school board has completed the enumeration of children of school age for the city of Auburn which show that there are 820 of them, against 803 last year. The enumerations in other towns and cities show about the same rate of increase —The town election at Butler yesterday resulted in the election of four republicans and one democrat, Editor Downey of the Herald being chosen as councilman in his ward by a majority of 79. The other officers, all republicans, are: Clerk, Ralph Kinney; treasurer, R. C. Campbell; marshal, Milton Hiner; councilman, Everett.

—DeLong Post, G. A. R., extends a cordial invitation to all ex-soldiers of the civil and Spanish-American wars, as well as all school children of Auburn and vicinity, to join them in the celebration of Memorial Day in Auburn on Sunday, May 27. The memorial sermon will be preached at the church of God on Sunday, May 27, by Rev. Markley, and all are cordially invited.

Wednesday's Daily.

—Arthur Olds was at Fort Wayne yesterday on business.

—Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Keckler spent the day at Fort Wayne yesterday.

—Green Lahnum's barn was moved bodily about eight feet during the storm.

—Samuel Miller of Stafford, J. B. Bryant and B. F. Cornelius of Troy and Wm. Seeley of Newville were callers yesterday and went on our roll of honor for the Weekly.

—The barn of Joe Stahl north of town was wrecked in the cyclone Monday night. The steel roof on Justin Girardot's barn was partly torn off, and Geo. Pepple's barn was injured.

—Governor Mount has appointed Hon. T. E. Ellison of Fort Wayne an honorary commissioner, to the international congress of public and private charities, to be held in Paris from July 30 to August 5.

—Saturday evening some of the friends of Floy Metcalf called on her to remind her that it was her seventeenth birthday. All had a social time after which a lunch was served by little Helen VanAuken.

—Hawaii becomes part of the soil of the United Sates on the 15th of the present month. Yet it is 2,000 miles distant from our nearest telegraph station and four or five days is needed even for the swiftest Pacific steamer to reach it.

—Will Baird, deputy sheriff went out west of Corunna yesterday and brought in Mrs. Mathews for safe keeping. She has been in the asylum about eight years and was brought back apparently cured. But she had gone insane again.

—A Connecticut girl has obtained damages from a railway company because her fingers were so injured by a car that she cannot play the piano That jury ought to be forced to live in a flat with pianos to right, left, north, south, above and below them.

—The storm Monday night struck Cal VanAuken's farm full tilt. One window was forced in and in trying to fill the place with a big board, Mr. V. was himself blown over. One of the large planks he had for a walk to the barn was lifted about forty feet, and laid down in the same position. It was so heavy it took a big lift for two men to replace it, as it is 18 feet long, 14 inches wide and 3 inches thick. The outhouse there was also blown over and his buggy was rolled several times over.

WILL GO TO NEW MEXICO.

Samuel Bailer to go out of Business. Will Leave June First. The Bailer Clothing Store Will go out of Business.

The announcement was made this morning that Samuel Bailer, the well-known manager of the Bailer clothing store in this city had given notice of his withdrawal from business to take effect June first, and soon after that date Mr. Bailer will leave for New Mexico.

A reporter for the COURIER talked with Mr. Bailer and learned that the mission which takes him hundreds of miles from home is a business one and involves a position of great responsibility at a high salary. He will take the management of the interests of a New York capitalist who is largely interested in a rubber plant in New Mexico. Mr. Bailer met the gentleman in the east some years ago and has been repeatedly offered the position, but has never felt himself in position to accept it until the present time. Mr. Bailer's residence in New Mexico will be a permanent one. He will leave for his post of duty soon after June 1st. Mr. Bailer is favorably and well known in Auburn and his departure will occasion much regret, tempered however by the knowledge that the new position is a splendid recognition of his ability and that his success is assured. With the announcement of Mr. Bailer's withdrawal from business in Auburn comes the news that the Bailer clothing store in this city has decided to go out of business as soon as the stock can be disposed of. The Bailer clothing store has a long and honorable business record in Auburn and during years of business as one of the leading retail clothing houses of the city. Its proprietors are splendid business men and the people of Auburn regret to see them leave.

Auburn Summer Normal.

Waterloo Cyclone.

Last night's storm took a vicious turn about Waterloo. Charles Rempus' barn south of Dr. Farrington's in Waterloo, was blown to pieces, but strange to say, his cow, which was in the building, was not seriously hurt. The barn of Norris Williamson was destroyed and that of Robert Speer, near the Christian church. All over town trees and chimneys suffered. One at Mrs. Shull's near the U. B. church blew over and injured her dwelling. The tin roof on the Maxson store was rolled off and into the street, and part of the tin roof on the old Hale business building was torn off, as was also a part of the roof on Boozer's steel building south of the railroad. A big plate glass window in Boyer's store was blown to splinters and one in Dr. Darby's building on the corner. The awning of the DeKalb bank was blown away, and the old orchard east of town was badly wrecked. The barn on the old Baxter farm was torn to splinters. The storm was evidently an hour or two later than the one which hit Auburn, and a much worse affair. Probably later news will tell of much more damage.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters;' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50cts., guaranteed, at H. B. McCord's Drugstore.

The Ticket.

The men chosen at the democratic convention yesterday, are all good men, and no voter can find an excuse for not supporting every one of them. All are tax-payers and reputable and highly respected citizens. They are capable men and will be capable officers. They pay their debts and have no bad habits. The people have heretofore overlooked some of these essential points and condoned some bad habits. They suffered by it, now we have all good men. Let us give them every vote.

But, your honor, How could he help it?

WOMEN IN HOME

WHERE SUCCESS LIES.

SO far as a profession for women is concerned we come back at last to the fact that her success has been greatest along eternally feminine lines. No girl can be taught a better trade than housekeeping or sewing. Every year the price of plain sewing is higher and dressmaking climbs up into the clouds. The world is hungry three times a day, 365 days in the year, and has to be fed. The whole human race is on a still hunt for a good cook and a good place to board. These professions, carried on intelligently, are never overcrowded. "Oh," but you say, "look at the poor sewing women crying for work. Look at the boarding house keepers who fail!" True, but how did they do their work? Didn't you have to take your frock back time after time to have it fixed? Didn't it rip somewhere the first time you put it on? Was it done when promised? Was there ever anything fit to eat on the table of the boarding house keeper who failed? Was her house as neat as a new pin? Incompetent, incompetent! No wonder they failed. That was the cause of their downfall. The woman who takes pains to be particular, who is honest and conscientious in her work, succeeds. When you find a woman who is reliable, who gives you the worth of your money in her wares, no matter what they may be, you will find she has more customers than she can provide for.

Congressional Bride.

Mrs. Frank W. Mondell, the bride of Wyoming's only representative in Congress, is one of the most popular young matrons in Washington. Her father, Dr. Harris, was one of the pioneer settlers of Wyoming, and made a large fortune in mining and other interests. He gave his daughter every advantage of education and travel. She attended the common and high schools of her native city, and then came East, where she spent two years in fashionable finishing schools. Although from the same State, Representative Mondell did not meet Miss Harris until while serving his first term in Congress, and then met her at a theater party in Washington. The attraction was mutual between them, and a romance naturally followed.

MRS. MONDELL.

For My Lady Beautiful.

A few drops of tincture of benzoin dissolved in a cup of hot water will, if applied daily, make the skin firm, clear and cool.

Lemon juice is an old-fashioned but effectual remedy for freckles.

Bathing the face in warm milk is said to be refreshing and rejuvenating.

A clay pipe is a good curling implement and makes the most natural ringlets.

If powder must be used, dust a little pure talcum on the face, but don't rub it in.

A steaming hot flannel cloth applied to the cheeks produces a lasting and lovely glow.

A sponge bath of strong salt water is invigorating, and leaves one feeling well and hungry.

On retiring wash the face with hot water and a flannel cloth; in the morning bathe it with clear, cold water.

The hair should be washed every four weeks, at least. Salt in the water is a good tonic, and a beaten egg makes an excellent shampoo.

Some simple oil—almond or cocoa butter—will, if applied to the eyebrows and lashes, increase their growth and make them darker.

For the summer girl whose nose becomes easily sunburned sweet cream proves a good remedy. It is soothing, simple and easily obtained.

A Ship's Mascot.

Miss Dorothy Cramp, the beautiful 9-year-old daughter of Edwin S. Cramp, enjoys the distinction of being the first American girl to christen a foreign-built vessel in American waters. The vessel christened was the steamer Brisgavia, of the Hamburg-American Packet Company. The vessel was not christened when launched in Belfast, but it has lately met with serious accidents, and the captain wanted Dorothy for a mascot. There was little formality during the christening ceremony.

MISS CRAMP.

Behind the Times.

"What is your fad, Mrs. Newlywed?"
One of the up-to-date sisterhood said.
"Have you no elogy, ism, or cult,
Poet to annotate, quote, or consult,
Theosophical problem to chew,
Archaeological vein to pursue,
Science or sport that you chiefly affect,
Body of doctrine to probe or dissect,
Theoretical hurdle to vault,
Artist, or school, to exploit and exalt,
A sociological bent you may own,
With plans for extraction of bread from a stone?
No, you reply! Then explain, I implore,
What is the fad that you most adore?"
Blushing, the young wife raised her head,
"My hobby's my hubby, ma'am," she said.
—Paul Pastnor.

When Paying Calls.

One who is unaccustomed to making formal calls should keep in mind the point of leaving, and when the call is ended rise quickly and easily, shake hands with her hostess, making some pleasant, friendly remark as she does so, and go directly out. Naturalness is the most potent charm in anyone—man or woman. To stand at the door of the drawing-room and gossip after one has risen to depart, keeping the hostess standing and uneasy, while her other guests impatiently wait for a few words before bringing their visit to a close, is not only selfish but the height of ill-breeding. Noncompliance with accepted customs may be forgiven in a genius or a great hero, but an ordinary mortal must mind his "p's and q's" in this as in all other things connected with social usages.

Shun Long Engagements.

Ask a society girl how long she intends to stretch her engagement and she will reply: "Until my fiance positively refuses to wait any longer." Believing that she is wise not to hurry into matrimony, she makes the engagement just as long as she possibly can, says the Pittsburg Dispatch.

An engaged couple invariably grow tired of each other when the time is protracted. Their affection sinks into the commonplace, their love loses its freshness, its glamour or romance. The couple who are engaged for a long time very frequently quarrel and irritate one another by their selfish petty exactions and ridiculous demands. Under the irritable tirade of a woman the best man in the world becomes inattentive and indifferent. In a long engagement both begin too plainly to see the faults that startle into a cruel awakening. This often comes after marriage, but then the forebearance that comes with the close relationship helps to reconcile that.

Help for Thin Girls.

The young women who looks mournfully in the mirror upon the reflection of bony neck and thin arms may do much to remedy the trouble with little expense or effort. Olive oil is one of the most nutritious of food products, and a persistent and liberal use of salads aids materially in the acquisition of flesh. A salad of oranges and bananas, cut in small pieces and drenched freely in a French dressing, may be taken before going to bed without injury to the digestive organs. Vegetable salads should be included in the luncheon and dinner menu every day. Fish salads made of the more delicate, white-fleshed fish are excellent, and sardines form a valuable addition to the "beauty" bill of fare.

In Public Service.

The head of the postal department at Gibraltar is a woman, Miss M. Cresswell, who has occupied the position for ten years. She receives a salary of $2,740 per annum, being the highest paid woman in the postoffice. Miss Edith Shore, M. B., is a medical officer at the same postoffice.

Remember that even if your frocks get shabby there may still be a great deal of wear in them. First of all, see if the material will turn or if it will clean; but if both of these expedients are futile, then renovate it with some inexpensive stuff. Cut a pointed bodice into a round one and insert a smart silk front, with revers of the same material and cuffs to match. Run braid down seams that are getting shabby, and, to cover stains, make patterns of braid. If worn out beyond hope round the bottom of the skirt, cut it short for use for cycling or muddy weather.

The revival of the undersleeves is shown with some of the smart rigs. This is used with the jacket sleeve, which ends half way between elbow and wrists. This ends in a slight bell, or with a slightly-flaring turned-up cuff, and the undersleeve of the blouse is a bishop usually.

Talk About Women.

Mrs. Laura Holtschneider, of Buena Vista is the only "alderwoman" in Colorado. Her friends urge that she consent to run for Mayor, and should she yield to their request there is scarcely a doubt of her success.

Mrs. Grant, the widow of the General, has aged little during the last few years. She leads a very busy life and is at present collecting for publication a number of her husband's letters. Mrs. James G. Blaine is also collecting her husband's letters for publication in a biography.

Mrs. Henry N. Couden is the only person outside of members of Congress who is allowed in the Speaker's lobby while the House is in session. Her husband, Rev. Mr. Couden, is chaplain of the House and is blind. He is brought to the House daily by Mrs. Couden and remains until she comes for him.

Indiana has had for a long time a Union of Literary Clubs composed of both men's and women's organizations, with the presidency alternating each year between the two sexes. Now the various women's clubs have organized a State Federation and barred out all the men's clubs. There is said to be considerable feeling on the subject and some of the women refuse to desert Mr. Micawber.

Mrs. G. McCrea has been made landscape gardener for Lincoln Park, Chicago. She learned the business from her husband and after his death, being left with two children, she studied and fitted herself for her present important position. Of course she is infringing on some man's place, but there are the two little ones to be fed, clothed and educated and landscape gardening has some advantages over washing for a living.

WOMEN AS BEASTS OF BURDEN.

In One Section of Canada They Are Harnessed to the Plow.

Like the squaw of the American Indian, on whom her lord and master lays the task of taking the place of a beast of burden, the women of a colony of Russian settlers, who came to Canada a little over three years ago and located on the bleak prairies of the great Canadian northwest, are slaves of the most menial kind. Not only do they take the places of horses in plowing, but they also perform other heavy work that in most sections is reserved for lower animals and the men do the lighter work.

Plowing both spring and fall is done by "bees." The head of the family issues a call for a plow bee at his homestead on a certain date. The women gather in large numbers. They are buxom-looking women and ready to work. They arrive early in the morning, and are at first placed at a table and fed. The food is coarse, but substantial. At the conclusion of the meal preparations for the field are begun. The party is divided into three relieffs. To the beam of the plow is attached a long rope, into which are tied stout sticks equal to half the number of women in each relief. As draught animals the women go to their places, dividing on either side of the rope, and the day's work is begun.

WOMEN TAKE THE PLACE OF HORSES AT THE PLOW.

The owner of the land, holding the handles of the plow, gives a grunt. The women bend forward to the yoke, the plowshare enters the ground, and at a rapid rate the first furrow is turned over. For four hours each relief works. As fast as returned the women are privileged to go home. During working hours not a word is spoken. The women are as dumb as the animals they represent.

Last year the Canadian mounted police, in order to assist the impoverished settlers, gave them several small contracts for hay. In the execution of these contracts the women again played an important part. Harnessed to small wooden sulky rakes, they could be seen daily during the summer toiling up and down the prairie meadows harvesting the hay. The men did the loading into the police wagons.

WORSE THAN A WATERSPOUT.

British Forces in South Africa Suffer from "Sand Devils."

The English forces in South Africa have suffered severely during the dry season from the sand-storms, or "sand devils" as the natives call them, which rage frequently on the dry and dusty veldt. Just as sometimes pieces of paper and bits of litter are caught up by the wind on a street corner and kept twisting round and round in the air, so on the great African plains great columns of sand are raised high into the air, in shape and in motion like a waterspout. Sometimes the "sand devils" are driven at a high rate of speed by the wind, and people who get in their way come out of the interview looking and feeling as if they had been thoroughly polished with emery paper. With the coming of the rains, of course, the sand is laid and danger from sandstorms is over.

THE "SAND DEVIL IN A SOUTH AFRICAN CAMP.

The Siamang.

The gentle siamang is a gibbon and no monkey, says a writer in Blackwood's Magazine. In assemblies on the treetops live the siamang, whooping through the octaves, calling to their friends from miles away, and swooping off to meet them, racing steeplechases with the winds. I have seen, and hope to live and see again, a pack of the siamang going through the jungle—a long black arm and a small crumpled body swinging wildly from it like a pendulum run mad, then a suicidal fling, a crash in the covering green, and so they are gone. Tame they are the gentlest of creatures. The Malays catch the young ones and bring them to our doors, knowing that buy we must. It is not among the possibilities for a Mem to resist the forlorn small speechless thing, when it winds its long arms and fingers round her neck, and hides its black wrinkled face of an old woman, with round unhappy eyes, in the softness of her morning gown. Or it lurches across the verands on a pair of very bandy little legs, balancing itself with outstretched arms. But they always die. They who have weathered torrential rains under the open heaven die in captivity of consumption, and cough out their ill-comprehended souls like Christians, huddled in a blanket.

They Gradually Disappeared.

"Why don't you use after-dinner coffee spoons?" asked a woman at a first-class up-town restaurant of the proprietor the other evening, finding it somewhat inconvenient to use a large spoon with her small cup. "We did have them when we first opened," answered the proprietor. "We had six dozen, but they gradually disappeared until now only three are left, and we consider it more economical to use the larger spoons, for which people do not seem to have such a fancy." At many restaurants when a glass of claret or sherry is called for it is served in a tiny decanter. These miniature bottles are very attractive. They seem to appeal, as many small things do, to the taste of many people. One man who visits now and again many different restaurants boasts that he has over two dozen of these pretty little decanters. He doesn't say how he came by them, but he didn't purchase them.

Mechanical Curiosities.

The Le Dróz family, of Neufchatel, in Switzerland, were famous makers of mechanical curiosities. One of these was a clock, presented to the King of Spain, having a sheep and dog attached to it. The sheep would bleat in exact imitation of a live one, while the dog was placed in custody of a basket of loose fruit. If any one removed the fruit, he would growl, snarl, gnash his teeth, and endeavor to bite, until it was restored. Another was an oval gold snuff box, about four and one-half inches long by three inches broad, and one inch and one-half thick. It was double, as though one box were placed on top of another, with a lid for each. One contained snuff. In the other, as soon as the lid was opened, there rose up a very small bird of green enameled gold, sitting upon a gold stand. Immediately this minute curiosity shook its wings, wagged its tail, opened its bill of white enameled gold, and poured forth, minute as it was, being only three-quarters of an inch from the beak to the extremity of the tail, such a clear, melodious song as would have filled a room of twenty or thirty feet square with its harmony.

Some Big Fires in Europe.

In 1802 there was an enormous conflagration at Liverpool, which destroyed more than $5,000,000 worth of property. In the year 1700 over one-half of the city of Edinburgh was destroyed by fire. In 1865 there was a fire in Constantinople which destroyed 2,800 buildings, shops and bazaars. But Constantinople's greatest fire occurred in 1870, when almost half the peninsula on which the city is built was swept by the conflagration. No record exists of the number of houses destroyed on this occasion, but the value of the property lost was roughly estimated to exceed $25,000,000.

His Baby's Future Quite Apparent.

"Augh waugh!"

It was the baby. He had repeated this remark sixty times in the last hour.

Mr. Newleigh's hair, such as it was, stood on end.

"Gwow ahmb wowbdgow alwaugh!" added the baby, while people across the street got up and closed their windows.

Mr. Newleigh ground his teeth. "To think," he groaned, burying his face in his pillow, "that I should grow up to become the father of a railway porter!"—London Tit-Bits.

A man who lacks sense, bitterly objects to it in others.

TRUTH ABOUT APPENDICITIS.

Some Mistaken and Popular Notions Corrected.

The vermiform appendix, inflammation of which constitutes appendicitis, is a curious little offshoot from the large intestine near the point where it is joined by the small intestine. It is a hollow tube about as thick as a lead pencil, from an inch to several inches in length, which communicates with the cavity of the large intestine, but is closed at its free extremity. Nobody knows definitely what its use is, and many think it has no use at all.

It is a popular belief that inflammation of the appendix is often caused by the lodgment in it of a grape seed or some similar little body, but as a matter of fact this very seldom occurs, and no one need deprive himself of a delicious and nourishing fruit from any such fear.

There are probably very few persons of middle age who have not had appendicitis, but fortunately they did not know it. It is only when the inflammation becomes severe, and involves the parts about the appendix, that violent symptoms appear, and this occurs in only a small proportion of cases.

The disease is more frequent with the young than with the middle-aged or old.

In mild cases the only symptom is a slight dull or colicky pain in or near the right groin. When the inflammation is more severe, or extends to the neighboring parts, the symptoms become more pronounced. There is a sharp pain in the abdomen, signs of dyspepsia—loss of appetite, nausea or vomiting and bowel disturbances—are present, and there is often slight fever.

In the most serious cases a sudden, violent pain occurs, there is a marked fever, and the patient is depressed and presents all the signs of being very ill. Hiccough is often a distressing symptom. The treatment of appendicitis is one of the points upon which doctors disagree. Some believe that in nearly every case a cure will follow rest in bed, a milk diet, cold applications to the abdomen, and sedative remedies. Others say that an operation is necessary in every instance, and that this should be performed the instant a diagnosis of appendicitis is made, before serious symptoms appear.

The proper course, here as elsewhere, is doubtless the middle one, for in many cases an operation is absolutely necessary to save life, while in others recovery will take place without subjecting the patient to this serious risk. In any case a sufferer from appendicitis is in danger, and should be under the constant care of his physician.—Youth's Companion.

CLOSED DOORS.

Little Korea Affords No Field for American Enterprise.

In pursuance of the policy now pursued by the Consular Service of ascertaining the state of foreign fields as opportunities for American labor, capital and enterprise, Horace W. Allen, Consul General to Seoul, Korea, writes for the consular reports that Korea now employs no foreign military officers as advisers or instructors in its army, and is not likely to do so, owing to an agreement made with Russia when a large staff of Russian officers were allowed to leave. By this agreement Korea announced her ability and intention to dispense with further assistance of that kind.

The many requests from young men who have recently left the service of the United States asking for positions in connection with the Korean army are futile. There is no demand for their services in Korea. There is no demand for foreign advisers to the Korean Government. Although two Americans who held such positions have recently died, their places have been filled, and there is no further demand for assistance of that kind. The newspaper report that one of these advisers had been receiving a salary of $100,000 gold per annum is entirely misleading; such positions pay from $150 to $250 per month. There is no demand for employes on the railroads in Korea. Japanese control and operate the steam railroad, and Koreans and Americans are employed on the electric railroads, I believe the positions are all filled. Employment with the mines would have to be secured before coming to Korea. The agent of the mines in America is H. A. Noble, representative of the Oriental Consolidated Mining Company, San Francisco. Prospectors cannot operate in Korea, and there is no employment with the mines other than on wages. I am told the mining company has no lack of applicants.

Birds that Are Fleet of Foot.

Professor Goetke delivered an address in Berlin the other day on the results of his experiments upon the sped of birds' flight made in Helgoland last autumn. Now that all birds of passage are again upon the wing these experiments have a general interest. The rooks pass over Helgoland every fall in endless flocks on their way to their winter homes. Goetke found their course directed due west. The first column noted appeared at 8 a. m. and continued until 2 p. m. The head of this line reached the English coast at 11 a. m. and the last at 5 p. m. The birds thus covered the eighty geographical miles between Helgoland and England in three hours, or at a speed of fifty-five meters (180 feet) per second.

More interesting still are the "fed-tails." They winter in the Nile country and as far south as the Indies, and, passing over Helgoland on their summer trip to Norway, are captured by hundreds. They fly by night and are almost unknown in Greece and Germany. Hence it is concluded that they make their journey from the Nile to Norway in a single night. There are 400 long geographical miles between Egypt and Helgoland and to make the journey in a spring night of nine hours' length would require a speed of ninety-two meters (302 feet) a second, while carrier pigeons, as is well known, rarely exceed thirty meters per second.

HE'S A ROYAL COWARD.

Prince Adolphus of Teck Brings Disgrace on British Army.

"A Royal Coward" is the title which the Duke of Teck, brother-in-law to the Duke of York, England's future King, has succeeded in adding to his princely name in the South African war. Among all the recent scandals of the British war office none has aroused so much public indignation as the disgraceful part which the member of the English royal family played at the skirmish of Koorn Spruit.

At Koorn Spruit the Duke of Teck was escort officer for a convoy of artillery. He allowed his men to walk into an ambuscade, and then turning his horse's head, he fled at a mad gallop, permitting 450 men and six guns to fall into the hands of a small detachment of Boers. The Prince, according to reports prevalent in military circles, founded on official information, is not only accused of gross negligence, but is suspected of equally gross cowardice. The surprise prepared by the Boers on this occasion was one for which a brave soldier, alive to his duty, should have been prepared. Teck was neither. When the word first came to him, "We are trapped!" his womanish terror, it is said, was pitiful. Not one of his men but would have stood his ground, ambush or not. But the leader, terror-stricken, turned, leaving the greater number of his men in the trap where his own folly had led them, and taking with him a small guard for his own protection.

PRINCE ADOLPHUS OF TECK.

It is not likely that there is another such instance in the recent history of British arms. Teck and his men did not draw rein until they had fled 1,200 yards, where the untaken guns were unlimbered and a perfunctory attempt was made to shell the Boers, who quickly got out of range with their booty. Nor were the guns followed up, though it is known that recovery was feasible.

The only sequel, says the Chicago Inter Ocean, to this piece of egregious cowardice has been the victimizing of Gatacre. Teck was major in the First Life Guards. An untitled Britisher holding such a position and committing such a disgraceful act would have been promptly shot. General W. F. Gatacre was the Duke of Teck's commanding officer. In dispatches to the war office, at least those made public, the entire blame for the disgrace of Koorn Spruit was laid upon Gatacre by Lord Roberts.

Danger of Night Parties

"I abominate night parties for children," said a prominent city physician recently, while speaking of the care of the young, "and I believe every physician does. It is not so much the exposure and the eating in the night, but the breaking into the sleep habit. Equally bad is it for children to study in the evening. It gorges their brains with blood, and if they sleep they dream. I had a little patient of 12 years who was wasted and nervous and whose dreams were filled with his problems. It was a marvel and a pride to his parents that the youngster worked out hard problems in his sleep such as he failed to master when awake. But he came near his final problem. I locked up his books at 4 o'clock. He must not touch one after supper; he must play and romp and then go to bed. He is now robust. You cannot emphasize too strongly the mischief of children's night study."—Chicago Chronicle.

Only Women Can Pronounce It.

The state Besjukovschtschina in Russia is probably the only place in the world that is run entirely by women. This state is made up of seven villages, each presided over by a mayoress, the whole under the superintendence of a lady named Suschka, who acts as president. There are women magistrates, women preachers, women policemen—in fact, every capacity in the state is filled by women. The roads are made by women and women sell milk and deliver letters. If you want to bring an action against your neighbor in this State you go to a woman lawyer, and if there is anything in your house to be stolen then a burglar of the weaker sex steals it. No place of any importance is filled by a man.

Checking Ticket Speculators.

There is a stringent ordinance in Atlanta, Ga., against speculation in tickets to places of amusement, and one of its violators came to grief during the recent engagement of Richard Mansfield in that city. The speculator was arraigned before the city judge, the case proved against him and he was promptly fined $100 and sentenced to thirty days in jail. The latter part of the sentence was afterward remitted. Mr. Mansfield expressed pleasure on being informed of the sentence. He said his own agents charged the public for admission as much as they were able to pay.

A SENSIBLE HOME.

Laws of Common Sense Should Be Followed in Designing Homes.

In designing homes we must follow the laws of common sense and not sacrifice interior comfort to the satisfaction of displaying an outside show, which is offensive to the cultivated eye. If all houses were to be designed as carefully as conscientious artists paint pictures, the result in the appearance of our towns and cities would be eminently more satisfactory than it is to-day. The most convenient houses are those which are planned with a special reference to the needs of the occupants, and so as to avoid all useless expenditures; such houses are the most pleasing in point of aspect for the simple reason that they clearly show the purpose for which they are built. It should be borne in mind that it costs no more to make a house look attractive than it does to make it look ugly. The amount of labor and material which is required in one instance costs, practically, no more than the other. An attractive outline is no more expensive than one which is ugly. It is true that a great many more houses are ruined as to their appearance from having work piled upon them than by having too little. Most of our houses are ugly because they are aggressive; because they have crude, heavy porches, out of keeping with the design of the building; clumsy towers; ill proportioned dormers and balconies, and other excrescences that are ugly.

The view and plans shown herewith illustrate a neat and attractive home, well arranged and of moderate cost. It can be erected in most places complete for from $1,800 to $2,000. The convenience of the interior is apparent on examination of the floor plans, and the whole needs but little explanation. The rooms are of good average size for a dwelling of this class, and are well connected. The total size is 32½x65 feet, including the woodhouse in the rear. Cellar is provided under the sitting room and bed room. The height of the first story ceiling is 9½ feet and the second story 8½ feet. The foundation is of stone, and the outside walls of the superstructure are sheathed and papered and covered with siding. The painting is three coat work; the inside is plastered and finished in natural color white and yellow pine throughout.

A worthy object in every man's life, and the first one to be gratified, ought to be the full possession of a home of his own. A shelter, no matter how humble, if it is his own, is preferable to one that is rented. There is no labor so pleasant, none so satisfactory, as that which leads up to this possession of a home.—E. A. Payne.

Fortune in Postage Stamp.

It is of interest to stamp collectors to know that the most valuable stamp in the world is one lately discovered—a one penny postoffice Mauritius, for which recently £1,000 was paid in London. W. H. Beckitt bought it from a stamp dealer, who placed a value of £1,500 on it at first.

It will be of further interest to know what prices have been paid for stamps of this class, which are very rare and are at long intervals on the market. A Mr. Tapling, whose collection is now owned by the British museum, paid £85 for a "one penny postoffice" in 1882. In 1890 £200 was asked and obtained for a two penny stamp of the same class at the London exposition. In 1893 Stanley Gibbons paid for a pair of unused ones and two penny stamps £680. In 1897 Jules Bernichon paid 49,000 francs for a pair of these stamps in Paris.—New York Herald.

She Was Lonely.

An American girl who was engaged for service by a West Philadelphia family, being directed to leave a candlestick and candle in the lower hall for the master of the house, amused herself by paring a potato into candle shape and sticking a clove in it for a wick. This she made ready with several matches for her employer, who, having turned out the gas, spent five minutes in vainly trying to light the potato candle. Then he stumbled upstairs in the dark and asked his wife to explain. She called upon the maid servant, who replied that it was so lonely there she wanted to be turned off the next day, when she would get her whole week's wages, and so she adopted the candle expedient.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

New York.—So far as legitimate business interests are concerned the feeling of nervousness occasioned by the recent closing of several steel mills seems to have worn away. The iron and steel trade itself is still in a somewhat unsettled condition, however. The export trade is still large, and earnings of both railroad and industrial companies continue to compare favorably with last year. The stock markets have been irregular. Trading has been largely professional in character, the public showing little disposition to take the long side so soon after the shake-out. There is also a feeling that with the approach of the time for opening the presidential campaign there will come a further material decline in prices. The money markets continue easy. Call rates in New York have been quoted at 2 to 2½ per cent, and there is an abundance of time money obtainable at 4 per cent for the year. The Chicago rates also have been shaded this week, 4½ per cent being now generally quoted on call loans.

Chicago.—The most noticeable feature of the grain markets during the week was the marked change of sentiment as regards wheat. For some time back the feeling generally has been bearish. Crop prospects have been most cheery and with the time for May deliveries drawing near it has been felt that the natural course of the market was downward. Thursday the first evidence of a change in sentiment was shown when France was found to be in such a disastrous condition regarding her crops. Her minister predicted that because of injury from various causes the country would be compelled to depend upon foreign sources for upward of 32,000,000 bushels. Despite optimistic reports of growing crops it has been known all along that Michigan, Ohio and Indiana were below normal condition. Kansas is complaining of chinch bugs and in some parts of the State the Hessian fly has appeared. Liverpool has been bearish, but reports that Argentine arrivals from the interior are falling off. Because of the uncertainty of the conditions trade has been quiet. The price of wheat is about 13 cents below the average, hence there is no great inducement to sell. Corn continues to show the firm undertone that has characterized that market for so long. Too much rain has fallen to be of benefit to the crop, the truth being that planting has been hindered considerably by the wet weather. Stocks are light and there is good demand for the article, especially from across the water.

PURSUIT IS ABANDONED.

British Who Were After Boers Return to Bloemfontein.

London advices say that the flood of newspaper dispatches describing the recent operations throws no light whatever upon the present position of affairs or upon the great question as to when the main advance is to begin. The Standard's announcement that Gen. French's cavalry are returning to Bloemfontein is clear proof that there is no further hope of catching the retreating Boers and the London papers are beginning to display impatience at the practical failure of the elaborate operations of last week.

The London Standard says: "It is disheartening to find that these elaborate maneuvers have had so small a result." The Daily Chronicle remarks: "We are reluctant to criticise Lord Roberts, but it is impossible to shut our eyes to the fact that during the last ten days we have gained very little from our enormous display of force."

Without doubt these operations have been of a very exhausting nature and will entail further delay. The Bloemfontein correspondent of the Times, writing after the Paardeberg affair, describes Lord Roberts' army as a "wreck," because it was without horses and without transport. The Bloemfontein correspondent of the Post speaks now of the urgent need at present and always of more horses. There is very little news from other quarters.

Col. Dalgety's force at Wepener numbered 1,700. His losses during the siege were thirty killed and 149 wounded. The Daily Mail publishes a statement from Col. Long, who was blamed for the loss of guns at Colenso, that in advancing the guns as he did he merely obeyed orders and that the staff was quite ignorant of the proximity of the Boer positions.

The sudden decision of the Boer peace delegates to visit America is attributed to the fact that the Government of the Netherlands, after sounding all the European capitals, told them they had nothing to hope from Europe.

ATTRACTIVE MENUS.

What Passengers on the New York Central Are Given.

A gentleman whose travels have covered the United States and all of continental Europe recently remarked that meals on the New York Central are served with all the refinements of gastronomic art. A seasonable bill, prepared by a competent chef, and served by perfectly trained waiters, with table settings of the latest design, sums up the requirements of an enjoyable meal, and is synonymous with the aims of the New York Central's cuisine.

The passenger department has undertaken the operation of dining and buffet cars, and no expense will be spared to make this a prominent feature of the service. The bills are frequently changed, and the aim is to conduct the dining car and buffet service on the most liberal lines. The following is a sample bill which is offered at the present time:

Dinner—Shrewsburys; Cream of Celery aux Croutons; Consomme Celestine; Planked North Carolina Shad; Potatoes Parisienne; Queen Olives, Celery, Sliced Tomatoes; Lobster a la Newburg in Cases; Fresh Mushrooms on Toast; Peaches a la Conde; Claret Sherbet; Roast Ribs of Prime Beef; Roast Spring Turkey, Cranberry Sauce; Bermuda Potatoes, Cauliflower au Gratin, New Beets a la Creme, Green Peas; English Snipe, with Watercress, Chicory Salad; Plum Pudding, Hard or Brandy Sauce; Neapolitan Ice Cream, Assorted Cakes; Fruit, Water Crackers, Camembert Cheese, Edam Cheese, Coffee demi-tasse, Tea. Meals, one dollar. No charge for coffee demi-tasse served in buffet, smoking or observation car.

The drinking water served on the New York Central Dining Cars is from the celebrated Polaris Springs, at Boonville, on the R., W. & O. Division, in the foothills of the Adirondack Mountains, and is absolutely pure.—Albany Argus.

CROPS HURT BY RAIN.

Wet Weather Does Considerable Damage in Many States.

The most unfavorable features of last week, as given by the crop division of the weather bureau, were the excessive rains in the Southern States and the unseasonable low temperatures over the central and southern plateau and Pacific coast regions. A large part of Texas, including the region of the great flood of June-July, 1899, has received from two to more than seven inches of rain, washing out and inundating crops to a great extent over the central and southern portions of the State. Too much rain has generally retarded farm work in the States of the Missouri valley and middle Rocky Mountain slope.

Eastward of the Mississippi river corn planting and preparations therefor have progressed rapidly, planting being in progress as far north as the central portions of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio and in West Virginia and Maryland. Some corn has been planted in southern Iowa, and planting will be general the coming week. On account of wet weather little corn was planted in Nebraska, and planting has been retarded in Missouri and Kansas. In Kansas and Texas and portions of Mississippi, Arkansas and Alabama much replanting will be necessary as a result of overflows.

Further improvement is generally reported in the condition of winter wheat, although in Michigan and Wisconsin farmers are continuing to plow up wheat fields for other crops. The crop is now heading as far north as Tennessee, Arkansas and Oklahoma. In central and northern California high winds have been unfavorable, but the crop has been improved by rains in the southern part of the State. All reports indicate that spring wheat is coming up finely and making excellent growth. Seeding is now practically completed except in North Dakota.

CANAL BILL IS PASSED.

House Adopts Measure by a Vote of 225 to 35.

After a stormy debate which developed much bad blood and nearly provoked several physical encounters the Nicaraguan canal bill passed the House late Wednesday afternoon by the remarkable vote of 225 to 35. Democrats and Republicans vied with each other in an effort to get on record in favor of the waterway that is to connect the Atlantic with the Pacific. The only party division during the two days' debate was over the committee amendments substituting the word "defense" for "fortifications." The Democrats voted almost solidly for fortifications, claiming that the Clayton-Bulwer treaty was dead. The Republicans stood by the committee on interstate and foreign commerce. A motion to recommit the bill with instructions to report back another bill leaving the selection of the route to the President was buried under an adverse majority of 52 to 171.

The passage of the Nicaragua canal bill by the House does not mean that the bill will become a law. A Washington correspondent declares that the Senate will not pass it at this session, and may not consider it. Mr. Hepburn knew when he secured the consideration of his bill in the House that the canal commission did not regard it as good policy to pass his bill until there are satisfactory negotiations with Nicaragua and Costa Rico to secure the right of way. These negotiations are now going on, and this Government is not ready to declare in favor of the Nicaragua route until it has assurances that it can secure the territory through which the canal is to run on favorable terms.

The Senate, the correspondent says, will not pass the bill, because it is a part of the treaty making power, and while it refuses to ratify the Hay-Pauncefote treaty or amend it, it cannot consistently enact legislation which it claims is in violation of the old Clayton-Bulwer treaty. The men who opposed the Hepburn bill in the House assert that the modification of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty is the first proper step to the canal legislation.

TWO HUNDRED REBELS KILLED.

Filipinos' Twenty Victims at Catubig Avenged by Comrades.

Further details of the fighting at Catubug, Island of Samar, in which twenty Americans were killed and two wounded, have been received. The American garrison of Catubig, Island of Samar, consisting of thirty men belonging to the Forty-third regiment, was attacked by rebels. Twenty of the Americans were killed. The remainder were rescued.

The Americans were quartered in the Catubig Church, which the enemy, numbering several hundred men, surrounded and fiercely attacked. The Americans fought for two days and then the rebels managed to ignite the roof of the church and it burned away and finally fell upon those inside the edifice. The walls remained intact, however, and were used as a shelter by the besieged Americans for three days longer, the enemy attacking the building on all sides at once. The Americans continued firing from the windows and doors of the church, and did great execution among the Filipinos. It is estimated that over 200 of the latter were killed, many dead bodies being removed from the scene of the fighting.

After five days' resistance by the Americans a lieutenant and eight men arrived from Laoan and engaged the besiegers, who thereupon retired. The fortunate arrival of these re-enforcements prevented the annihilation of the American force intrenched in the church, who had repeatedly declined to surrender when ordered to do so by the Filipinos. The ten survivors were without food, had little ammunition and were physically exhausted when relieved.

This fight has encouraged the Filipinos, who are now acting in an aggressive manner and threatening that section of the coast, particularly the town of Catarma, whence the garrison will probably be withdrawn to Laoan.

Perils of the English Language.

Imagine yourself a foreigner striving to master the construction of the English language. Perhaps you may be gazing at a number of vessels on the water, and exclaim, "See what a flock of ships!" You are at once told that a flock of ships is called a fleet, and that a fleet of sheep is called a flock. It might also be added for your future guidance that a flock of girls is called a bevy, while a bevy of wolves is called a pack; yet a pack of thieves is called a gang, and a gang of angels is called a host; but a host of porpoises is called a shoal, and a shoal of buffaloes is called a herd. Still, a herd of children is called a troop, but a troop of partridges is called a covey; a covey of beauties is called a galaxy, while a galaxy of ruffians is called a horde; further, a horde of rubbish is called a heap, yet a heap of oxen is called a drove; a drove of blackguards is called a mob; but a mob of whales is called a school; a school of worshipers is called a congregation, while a congregation of engineers is called a corps; a corps of robbers is called a band, though a band of locusts is called a swarm, and a swarm of people is called a crowd; a crowd of pictures is called a collection, but a collection of money is called a hoard, and a hoard of people is called a company; a company of ministers, however, is called an assembly, and an assembly of soldiers is called a muster. "Stop, stop!" methinks I hear you cry. "I cannot remember half of it."

Family Life a Bore.

"Family life bores the modern American girl," writes "An American Mother," in the Ladies' Home Journal. "She boasts that she has climbed to higher levels. She has done with needles, pots and pans, and—cradles. The world is her field of action; it is waiting for her; its crops are white unto the harvest. If she has money she usually begins to reap by going to Europe. She is there to-day by the thousands and tens of thousands. If the modern girl marries, her life is but little altered. She drifts here and there like rags of seaweed on the heaving waves. She does not want a home unless she has money enough to have two or three, in which, with a corps of servants and an English housekeeper in command, she can have house parties the year round. If she have money she lives in a huge hotel; if poor, in a cheap boarding house. Her children are brought up on the stairs. There is not much of the cachet of the altar about that home for them. Presently she, too, goes abroad. She tells her friends that she is on the verge of nerve prostration, which is usually true, and that Europe is the only chance of cure, which is not true. Her husband stays at home to drudge for the money which she spends."

A Pretty Booklet.

"The best of everything" is the keynote of the success of The Chicago and Northwestern Railway. In the equipment and furnishings of its magnificent passenger trains the best of everything is sumptuously used for the pleasure and comfort of the traveling public. The literature of the Northwestern line is also in keeping with this well-known motto. The passenger department has recently issued a little brochure describing scenes along the route of the famous electric lighted Northwestern Limited, which is an artistic gem. This little booklet contains a number of elegant half-tone engravings—glimpses of principal cities, nature's freaks and scenes between Chicago and the Twin Cities. It is the latest and handsomest effort of the printers' and engravers' art in modern bookmaking. Four cents in stamps, sent to W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth avenue, Chicago, will secure a copy of this beautiful souvenir.

SEE TO THE WALLS.

A Danger in Schoolrooms and How to Prevent It.

Owing to the gathering of so many different classes of persons therein, the interior walls of churches, school houses, hospitals, etc., are apt to become repositories of disease germs unless preventive measures are taken. These walls should always be coated with a clean and pure cement, such as Alabastine, which is disinfectant in its nature and more convenient to renew and retint than any other wall coating. The first cost is no greater than for inferior work, while renewals are more easily and cheaply made.

Exports.

A comparison of New York's share of the total export trade two decades ago with its present trade shows a loss of 19 per cent. last year, against a gain of 150 per cent. for Boston, 66 per cent. for Philadelphia and 240 per cent. for Baltimore.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury.

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

Sold by Druggists, price 75c per bottle.

BILE BLOAT

Puffs under the eyes; red nose; pimple-blotched, greasy face don't mean hard drinking always as much as it shows that there is BILE IN THE BLOOD. It is true, drinking and over-eating overloads the stomach, but failure to assist nature in regularly disposing of the partially digested lumps of food that are dumped into the bowels and allowed to rot there, is what causes all the trouble. CASCARETS will help nature help you, and will keep the system from filling with poisons, will clean out the sores that tell of the system's rottenness. Bloated by bile the figure becomes unshapely, the breath foul, eyes and skin yellow; in fact the whole body kind of fills up with filth. Every time you neglect to help nature you lay the foundation for just such troubles. CASCARETS will carry the poisons out of the system and will regulate you naturally and easily and without gripe or pain. Start to-night—one tablet—keep it up for a week and help the liver clean up the bowels, and you will feel right, your blood will be rich, face look clean, eyes bright. Get a 10c box of CASCARETS, take as directed. If you are not cured or satisfied you get your money back. Bile bloat is quickly and permanently

Admiral Dewey, after a three day's grand time in Chicago and vicinity went to St. Louis. He received a warm welcome there, as well as many cities on the route.

—Mrs. Tillie Elson of Fairfield is here at the home of J. C. Elson assisting in the care of the little son of Martin Elson who had an eye removed at Elkhart recently.

A frightened mother in Chicago, last night saved her children from burning by dropping them out of the second story window. Strange as it may seem the fall injured them but little.

There was frost in a part of the Michigan fruit belt yesterday morning, and all the strawberry crop in the south end of the belt was injured. But a farther north it appears all right.

—Broom corn will probably be a profitable crop this year, although prevailing prices will hardly be maintained. A number of Northern Indiana farmers will plant a large acreage to this crop.

—The funeral of T. J. Saxton will be held at the Presbyterian church tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. Henry Arlen officiating, assisted by Mrs. Mary Ehlers. Interment in Woodlawn cemetery.

—In the sheep-shearing festival at Purdue university this week a Laporte county man clipped the fleece from two sheep with shears in nine minutes, winning first prize. Other good records were made.

—There was a barn-raising out at George Abel's yesterday, about fifty being present to lend their help. The frame was put up without accident of any kind and the affair was "topped off," as it were, by a fine supper.

—The Auburn high school athletic association will meet the Fort Wayne high school athletic association in the annual field day contests on the Fort Wayne grounds, on Friday, May 25. An interesting meeting is looked for.

—Experienced farmers who have made a test of raising spring wheat in lieu of winter variety, say that the culture of spring wheat cannot be made a success in this latitude. The rust strikes the growing wheat and ruins the crop.

—A correspondent says farmers should notice their apple and peach trees. There is a small worm working upon them, the same that stripped so many trees of their leaves last year To rid them of these pests the trees should be sprayed.

—Mrs. Belle M. Ocker of Chicago was here today looking up some matters connected with the Joseph Ball estate in Philadelphia. The indications are that Mrs. Ocker and other heirs will receive a large sum of money from this estate which amounts to several millions.

—The brilliant star seen in the western evening sky is Venus. Few people are aware that this star is now visible to the naked eye any clear day. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon stand in the shade and look directly overhead. You can easily see Venus in the zenith, shining with a pale white light. At noon it may be seen three hours east of the meridian. The entire difficulty of seeing it is in knowing just where to look.

—Be careful to return the postoffice mail matter not belonging to you that you may receive through mistake. A new postal rule that went into effect is that any person who through carelessness or any other reasons takes mail from the office that belongs to another and fails to return the same is liable to a fine of $500 or one year's imprisonment. This applies to newspapers thus taken from the postoffice or other mail matter.

—The date for the county Sunday school convention is set for Wednesday and Thursday, June 13 and 14, in the M. E. church at Corunna.

—It has been currently reported that J. B. Stoll of South Bend would be a candidate for vice-president, but he refuses to allow his name to be used.

—Marion Cramer gave the court house lawn a thorough rolling today and when the grass gets its growth it will be one of the nicest court-yards in the state.

—Henry Fretz of Richland was here yesterday at the meeting of the Sunday school committee, and is very enthusiastic over the prohibition state convention at Indianapolis.

—Editor Olds attended the county Sunday school meeting yesterday, but Editor Willis was detained at home as he is pension agent and many papers have to be made out just now.

—Debating societies wishing to be down to the minute will tackle the question whether the president or congress has supreme authority over Cuba, while it is under military control.

—The big Zimmerman factory has been made bigger this week. They put up a storage building 30x50 at the north end of the blacksmith shop, and will use it to store their buggy wheels.

—An Auburn man feeds his horse oats from a box that has a hole in the bottom. He says when a greater portion of the oats has run out the horse imagines he has eaten it all and gets just as fat.

—The funeral of the child of James Farver, east of Auburn, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. in the Maginnis school house. Interment will take place in the Woodlawn cemetery. Rev. J. D. Brosy will officiate.

—Since our last report four couples have been licensed to wed, as follows: Harry C Karle and Eva Kline, Earl S. Saxton and Blanche Lahnum, Simon Krieger and Grace McClish, John H. Reinoehl and Cora Stomm.

—Columbia City Post: Joseph Clark who has just finished taking the enumeration of children of school age in Columbia City, informs us that he finds 420 girls and 420 boys upon the eligible list. A "tie" of this kind, we venture the assertion, has never before occurred in any other city or town in the United States.

—Alderman Cochran of the Third Ward has been "figgerin" for a day or two to see where he came out on a certain box of cigars which he left in care of a friend. Mr. Cochran contends that the joke is on Cook Ford, but the latter says he can prove an alibi and we rather incline to the opinion that the new alderman will have to bear the burden.

—Messrs. Potter, Brandon and Douglass, who last night ended their service as town councilmen, are entitled to much credit for the faithful performance of their duties. The office is one in which the salary received is far outweighed by the time spent and the enemies made, but these gentlemen retire with a record they have no reason to be ashamed of.

—During his trip through the west I. M. Zent met a Mr. Miller, who was at one time employed as operator at the Junction. Since going west some years ago Mr. Miller has risen considerably in the railroad business and is now division superintendent of one of the roads running into Salt Lake. The gentlemen and their wives enjoyed a pleasant visit.

—Over in Wilmington township, and in perhaps others, gravel used on the roads is hauled from three to five miles. Allowing two trips a day for each team, this makes road-making rather expensive, and it has been suggested that it would be a good plan to utilize a few traction engines to haul the gravel in wagon trains and the idea is one worthy the consideration of the trustees.

—The new forestry act offers inducements for the starting and maintenance of private woodlands as forest reservations, such lands being appraised for taxation at only $1 per acre. To secure benefit from the exemption the forest must consist of not less than 180 trees to each acre. A description of the land must be filed with the county auditor for record and an examination must be made by him before appraisal.

—At the Wabash depot in Ft. Wayne last evening the "Immortal J. N." was stricken with an attack of heart failure and in falling struck his head upon a slot weighing machine, cutting a slight gash on the top of his head. The patrol wagon was called, and he was taken to Hope hospital, where he spent the night. It was necessary to carry him to the wagon, but after reaching the hospital he was able to walk to his room.

—G. B. McGeogan of Ft. Wayne, deputy revenue collector for this district was here today and issued a manufacturer's license to Koons and Crew, the new men at the Bishop cigar factory and they gave their bond. On Monday, they will begin work. So far, they were not at liberty to make a cigar although they could sell. There sales were very brisk and foreshadow a good business. We hope to see the new firm prosper.

The above questions apply to every individual and must be answered by some member of the family who is competent to make such answers, the "head" being preferred. Read the questions carefully and have your answers prepared when the enumerator visits your home so that you can answer readily and correctly.

The enumerator will commence to take the census June 1, 1900.

G. A. R. Officers.

The new officers chosen by the Indiana department, G. A. R., at Indianapolis yesterday, were as follows:

Commander—David E. Beem, Spencer.

Senior Vice Commander—A. R. Seward, Indianapolis.

Junior Vice Commander—John Gordon, Argos.

Medical Director—Dr. J. E. Sterrett. Logansport.

Chaplain—the Rev. H. E. Butler, Warsaw.

Council of Administration—Benjamon Starr, Richmond; Theodore Wilkes, Shelbyville; A. P. Miller, Wabash; William E. Shilling, Indianapolis; Henry R. Root, Michigan City.

Representative-at-Large— Admiral George Brown, Indianapolis.

Alternate-at-Large—Governor James A. Mount, Indianapolis.

The representative to the national encampment from the Twelfth district is J. N. Metzger of Fort Wayne.

Mrs. Laura S. Burr of Anderson was elected president of the W. R. C., and Mrs. Thesta Ross of Indianapolis vice president.

All Renominated

The old fad of opposition to a third term seems to be played out. All the Indiana members in Congress have been renominated without a break and unanimously, save Judge Miers of the Second district, and he will be nominated unanimously in two weeks. This makes everyone of the present delegation a candidate for re-election, except Mr. Faris. The four democrats are candidates for a third term.

Of the republican members, Mr. Steel is a candidate for the eighth term; Mr. Hemenway and Mr. Overstreet for the fourth term.

Mr. Watson, Mr. Crumpacker and Landis for a third term. Mr. Faris of the Terre Haute district, who is serving his third term, is the only Indiana member not renominated.

Sensation at Hicksville.

A special to the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette says:

AUBURN, IND., May 17.—The arrest of Mrs. Vinna Moore, Chip Wright, Dr. L. E. Winn and Ora Gilbert, tonight, is an entirely new and separate development in the case of the murderers of Policeman Rath, of Hicksville, last November. Two men, Frank Zuber and Ed. Johnson, have been sentenced for life to Columbus for the murder, and Floyd Rumbaugh is awaiting trial. A Pinkerton detective has been working on the case for ten days past, and has one more suspect who will be arrested when found. The three men arrested and the one gone were all drunk on the night of murder, in a dark alley, and it is said people heard them say they were going to "do" Rath on account of his hostility to the club rooms then in operation in the town of Hicksville. Policeman Rath had at the time of the murder a warrant for Wright for assaulting him, which he was going to serve the day following.

Dr. L. E. Winn is a brother of the Hon. John Winn of Defiance. Mrs. Vinna Moore, who is arrested, is a respected lady and no cause can be given for her arrest. The three men were taken to Defiance late tonight. Gilbert was caught at Sherwood, O.

Aged Citizen Killed.

About noon Thursday Wm. Burns, an aged resident of Wilmington township, started from his home for Butler, accompanied by his wife, who has also passed her eightieth year. They were driving a horse that was usually quiet; upon approaching the Copeland crossing of the Wabash road the animal became frightened at a train and in making a short turn dumped the buggy and its occupants into a ditch alongside the road. Mr. Burns was almost buried in the muck at the bottom of the ditch, and when taken out life was found to be extinct. No bones were broken, but it is thought Mr. Burns was smothered in the muck of the ditch. The horse also tumbled into the ditch where it floundered about for some time before help could be summoned. Mrs. Burns was thrown out onto the road but escaped serious injury.

Mr. Burns, who has been a resident of the county for over thirty years, was about 83 years of age, and besides his wife leaves nine children.

Beware of a Cough.

A cough is not a disease but a symptom of Consumption and bronchitis, which are the most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated as soon as this cough appears are easily cured. If it is not beneficial it will not cost you a cent. For sale by H. B. McCord.

Not So Worse.

An amusing story is told of a certain little girl who is in the habit of using considerable slang. One day recently when she had been quite naughty, her mother said: "Now, Dottie, you must go and shut yourself up in a dark closet and ask God to forgive you, and stay there until he does." Into the closet she went, but in about a minute she appeared with a radiant face. "Why," exclaimed her mother, "what did you come out so soon for?" "Oh, that's all O. K.," replied the girl. "I just told God I was sorry I got so gay, and asked him to please let me off easy and he said: "Oh, don't mention it, Miss Jones, you're not so worse."

Our Saturday Evenings.

CHAPTER XXXII.

Perhaps no better material for a Saturday article can be found than the romantic story of Frances Slocum, in whose honor a monument was unveiled Thursday, May 17, on a lovely knoll near the Mississinewa, about a mile above the old-time stage village of Peoria in Miami county. There is much to be told and we must be brief, not forgetting that the story has been told in various forms all over the United States for the 130 years and been repeated in all English speaking countries of the world. Yet with all this telling and repeating, some minor errors have crept in and some interesting points overlooked.

THE STORY.

The family of Slocums are of English origin, and three brothers were among those who were the early settlers in Rhode Island in 1638. Near Warrick, in that colony, Frances was born in March 1773, and soon after, her father Jonathan Slocum, with his wife and a family of several children, settled at Wilkes Barre, Pa. In 1777 and 1778, the British had stirred up trouble between the Indians and the white settlers in all the middle colonies, and roving bands of Indians from Ohio, Indiana and Canada, caused a great deal of trouble. On July 5, 1778, occurred the terrible massacre of Wyoming, and settlers generally drew near the rude forts or stockades for safety. November 2, a party of Delawares suddenly rushed up to the cabin of Mr. Slocum, during his absence, killed two of the boys and caught up little five-year old Frances and carried her away. They were only prevented from carrying off a smaller child, the baby, by the quick action of a neighbor woman who snatched it up and got safely into the stockade. The family were nearly crazed by the knowledge that the little girl was a captive among savages, and the father, and later the brothers traveled far and near to find her, as they believed she would be given to the British at some post. But the search was in vain. It appears that her captors hurried her around with them to various points in the middle colonies and Canada. It is believed she was with the Indians located at and near Fort Wayne, during the troubles in which Harmer and St. Clair met their defeats, and the later one in which the Indians were defeated by Wayne. She was given an Indian name and married an Indian named She-po-can-ah, a Miami chief. When peace followed the battle of Tippecanoe, they located at the site of the present home, first in a cabin on the river bank, and later built a log house on higher ground across south of the present road. In this house she died March 9, 1847. Her only children, two daughters, both married ministers. The oldest died four days after the mother; the other married Rev. Peter Bondy and died in 1877, leaving several children. They lived on the home farm, where Peter's son, Judson Bondy, still resides. It was his daughter and a daughter of his brother, who drew the cords to unveil the monument.

HER DISCOVERY.

In 1837 George W. Ewing, the Indian trader, who traveled among them from Fort Wayne all along the Wabash, happened along there one evening, and asked to stay all night. He noticed the woman of the house seemed somewhat different from Indian women in general, and especially that her arms were white, when her sleeves were pushed up. As he understood their language he asked her about her people. She could remember, that when a child, Indians had taken her from her home in Pennsylvania. But the time or place she could not give, nor could she give the name of her family. Ewing became satisfied that she was a white woman, and he wrote a letter describing her, to the postmaster at Lancaster, Pa., and this was published and being widely read, recalled to the people there, the story of the captive girl. The Slocum brothers and a sister came to Peru and met her in a store, on the site of the present Beares hotel, and had a long conference. One of them had, when she was a child, mashed one of her thumbs with a hammer, and the nail had never grown on again. This proved her identity, and they tried to have her return with them. This she would not do, though her husband had long since died, and she was living with her daughter, Mrs. Bondy. She said she had always lived with the Indians, and added, "I cannot, I cannot, I am an old tree. I was a sapling when they took me away. It is all gone past. I am afraid I should die and never come back. I am happy here. I should never be happy with my white relatives. I am glad enough to see them, but I cannot go."

James B. Fulweiler, an old citizen of Peru, still alive, was present at this meeting and remembers clearly what was said. The brothers and sisters went sadly home, and the aged woman returned to her home and the Indian settlement, dying there ten years later. The land where she lived, was given her by government, when the bulk of the Indians went west. To those who remained she was always a favorite and a person of great prominence.

THE MONUMENT.

Her grave, which with those of several relatives and other Indians, is on the same high ground, but a few rods west of the house in which she died, was never marked with an appropriate monument. But her romantic story and the prominence of her family, now scattered all over the country, as well as the prominence of herself and her descendants among the Indians, decided the propriety of giving her a suitable monument. In addition to the Slocums and Bondys, prominent people in Peru and elsewhere took an interest in the matter. Notably, among the Peru people, should be named Hon. James F. Stutesman, who has been active from first to last and of great use to the carrying out of such a plan, where all the white relatives lived at a distance. And to him, the many visitors who came to do honor to her, are indebted for many favors.

When the plan was started, an association was formed, with Hon. Elliott T. Slocum of Detroit, chairman, Dr. Charles E. Slocum of Defiance, secretary, Mrs. Mary Slocum Murphy, of Converse, Ind., as treasurer, and these with George Slocum Bennett of Wilkes Barre, Frank Slocum of Minneapolis, Frank L. Slocum of Pittsburg, Joseph A. Slocum of Brooklyn, N. Y., Rev. Arthur G. Slocum, president of Kalamazoo College, Rev. Wm. F. Slocum of Montour Falls, N. Y., as well as many others of the family name, and those who were connected by marriage, from all the states from Rhode Island to the Missouri were present and assisted at the unveiling, even a granddaughter of the woman who picked up and saved the little babe at the time Frances was stolen, was present, and seemed to feel an interest almost as great as the others.

It was a strange thing to see these people of the same blood meet, many of them for the first time, and be introduced to each other and describe the especial branch by which he or she was connected with the family tree. There is a marked similarity of feature and build in all of them. And this is shown somewhat in the one picture of Frances, taken from an old daguerreotype, though her Indian life had changed her a good deal. Her descendants show Indian blood plainly, though evidently people of education and refinement. The Bondys are Baptists, and in the house here, are evidences of the comforts usual in well-to-do farmers' houses.

A stand for relatives and speakers was erected on the ridge, west from her old home a few feet, and near the small burial grounds, which are now enclosed in iron fence. Here, at noon, the meeting was called to order by the president, and the invocation, a most eloquent one, was made by President Slocum of Kalamazoo College. The chief address was by Dr. Chas. E. Slocum of Defiance, which was a most exhaustive and carefully prepared article, largely historical and reminiscent. It will be of great value to the family and to history. Speeches were made by others, chiefly old people who had known Frances Slocum, and Mr. Stutesman made a brief talk. Then came the unveiling. All day a snow-white drapery of muslin had covered the monument, though the curious crowd managed to keep its folds aside enough to show the inscription. When the moment arrived, two well-bred and neatly dressed young ladies in spotless white, stepped, one to each side, each caught a light cord, and a quick jerk by each, loosed the cord at the top and the drapery fell gracefully to the ground, revealing the monument which is an artistic one of white bronze and about eight feet high above the base. The two young ladies were cousins, great-granddaughters of Frances Slocum, Victoria Bondy and Mabel Ray Bondy. A singular thing is, that Mabel with her marked Indian features has lovely red hair, and it is known that Frances Slocum had hair of that shade, though her husband and all her descendants had dark hair.

The attendance was immense, and greatly relieved the fears of Mrs. Joseph Slocum of Brooklyn, who had been somewhat uneasy, and had remarked, "What if we came 900 miles to attend this and found people cared so little that only a few were present." When she returned to Peru she was happy, and so were the other relatives. Not less than 5,000 were present, nor less than 1,000 vehicles of all sorts.

The ground is ideal for an Indian cemetery; the day was beautiful, and all came from assisting in a noble enterprise, pleased and happy. We should not forget the day, nor the kindness of the Peru people, especially Mr. Stutesman. And to Dr. Chas. E. Slocum, we were all indebted for many favors shown.

Cold Steel Or Death.

"There is but one small chance to save your life and that is through an operation," was the awful prospect set before Mrs. I. B. Hunt, of Lime Ridge, Wis., by her doctor after vainly trying to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. He didn't count on the marvellous power of Electric Bitters to cure Stomach and Liver trouble, but she heard of it, took seven bottles, was wholy cured, avoided surgeon's knife, now weighs more and feel better than ever. It's positively guaranteed to cure Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles and never disappoints. Price 50c at McCord's drug store.

Baking Powder Economy

The manufacturers of Royal Baking Powder have always declined to produce a cheap baking powder at the sacrifice of quality.

The Royal is made from the most highly refined and wholesome ingredients, and is the embodiment of all the excellence possible to be attained in the highest class baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price, and is cheaper at its price than any similar article.

Samples of mixtures made in imitation of baking powders, but containing alum, are frequently distributed from door to door, or given away in grocery stores. Such mixtures are dangerous to use in food, and in many cities their sale is prohibited by law. Alum is a corrosive poison, and all physicians condemn baking powders containing it.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 100 WILLIAM ST., NEW YORK.

Had Lots of Money.

A dispatch from Muncie to the Fort Wayne Sentinel say:

"The latest rumor in the Neely case is that $60,000 in cash arrived in this city, assigned to Neely or his friends. It is positively known that $35,000 was received here from the statement of an officer of one of the local banks.

"The first package to arrive contained $15,000, and it is asserted this was invested in stock of one of the Joplin mines. Such being the case, it is reasonable to suppose that Neely has a sufficient amount of money to put up a strong defense.

"The night before his arrest at Rochester, secret service men arrived in Muncie and sent the local police to awaken the agent of one of the express companies and demand of him the privilege of searching his office. These secret service men are said to have had positive information that $60,000 was sent out of the island of Cuba by Neely."

Governor of South Dakota.

Krause's Headache Capsules are splendid; never failed to cure my headaches and save a world of suffering. I am recommending them everywhere. The druggists of Aberdeen, Hecla and Britton, Marshall county, all promised me to get them in stock. I give your address to every sufferer I meet. I am going to Colorado in June, and I shall do you good among the miners, nearly all of whom suffer from headache in that high altitude. Yours, etc.,

Prosperity.

Lifted a mortgage a week ago—
Me an' John!
Lifted her, but today, you know,
'Nother's on!

A Skull and Chain.

There is a moldering skull, a rusty chain, a mysterious passage—these things have just come to light at Lower Brandon, the colonial home of the Harrisons, on the James river, but the explanation is still wanting. Miss Gullie Harrison made the mysterious discovery while hanging a picture on one of the walls. Her fingers touched a hidden spring and a panel slid back, revealing a dark passage.

Lights were procured and the recess appeared. It led down a slight decline for some distance. Back in the farthermost corner the light suddenly gleamed on a human skull, and above it was revealed a rusty chain, dangling from a hook in the wall. There was nothing else but a pile of dust nearby which vanished when touched, seemed to denote that other bones of a human skull had once been there.

The Harrisons have lived at Lower Brandon since colonial days, but the present generation had no knowledge of the existence of a secret passage. Nor was there any reason to suppose that a prisoner in years gone by had mysteriously disappeared. The Virginia Harrisons are closely related to ex-President Benjamin Harrison and also to Mayor Carter Harrison of Chicago. Some months ago the latter came to Virginia and made a visit to the birthplace of his ancestors. It is supposed that the secret passage in the mansion was used by the inhabitants as a place of refuge when the Indians made their raids.

A Night Of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she could not live till morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night. "All thought she must soon die from Pneumonia, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, saying it had more than once saved her life, and cured her of Consumption. After three small doses she slept easily all night, and its further use completely cured her." This marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at McCords drug store.

Mafeking Relieved.

News reached London yesterday through Boer sources that Mafeking, the first of the British towns that were put in a state of siege early in the war, had been relieved. Several small armies have been pushing that way for many months, but were generally driven back. It causes great rejoicing in England.

Envoys Deny the Story.

Messrs. Fischer, Wolmerans and Wessels, constituting the Envoys from the South African Republic and Orange Free State, who arrived in New York recently, commissioned by their Governments to endeavor to induce the United States to use its influence in the establishment of peace in South Africa, were questioned regarding the statement from London that a cablegram from Cape Town asserted that they had advised surrender should their countrymen be defeated on the Vaal River. Severally and collectively the Envoys vehemently denied that they had given any such advice, and they declared that they were unalterably opposed to surrender.

Behind Prison Bars.

Havana special: Warrants were issued Thursday evening for the arrest of E. P. Thompson, the Havana Postmaster; W. H. Reeves, Deputy Auditor of the island, and Edward Moya and Jorge Mascaro, Cuban clerks in the stamp department, and by 7 o'clock all were lodged in the Vivac, the Tombs of Havana. This was done under the advice of the postal inspectors, who had arrived. It is considered now that Reeves is equally guilty with Neely. The arrest of Thompson caused great surprise in the city. It is looked upon as the precursor of many other arrests.

A Fiend's Work.

A telegram from Koping, Sweden, reports that as the steamer Koping was passing the Prins Carl a man sprang upon the deck of the latter vessel and shouted, "If any one comes near I will shoot." At the same moment a woman was seen hanging over the ship's side, shrieking for help. The man had escaped in a boat. When the Prins Carl was boarded it was found that twelve men on board had been shot, six of them, including the captain, being dead. The rest were found locked in their quarters. One of them has since died. The murderer is being pursued.

Locomotive Explodes.

Two men were killed and seven injured, three fatally, by the explosion of the boiler of the locomotive attached to southbound passenger train No. 21, on the Illinois Central Railroad at Dubois, Ill.

The dead are: Charles Ricke, engineer, Centralia, Ill; Tom Wright, Odin, Ill.

The injured: Sam Ascoff, section-hand, will die; Fred Crawford, section hand, will die; John Hampton, section hand, will die. Three other section men and a colored porter were seriously injured.

Drank Wood Alcohol.

Three men and one woman are dead at South Fork, near Johnstown, Pa., and another man will die as a result of drinking wood alcohol. Lawrence Smith, Peter Broek, Joe Poltoszinski and the latter's mother are dead and Joe Smith is in a critical condition and may die at any time. The drinking was done on the green at South Fork, and the whole crowd, who were Poles, drank freely of the stuff. All died in convulsions.

American Scouts Suffer.

A dispatch from Vredefort says Hazel's American scouts, serving with the Boers, have suffered more than any other corps. They lost thirty-seven killed, wounded and captured out of 100 in the last six weeks. One of their feats was the storming of the British position at Tobaberg, wiping out the British detachment and capturing six men and officers.

Many Killed.

Gen. McArthur confirms the reported engagement with the insurgents at Catubig on April 15. Of thirty-one men in the garrison, Gen. McArthur reports nineteen killed and five wounded. Over 200 of the attacking party were killed. The streets were covered with dead insurgents.

Took Boer Prisoners.

A dispatch from Lorenzo Marques says that Commandant Eloff (grandson of President Krueger), with a patrol, entered Mafeking, whereupon Colonel Baden-Powell opened fire on the burghers, killing seventeen of them and taking Eloff and ninety of his men prisoners.

Heavy Rains Save Fisher.

Menominee (Mich.) special: Fisher was saved from total destruction by the heavy rains. The total losses are estimated at half a million.

Elopes with Married Man.

Miss Maud McDaniel, whose father, R. P. McDaniel, was minister to Chili under President Cleveland, eloped from her home at Braidentown, Fla., with H. G. Reed, manager of the telephone system at that place. Reed has a young wife and one child.

Jumps from Fourth Story.

In an insane attempt to go to the home she had not seen for years, demented Mamie Clark, aged 40 years, jumped from a fourth-story window which was slightly raised for ventilation at Longview asylum at Cincinnati and died thirty minutes later of her injuries.

FACE DEATH FROM BALLOON.

Boys Accidentally Caught in the Ropes Hauled Skyward.

People stood helpless and viewed with horror an accident that occurred at Pottsville, Pa., when the lives of an aeronaut and three boys were in imminent danger during an exhibition at the Lowery circus. David McDade, an aeronaut, was preparing a trapeze act from a bar attached to a balloon and parachute. Among the thousands near him were three boys. The balloon was inflated and at a word from McDade the guy ropes were severed. In an instant the big airship left the earth and simultaneously there was an outcry of horror from the crowd as the three boys were discovered dangling among the ropes. In their eagerness to watch the ascension the boys had unconsciously stepped among the ropes attached to the ship. The balloon had risen probably twenty-five feet when two of the boys squirmed through the meshes of rope and dropped to the ground unhurt. Soaring up with the big ship, however, rose the third boy, Wallace Cartwright, aged 19 years, until he appeared but a mere speck in the sky. Young Cartwright clung with his hands to the dangling rope with tenacious energy. When he had risen 1,000 feet the hot air in the balloon became exhausted. The boy hung directly above McDade's head, and the latter was fearful lest the boy, if he fell, would strike him and both would be dashed to death. By promises and threats the aeronaut induced Cartwright to cling to his flimsy support until the airship dropped safely upon a field.

THREE KILLED IN A STORM.

Two Men and a Woman Victims of the Elements at St. Paul.

Three persons were killed and two others were seriously injured during a severe wind and rain storm at St. Paul. The wind played havoc with the telephone wires between that city and Minneapolis. The poles of the telephone companies' lines for two blocks were strewn over the tracks of the interurban trolley line, thus blocking traffic for the night. Sidewalks were displaced by the windstorm, and buildings in various parts of the city suffered by wind and lightning in shattering of chimneys, windows, etc. The day had been extremely hot and sultry. Patrick Sexton, senior member of the firm of Sexton & Co., wholesale cigar dealers, had been at Como park with his four children, and they were driving home when the storm broke. Driving down Dale street toward their home, they were right in the path of the fiercest storm, which dislodged the sidewalk at the west side of the street and crashed into Mr. Sexton's carriage, killing him almost instantly, and more or less injuring his daughter, who was in the seat with him, as well as his 10-year-old son.

SLOW DEMAND WEAKENS PRICES.

Unsettlement in Building Trades—Cereal Shipments of the Week.

Bradstreet's says: "The trade situation this week may be summed up in the phrase: Inactive demand and weaker prices. While in many respects the industrial situation is easier than it was, the unsettlement in the building trades continues marked, the reflex action being exhibited in unsettled demand for building material and weaker prices for lumber and for many products used in the building industry. In speculative markets dullness has been the feature, wheat, after considerable steadiness, weakening on the favorable Government crop report. Wheat, including flour, shipments for the week aggregate 3,480,574 bushels, against 4,537,022 bushels last week. Corn exports for the week aggregate 4,638,140 bushels, against 3,411,015 last week."

Shot Down in Arkansas Town.

At Pine Bluff, Ark., J. S. Estes shot and probably fatally wounded Dr. J. O. Cook. Samuel Files, a bystander, received a wound in the leg from Estes' revolver. Estes fired six shots, three of them taking effect in Cook's body. The shooting is the result of a quarrel of long standing.

Populist Nominations Made.

Bryan and Towne were nominated by regular Populist national convention at Sioux Falls, S. D., the plan to leave second place vacant pending action by Democrats being rejected. Middle-of-the-road Populists at Cincinnati nominated Wharton Barker for President and Ignatius Donnelly for Vice-President.

Textile Unions to Manufacture.

The American Cotton Company, with a capital of $1,000,000, has been incorporated. The incorporators are officers of five big textile labor unions. The labor leaders will be directors of the corporation.

Chinch Bug in Kansas Fields.

Kansas oat and wheat fields are alive with chinch bugs. Many fields of oats have been ruined by these pests. They have also attacked the wheat fields, but the growth of the plant is so advanced that no damage has resulted.

Locomotive Fireman Killed.

By a collision of freight trains on the Lackawanna Railroad near Scranton, Pa., William Eschenbach, a fireman of one of the trains, was killed. The two engineers and other trainmen escaped unhurt.

Big Fire at Camden, N. J.

Fire which broke out in the Farmers' market house, Fifth and Federal streets, Camden, N. J., destroyed that building, ten stores and about fifty small dwellings, causing a loss of $125,000 and rendering homeless about 250 persons.

Absorbed by Bridge Trust.

Eastern advices state that the entire plant and business of the Gillette-Herzog Company of Minneapolis will pass into the hands of the American Bridge Company. The consideration is understood to be $1,000,000.

Jeffries the Victor.

In the fastest, prettiest and closest heavyweight ring battle ever fought in New York James J. Jeffries decisively defeated Jim Corbett, once champion of the world himself, after twenty-two rounds of scientific fighting.

Japanese Crown Prince Marries.

Cable dispatches from Tokio announce that Yoshihito Harunomiya, the heir apparent to the Mikado of Japan, has been united in marriage with Princess Sada, a pretty little daughter of the great house of Fujiwara.

Strike of Chainmakers.

The chainmakers employed at the works of J. C. Schmidt & Co., York, Pa., ninety-two in number, went on strike. A demand for an increase of 10 cents per 100 links was made and refused.

Trains Crash in Tunnel.

Two heavy freight trains collided in a tunnel on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in Philadelphia. Two trainmen and five tramps are known to be dead. The property loss is estimated at $185,000.

Tax on Heirs Valid.

The United States Supreme Court rendered a decision holding the inheritance tax law to be valid and constitutional.

Attempt to Burn Duluth.

A desperate effort was made to burn the business portion of Duluth, Minn. Some unknown person started five fires in less than two hours, burning one man and five horses to death and endangering over $300,000 worth of property. In a livery stable John Larson, a saloon attache, was burned to death, and five horses owned by the Hamm Brewing Company were burned.

WILD RIDE IN A TORNADO.

Texas Girl Has a Thrilling Experience, but Escapes Death.

To be blown more than one-fourth of a mile by a raging tornado is something remarkable, even though the victim were torn all to pieces and killed, but to be blown a quarter of a mile surrounded on all sides by trees, houses, timbers and all the other debris that a tornado gathers unto itself in its wild flight, carried through the air at seventy miles an hour, and, despite all this, to escape even the slightest bruise or scratch might be called miraculous. That was the experience of Miss Millie Milton in the tornado that passed over parts of Denton County, Texas. When she was picked up by some neighbors her body was apparently lifeless, her respiration was labored, and her pulse was slow. Medical assistance was procured, and restoratives were applied, but they availed nothing. Three days after her experience she began to regain her senses, only to lose them again in a delirium which it was feared would cause her death. At last reports she had recovered consciousness sufficiently to talk coherently.

FIND THE ISLANDERS STARVING.

Crew of a Pacific Bark Reports Desperate Conditions in Palmerston.

Letters have been received from the bark Empire, which sailed for Adelaide, South Australia. These say the vessel called on the way at Palmerston island, midway between Tahiti and Samoa, and found the people starving. The island is seldom visited except by traders from Baratonga. Elihu Williams, a trader who owned the island, had died of starvation. His son and the rest of the people were reduced to desperate straits for food. Adelaide sent out a relief vessel.

MURDER IN OHIO TOWN.

Mob Tries to Lynch the Slayer of a Young Farmer.

A murder, followed by an attempted lynching, created great excitement at North Bloomfield, Ohio. John Burton, a prominent young farmer, was killed by Lon Atkins, a patent medicine vender. Burton was struck with a gas pipe and then shot. Atkins fled, but was caught as he was boarding a train. He was landed in jail, despite the efforts of a mob of 200 to lynch him.

Town Wiped Out by Fire.

Fire started in the big lumber and cedar yards of the C. H. Worcester Company at Fisher, Mich., at noon the other day, and at night the town was in ruins. The loss will be over $200,000, partially insured. The C. H. Worcester Company of Chicago, which owned almost everything in the place, is the heaviest loser.

Suburban Railway Compromises.

At a conference held between the officials and employes of the Suburban Railroad Company, the only system in St. Louis not controlled by the St. Louis Transit Company, an amicable adjustment was effected and the men have returned to work. The union received full recognition.

Bank Robbery Frustrated.

Six men blew open the safe of the Farmers' Bank at Sunbury, Ohio, and in doing so blew the entire rear wall out of the building. The safe, as well as the building, was wrecked, but the noise of the explosion aroused the people and the robbers escaped empty handed.

Sealing Schooners Do Well.

The sealing schooners have made a wonderfully good catch on the west coast this year. Should the strikes on the revenue cutters continue they are in hopes of doing still better, as they will have Bering Sea all to themselves for a few weeks to come.

Fatal Accident to Fireman.

While responding to an early morning blaze engine No. 15 of St. Louis ran against an iron post supporting the guard gates at the railway crossing, Broadway and Poplar street, and was overturned. Driver Siebert was hurled from his seat and killed.

Senator Clark Resigns.

Senator Clark of Montana has announced his resignation from the United States Senate, and a few hours later he was reappointed by Acting Governor Spriggs.

Captured After a Battle.

Estelle and Murphy, the burglars who broke jail at Marysville, Kan., and murdered Ed Roberts at Dunlap, were captured on a small island in the Neosho river, four miles south of Hartford.

Six Killed in a Train Wreck.

A wreck occurred on the narrow-gauge road between Lordsburg and Clifton, N. M., in which Engineer Schlottman and Fireman McAfee were killed. Four tramps are also reported among the dead.

Russia Gets Land in Corea.

Another extensive Russian purchase of land in Corea has been disclosed at Port Chin Nan, on the west coast.

In the Senate on Thursday the case involving the seat of Mr. Clark of Montana was postponed until Tuesday. Mr. Gallinger addressed the Senate at length on his resolution, declaring that "the present phenomenal prosperity of the country is due to the policy of protection as embodied in the Dingley tariff law." Bill appropriating $1,250,000 for the erection of a public building at New Orleans was passed. Joint resolution concerning certain Chippewa Indian reservations in Minnesota, the project being to preserve forests on the reservations as a national park, was passed. It creates a commission to investigate the question whether it is practicable and desirable for the United States to create a national park upon and within the lands known as the reservations of the Mississippi, Chippewa, Leech Lake, Winnebagoshish and Cass Lake Indians in Minnesota, the said lands comprising an area of about 830,063 acres, including Leech, Winnebagoshish, Cass and numerous smaller lakes, together with the Mississippi and other rivers and streams, comprising about one-fourth of the entire tract as water area. Eulogies on the late Representative Baird of Louisiana were delivered by Senators Caffery, Chandler, Berry, Sullivan and McEnery. The House by the very narrow margin of two votes unseated Mr. Crawford of North Carolina, a Democrat, and seated in his place Mr. Pearson. The minority resolution declaring the sitting member entitled to the seat was defeated by one vote.

After an all-day discussion in the Senate on Friday an agreement was reached to vote on the armor plate section at 3 o'clock, May 12. During the discussion a notable speech was delivered by Mr. Lodge upon the necessity of building up the United States navy without delay. Mr. Daniel presented an extended argument in support of the immediate construction by the Government of an armor factory, while Mr. Allison opposed the project of a Government factory on the score of economy. In the House Mr. Esch (Wis.) called up and had passed the bill to amend the law so as to provide for the commutation of travel and subsistence allowances of discharged officers and soldiers. He explained the bill proposed to allow a uniform rate of 4 cents per mile for officers and enlisted men. The House then went into committee of the whole to consider private pension bills and broke all records, passing 180.

On Saturday the Senate by a close vote rejected the proposition to erect, without reference to the price at which the Government could secure armor plate for its warships, an armor plate factory. The vote upon the direct proposition was 22 to 24, and subsidiary amendments were rejected by about the same vote. When the committee's proposition was about to be voted upon a filibuster was organized, the quorum of the Senate was broken and the question is still in the air. During the debate Mr. Chandler delivered a sensational speech, in which he charged that the Government had been defrauded in the adoption of the Harveyized armor. He declared a similar fraud was proposed in the attempt to force the Government to adopt the Krupp armor. Mr. Spooner and Mr. Hale made notable speeches deprecating the war talk Friday by Mr. Lodge. Neither the Senator from Wisconsin nor the Senator from Maine was fearful that we might become involved in difficulty with Germany on account of the Monroe doctrine. Mr. Hoar protested against the "wretched imperialistic business" and the talk that this nation had only recently become a "world power," asserting that it had been a world power since the war of 1812.

The Senate on Monday passed naval appropriation and "free homes" bills. The House passed the general deficiency appropriation bill. The bill carried $3,839,021 and was passed substantially without amendment. The general debate was devoted principally to political topics, the feature being a severe arraignment of the administration by Mr. De Armond (Mo.).

On Tuesday the Senate received the resignation of Mr. Clark of Montana. Devoted the rest of the day to consideration of the bill of Mr. Ross, providing for civil service in the country's new island possessions, refusing, by a vote of 10 yeas to 35 nays, to indefinitely postpone the measure. The House sent to the Senate the military academy bill, the last of the general appropriation measures, and agreed that the bill providing a civil government for Alaska should next be taken up.

In the Senate on Wednesday Mr. Bacon spoke at length on his resolution directing the committee on relations with Cuba to make an investigation of the conduct of financial affairs of the island. The following measures were passed: House bill repealing the provision of law allowing merchandise passing through the United States from any foreign country to be transported free of duty, so far as the Mexican free zone is concerned; a resolution offered by Mr. Lodge calling upon the Secretary of the Treasury for information in regard to the influx of Japanese laborers into the country and whether there had been any violation of law; bill granting a pension of $100 per month to the widow of Gen. Lawton; bill for the erection of a public building at East St. Louis. The House passed the Senate bill to incorporate the American National Red Cross. No progress was made with the Alaskan code bill owing to the inability of the two sides to agree as to the time to be allowed for general debate. The conference report on the District of Columbia appropriation bill was returned after extended debate.

POSTAL FRAUDS GROW

ARE SAID TO EXTEND THROUGHOUT ALL CUBA.

American Officers Amazed at the Ramifications of the Alleged Robbery—The Havana Postmaster and Several Subordinates Placed Under Arrest.

Further investigation into the defalcation in the department of posts in Cuba has brought to light a shortage in the Havana postoffice, and Postmaster Thompson has been placed under arrest. Deputy Auditor of the Island W. H. Reeves and two of the Cuban stamp clerks have also been arrested, and more arrests are likely to follow. The frauds are more extensive than was at first supposed. It is stated that there is a shortage of $8,000 in the Havana office. Some of the men are believed to have been implicated with the ring in handling the stolen stamps.

The ring supposed to have been headed by Neely probably made its thefts through the stamp channel. They represented stamps destroyed at $100,000 more than actual value, and then secreted that amount in new stamps, which were deposited in the place of money every month when the returns came from the island. Balances were thus kept correct, stamps taking the place of money in the vaults. When the auditors examined the sales of stamps from Matanzas and other stations the amount was found much larger than that credited of cash or stamps on hand.

The military authorities are now getting returns from all stations of stamps sold to compare with Neely's books. In this way the approximate amount of the alleged defalcation will be found. Neely could have put up a strong defense that his balances are right and that it was simply a mistake in crediting sales if his confederates had not confessed and turned over $5,000 in stamps. It appears that the frauds ramified in almost every possible direction. Even the rented boxes have been made a source of illegitimate gain. Every additional revelation increases the amazement of the Americans in Havana.

Mr. Thompson, in telling of his offense, signed a sworn statement in which he says that Sept. 16 last, being in need of money, he took from the money order funds $435, giving his memorandum as a receipt for the same. When the inspections were held Mr. Thompson ordered a clerk in charge of the money order department to place remittances received that day, which would not have to be accounted for until the following day, sufficient to cover the amount of his receipt, which was therewith withdrawn until after the inspection. This was kept up until April 7, when the special agents unexpectedly discovered the receipt, which Mr. Thompson then paid.

It is asserted by lawyers that on Mr. Thompson's own statement he is liable to conviction for embezzlement, according to the provisions of the postal law, which are very explicit.

Postmaster General Smith to a Washington correspondent said that the dispatches from Havana and other publications concerning the defalcations in the postal service there are very much exaggerated. That a considerable amount of money has been stolen is, he says, unfortunately true and a thorough investigation is in progress, but the disclosures up to date do not justify the sensational reports that are in circulation. It is asserted that the prosecution of the offenders will be carried on with all possible energy.

MEMORABLE BATTLEFIELDS.

Historic Contests Fought at and Near Fredericksburg, Va.

There is a bill before Congress providing for the creation in Virginia of a national park, embracing the battlefields adjacent to Fredericksburg. The park is to embrace the area on which were fought the great battles of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, the Wilderness and Spottsylvania Court House, also Marye's Heights, Hamilton's Crossing, Salem Church, Laurel Grove, the Bloody Angle, Tod's Tavern, the Po and Ny rivers.

Troops from every State, North and South, were here arrayed in battle to the number of at least 500,000, and more men were here engaged than in any battle in the world's history. The losses in killed, wounded and missing on both sides aggregated 129,838, to wit: Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, 1862—Union loss, 12,353; Confederate loss, 4,576. Chancellorsville, May 1 to 4, 1863—Union loss, 16,030; Confederate loss, 12,281. Wilderness, May 5 to 7, 1864—Union loss, 37,737; Confederate loss, 11,400. Spottsylvania Court House, May 8 to 18, 1864—Union loss, 26,461; Confederate loss, 9,000. Of the aggregate of 129,838, the Union loss was 92,581, while the Confederates lost 37,257. In the National Cemetery on Marye's Heights, the largest in the nation, there lie buried 16,500 Union soldiers, and frequent additions are made from the exhumations on the battlefields.

Fredericksburg is an historic spot. Capt. John Smith, within the limits of what is now Fredericksburg, fought the Indians in 1608. Here Washington's boyhood days were spent, and from Fredericksburg he went to join the army of Braddock. Near the city was opened the first iron mine ever worked in America, from the product of which the cannon and cannon balls used in the revolutionary war were made.

Side Lights on the Boer War.

What struck one of the special correspondents with Lord Methuen's force invalided home was the uncanniness of the whole thing. There is no pomp of war, no stirring music, no gay uniforms, and, strangest thing of all, no visible enemy. What you see from the standpoint of the British staff is a number of men clad in khaki dodging their way up the hill, making for cover wherever possible. Two or three of them suddenly drop, perhaps one gets up and presses forward again. The others lie where they fell, dead or sorely wounded. As the Boers always fire from cover and use smokeless powder, there is nowhere sign of them.

A story comes from South Africa which speaks well for the constancy of the British soldier. Among the wounded brought in one day from Potgieter's drift was a man of scanty clothing who held something in his closed hand. He had kept his treasure in his hand for some eight hours. He showed it to the sister at the hospital. It was a ring. In explanation he said: "My girl gave me this ring, and when I was hit I made up my mind the Boers should never get it, so I kept it in my hand ready to swallow it if I was taken before the stretchers could reach me."

In shelling Ladysmith the Boers knocked off regularly for meals—the luncheon interval being 11:30 to 12 for riflemen and 12 to 12:30 for gunners.

COUP BY CLARK.

Resigns His Seat and Named for the Vacancy.

W. A. Clark, practically expelled from the seat given him in the United States Senate by the Montana Legislature, because members of that body were bribed in his support, asks for membership in the upper house on the appointment of the Lieutenant Governor of Montana. Tuesday Senator Clark announced in the Senate that he had sent his resignation to the Governor of Montana. Tuesday night the coup developed, when he was appointed by Acting Governor Spriggs to fill the vacancy created by his own resignation, which was announced just in time to prevent the Senate from considering a motion to act on the committee's report to expell him.

The appointment by Lieut. Gov. Spriggs provides that Mr. Clark shall serve until the next Legislature shall elect his successor. Senator Clark's resignation was filed early in the day with the Lieutenant Governor.

Lieut. Gov. Spriggs has been a partisan of Senator Clark during his candidacy for the senatorship and since. Gov. Smith, a partisan of the Daly people, left the State two weeks ago for California to attend to some mining cases in which he is attorney. This left the way clear for the resignation and the appointment by Spriggs. Smith wired frantically that he was coming right back, but Spriggs hastened to reappoint William A. Clark as United States Senator. That gives Clark a new and valid title to the Senate seat and completely routs the opposition.

MEASURE HELD VALID.

Supreme Court Declares Inheritance Tax Constitutional.

In deciding that the inheritance tax law was constitutional and valid and that it applied to the legacy and not to the estate as a whole, the United States Supreme Court made Uncle Sam a present of about $60,000,000. The decision was handed down in a test case brought by Abram M. Pence, George A. Carpenter and Shirley T. High, counsel for the appellants, Shirley T. High et al., in a suit which sought to restrain the collection of the war revenue tax on the estate of the late James L. High by Revenue Collector Frank E. Coyne of Chicago. Millions of dollars collected by the Government officials during the last twenty-one months remained tied up in the United States treasury vaults awaiting this decision of the highest court in the land on the constitutionality of the special inheritance law raised by the Chicago law firm. In addition to this large sum there is due several million dollars from estates which declined to pay until the right to levy taxes as taken by Congress was passed upon by the Supreme Court.

CURRENT COMMENT

The report of the commissioner of internal revenue looks very much as if we were becoming a nation of beer drinkers, the increased consumption of malt liquors having been so rapid during the last forty years. In 1860, when the population of the country was 31,000,000, we consumed only about 2,000,000 barrels of beer, or an average of one barrel to every sixteen people. In 1870, with a population of 38,500,000, we consumed 6,574,617 barrels of beer, or an average of about one barrel to every six people. In 1880 the population had increased 30 per cent, but the consumption of beer was doubled, and 50,155,783 people consumed 13,347,111 barrels of beer. In 1890 the consumption of beer had doubled again, reaching a total of 27,561,944 barrels, while the population had increased only 24 per cent to 62,662,250. In 1895, when, according to the estimates of the bureau of statistics, we had 65,000,000 people, we consumed 33,561,411 barrels of beer, or about one barrel for every two persons in the whole community, and in 1899, with 70,000,000 people, we consumed 36,581,114 barrels of beer. Thus the population has increased 125 per cent and the consumption of beer 1800 per cent. The increase in the manufacture of whisky has not been so rapid. In fact, more whisky was produced in the United States in 1864 than in 1899, the total in the former year being 85,295,398 gallons, and in 1899 85,125,532 gallons.

The wardrobe that the Misses Morton, daughters of former Vice-President Morton, have had made in Paris cost a fortune. No gown in the trousseau of Miss Edith cost under $150 without duty, and many of the gowns cost $1,000 each. For the price of one wardrobe or trousseau a man would have considered himself rich twenty-five years ago, and the price of one hat would have clothed a family for a year.

A man has obtained a permit to erect a temporary shed in Park Row, New York, in which he will place a voting machine to be tested. Every one passing will be invited to go in and try the machine by depositing a ballot for President of the United States. This will test the machine, and at the same time yield a straw vote on the presidency in the neighborhood of Park Row.

An oil burner to supply fuel to warships was tested at the Brooklyn navy yard last week, and is said to have been a success. The patentee will try to sell the burner to the United States Government. The new arrangement is said to generate steam quicker than coal and there is no dirt in its use.

A resident of the town of Waterloo, N. D., sent a two-cent postage stamp in a letter to Mayor Carter Harrison of Chicago a few days ago, with a request that he forward by return mail a city directory of Chicago, as the writer intends going there in the summer and desires to visit the principal places.

Natural-born citizens are citizens born within the territory of the United States. There was a discussion of the eligibility of a person for the presidency who was born of American parents in a foreign land when Speaker Crisp of Georgia, who was born of American parents temporarily residing in England, was proposed as a candidate for the presidency, and the general trend of opinion was that such a person, being fully recognized as a citizen of the United States, and being eligible to other offices, is eligible to the presidency.

The Board of Health of Independence, Kan., recently purchased a patent fumigating apparatus, and the thing was tried for the first time last week in a house which had been occupied by a smallpox patient. It exploded and blew a hole through the roof, but the health officers are satisfied that the disease germs were killed by the shock.

INDIANA STATE NEWS.

OCCURRENCES DURING THE PAST WEEK.

An Interesting Summary of the More Important Doings of Our Neighbors—Wedings and Deaths—Crimes, Casualties and General News Notes of the State.

Minor State Items

The home of William Shelley, two miles south of Union City, was destroyed by fire. Loss, $2,000; no insurance.

Marion County bonds, calling for $200,000, were placed with Fletcher & Co. of Indianapolis, at a premium of $10,330.

John T. Merrill, aged 58 years, a veteran of the Civil War, fainted on the streets of Goshen and died within a few hours.

W. B. Foley and Nicholas Harper of Anderson, have received notice of appointments in the Census Bureau at Washington.

The body of an unknown man was found in the Wabash River, near New Harmony. A wound on the head indicates he was murdered.

C. F. Heritage and Jesse Vermillion of Anderson, have bought a controlling interest in the Electric Light and Power Company of Alexandria.

Joseph Stiver, aged 58 years, a life-long resident of Elkhart County, died from the excitement of extricating a horse that had broken through the barn floor.

Louis McBride of Akron, Ohio, a Notre Dame University student at South Bend, died from injuries received by a large urn falling upon him while trying to climb into it.

There is a current rumor in New Albany to the effect that the Ohio Falls Iron Works there, one of the most extensive plants of the kind in the country, is to be sold to the trust. The officers of the company deny the truth of the report.

William Michaels, a farmer near Servia, slashed his throat with a dull jackknife, but failing in the attempt with the pocketknife got a dull butcher knife and tried to finish the job, but loss of blood compelled him to desist. His wife's screams brought aid. He will die.

An unknown man was killed by a Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern passenger train within fifty yards of the passenger station at North Vernon. He was aged about 30 years, of medium size, and dressed as a laborer. It is thought that his name is Hayes, and that his home is in Cincinnati.

Marion Caudell, son of a minister in Marion County, and Robert Poenitz, who recently went to the home of Mrs. Katherine Schwartz, near Callaudet, and robbed her of cash and negotiable securities in excess of $2,500, entered a plea of guilty, and were each committed to prison under the indeterminate-sentence law.

The 5-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Moore of Centerville, Wayne County, was killed by a kick from a maddened horse. The child and her parents were driving, when the animal took fright and began kicking, and the child was struck on the forehead, the skull being fractured.

The wheat crop in Ohio County, recently reported a failure, is improving and at least a half crop is anticipated. Seed corn is scarce and the worm is doing much harm. The ravages of the tobacco flea and other insects are destroying complete beds of tobacco plants, leaving only a vestige of green in what were very promising beds.

Arthur Haitt was waylaid and, perhaps fatally shot north of Muncie. He was in a buggy and was jerked out and attacked with a gun. He was left upon the ground, his assailants doubtless believing him dead. Haitt says he suspects two young men who were jealous of him because he courted a beautiful young woman in the neighborhood.

Isaac W. Brown of Rochester, has begun his tour of lectures in Indiana to arouse public sentiment, especially among farmers, to demand legislation that will prevent the killing of birds for at least ten years. He will travel afoot and will lecture at Wabash and Huntington this week and at Decatur Sunday evening. Mr. Brown expects to walk 150 miles south, 125 west and 150 north.

Miss Maude Plunkett of Crawfordsville, a graduate of Indiana University, class of 1899, and doing post-graduate work in Bloomington, has received notice of an appointment as a missionary to China, and will leave for her new field next September. She is a member of the Christian Church and has been very active in the work of the Young Women's Christian Association.

Mrs. Lucy Washington, colored, of Noblesville, who claims to be 110 years old, says she remembers the movements of the British army about Richmond, Va., in the War of 1812, and saw Lafayette when he visited this country in 1825. She was born a slave in Virginia and acted as nurse in the family of President Madison. She was taken from Virginia to Kentucky shortly before the Civil War. Mrs. Washington has her second eyesight and can use a needle and thread without glasses.

Patents have been granted to Indianians as follows: Baxter M. Aslakson, Alexandria, glory hole furnace for finishing glassware; Wm. A. Bone, Wilson, gate; Jas. C. Bowe, Indianapolis, adjustable window screen; Franz Burger, Fort Wayne, convertible car; John Barton, Anderson, mailing envelope for photographs; Henry L. Chubb, Michigan City, inside pipe clamp; Marcea W. Hunter, Bedford, machine for rolling matting; Charles F. Jenkins, Richmond, photographic printing apparatus; James P. Kelley, Alexandria, forging press; Daniel B. Luten, Lafayette, arch bridge; Joseph Moore, Bedford, rein guard; Jonas H. Wiest, Indianapolis, smoke consumer for furnaces; Albert R. Youngs, Gwynneville, combined hat rack and clothes dryer.

BOB WHITE'S MESSAGE.

A meadow wind, and a bar of song—
"O Bob White! O Bob White!"
The morn has tangled the breezy call
In the floating fringe of her vapor-shawl,
And tasselling corn-tips wave it along—
"O Bob White—Bob White!"

Blowing white clover is in the sound—
"O Bob White! O Bob White!"
Snatch of wild locust in dim wood-ways,
Hint of the earliest haying days
When honey-blobs grow ruddy and round—
"O Bob White—Bob White!"

Yellow June apples are turning ripe—
"O Bob White! O Bob White!"
There's a stile half-lost in a rose-vine's hold,
And a moss-lipped spring that is deep and cold,
You know it all when you hear the pipe—
"O Bob White—Bob White!"

A missed refrain in the autumn chill—
"O Bob White! O Bob White!"
But dreams will lurk in the frosty fell,
And echoes ring like a silver bell,
When Winter tiptoes over the hill—
"O Bob White—Bob White!"

TED'S ROSE.

IT was Ted's birthday; he was dressed in his best for the afternoon's outing in the park, and he was very particular not to soil his new shoes at the crossing, so he kept a lookout for dry spots, until some one called to him:

"Hello, Teddy!" said a friendly voice from the florist's window. "You look very fine this morning."

"It's my birthday, and I'm seven years old to-day," Ted answered proudly.

"Well, well, you're quite a man, sure enough!" Mr. Burke laughed. "Wait a moment, Ted; I have just the thing you want." He came out presently with three long-stemmed yellow tea-roses, their cups of gold fairly brimming with delicious fragrance.

"Been training them for this very occasion," he explained cheerily, "and they opened just in time. They'll keep a long while if you're real careful."

Ted was inordinately fond of flowers—yellow tea-roses by preference—he had them on birthdays, holidays, and as often between times as his mamma could afford; but there had been no roses of late; things had gone woefully wrong at the office, and Ted had to be contented with looking at the plants in the florists' windows. He thanked Mr. Burke, and walked away with the roses held protectingly out of range of hurrying passers-by; and it was hard to say which was the lovelier, the roses or the cherub face above them.

The crowd blocked his progress at the street corner, and while he waited he heard a man say, in a low, distinct voice:

"Yonder's that miser, Northcut, the poorest man in New York."

"And the most unhappy," said his companion.

Ted had the curiosity to run ahead to look at the most unhappy man in New York. He was very tall and thin and sick-looking. Ted wondered how he came to be so well dressed, for even to his unpracticed eye he presented a good appearance. Somebody must have given him his old clothes, of course, just as papa always gave his clothes to poor people. Ted watched him with sympathetic interest, and even followed him to the door of a near-by restaurant, where he took a seat at a side table, and Ted could see his face very plainly. Yes, he certainly did look very unhappy, and no one seemed to care about him in the least; he would just slip in and give him a rose—that would please him.

Ted picked out the largest and handsomest rose and carried it carefully up the fast-filling aisle between the tables and laid it on the table before the poorest, unhappiest man in New York. He started, turned round, and eyed the little donor sharply.

"Hello, who are you?" he asked very brusquely.

"I'm Ted Winterburn," came the surprised answer.

The old man's lips moved and he seemed about to ask another question. He knew Ted's father very well indeed; he had him in a "corner," where he intended to keep him till his last dollar was gone. The thought of that triumph gave him a great deal of satisfaction when he remembered certain affairs of the past in which Winterburn had defeated his interests.

"Hum!" he muttered. "Roses in midwinter! Such extravagance! He deserves his bad luck. I don't think you'd better give these away," he said aloud; "they don't belong to you."

"Why, yes, they does!" Ted answered indignantly. "Mr. Burke gived them to me for my birthday."

"Oh, he did? Well, that's different." He took the long-stemmed rose in his thin hand and sniffed at it gingerly. "Much obliged, I'm sure," he said, on second thought.

Ted looked over the meager fare pityingly. If there was anything in the world he disliked it was cambric tea and dry toast, such as he saw lying on the poor man's plate. He could not know that his friend's jaded appetite refused to take anything but the merest necessities. He sipped the cambric tea in silence until the waiter brought Ted a glass of milk on a silver salver.

"Take it," said the man authoritatively, and Ted found that he was really very thirsty.

"Now," said the poor man, when Ted put down the empty glass, "I'd like to know why you gave me that rose."

"Because I feel sorry for you," came the slow and truthful answer.

"Sorry? And why?" he demanded.

"Because you's the very poorest and sorriest man in New York."

"The poorest man in New York!" he echoed, grimly. "Who told you that?"

"I don't know his name. 'Twas a man on the street, and he telled another man that."

"Oh!" with a queer, mirthless smile. "And you feel sorry for a poor, friendless stranger?"

"Yes, I does," said Ted, very gravely and sweetly.

There was a little embarrassed pause, during which the keen, hollow eyes looked into Ted's beautiful face as though searching for something, which they must have found presently, for the dark, old face relaxed into a smile, which utterly contradicted the hard, cruel lines about the thin lips.

"I thank you very much for the rose, my little friend," he said, "but most of all for the sweet thought that prompted your kindness. It's many a long day since I've had such a precious gift," he added, with a queer break in his voice.

He took from his pocket a memorandum and scribbled a few words across the face of a printed note.

"Ask your father to read that to you as soon as you go home," he said. "Don't lose it; it's your birthday present from the poorest man in New York."

It was lunch time when Ted reached home. Papa sat at the table stirring his tea absently and looking over a long row of figures in the latest paper.

"Gerry, do try to eat something," said mamma, anxiously, from her place at the head of the table.

Ted went over and laid the crumpled paper beside his plate, and his father leaned over and glanced at it unseeingly; but its contents caught and riveted his instant attention.

"To Gerald W. Winterburn, to hold in trust for his son Ted, 75 shares of the Union Traction stocks, being the full value of the original cash deposit of said Gerald W. Winterburn in the company's securities.

("Signed) ALEX. NORTHCUTT,
"President Union Traction Co."

He read it over twice and three times in speechless wonder; then mamma took alarm at his changed, bewildered looks, and rose and looked over his shoulder at the bit of paper in his trembling hand.

"Alex. Northcutt! Gerry, what can it mean?" she asked, in breathless amazement.

"It means that a miracle has happened, and he has saved me from utter ruin at the eleventh hour. Alex. Northcut, whom men call skin-flint and miser! What can have moved him to such a wondrous deed?"

"It was the rose," said Ted, confidently. Which was really not all; but the parents guessed the rest.—Ledger Monthly.

THE FREIGHT BUSINESS.

It Is Not the Haphazard Thing Many Suppose.

Most people have an idea that freight is the last thing that railroads look after. Many profess to believe that a piece of freight once started on its journey is allowed to loaf along at its own sweet will and pleasure, stopping where it wishes and staying as long as it likes, and only bringing up at its destination when there is nowhere else to go.

When you have waited day after day for that piano which was shipped a month ago you are ready to adopt that opinion. But don't be in a hurry. When that piano box shows up in Poughkeepsie at the time it should be in Portland the Poughkeepsie agent does not uncase the instrument and give a series of box car recitals for the next two months. You may think he does, but he doesn't. Not a bit of it! There is no welcome anywhere for the wandering Willies of freightdom. No agent wishes to be caught with missing freight piled up in his yard or house. The truth of the matter is the railroads are continually punching it to move on.

It is an interesting study to see how the railroads handle their immense freight business. To the outsider a freight office seems like confusion worse confounded, but to the men who have been trained to the work it is all as simple as a problem in short division. No matter how far from home a car is it is always in touch with the home office. If the car has had bad luck and one of its trucks is sprained the home office knows about it and sends an order to have it placed in the nearest car hospital and doctored up to working condition. The office knows just what the car is earning, and if it thinks its traveling expenses are getting too big it shifts its route or calls it home. It is only once in a while that a car gets away from the home office altogether, and when one does there is no sleep for any one till the runaway is found and started in the right direction.

After you have listened to a freight agent's description of the elaborate plans to look after freight, you will marvel that a single package ever goes astray.

But—the man who is waiting for that piano knows that it does.—Lewiston Journal.

BESIEGED TWENTY-FOUR YEARS.

Candia Held Out for That Length of Time Against the Turks.

One of the longest sieges in history was that of Candia (Crete). It lasted twenty-four years, and was begun by the Turks in June, 1645, when they landed a large army, variously estimated at from 74,000 to 150,000 men. On Sept. 3, 1669, the town capitulated, after a siege which is estimated to have cost the lives of 40,000 Christians and nearly 120,000 Turks.

Constantinople was besieged by either Persians or Turks from A. D. 626 to 675. From 668 to 675 the Turks repeated their attacks yearly.

The siege of Gibraltar, attacked by land and sea, lasted four years, from 1779-1783.

During the thirty years' war Olmutz was besieged from 1642-1648, and was still held by the Swedes in 1650, when they gave it up in accordance with agreement, not compulsion.

The siege of Lucknow furnishes the most famous example of a British garrison holding out against fearful odds. For eighty-seven days the slender garrison held out until relief came. This is now eclipsed by Ladysmith.

Herat, in Afghanistan, is one of the most frequently besieged cities, having been besieged fifty times. Constantinople has suffered from twenty-six sieges, and Paris from eleven.—Stray Stories.

TIDE OF IMMIGRATION

Its Ebbs and Flows Have Left Nearly 20,000,000 Foreigners on Our Shores.

NOT only does immigration into the United States exceed that into any other country in the world, but it is of a character which makes the subject one of the greatest interest and well worth the study of historian and political economist. In ancient times whole nations emigrated and sought new homes, driven from their former ones by oppression and force, or lured from them by the attractions of more fertile fields and more genial climates of other regions. One of the greatest of these early migrations was the passage of 2,500,000 Israelites out of Egypt into Palestine. But, as is pointed out in the report of the State Board of Labor Statistics, "not since the confusion of tongues at Babel, which led to the scattering of the people 'abroad upon the face of the earth,' has there been anything of such a cosmoplitan nature as that which forms the phenomenal immigration to the American States."

From the treaty of peace with England in 1783 to June 30, 1898, according to a careful collation of the figures of accepted authorities, there arrived in the States 19,068,556 immigrants, drawn from every nation under the sun. Statistics of immigration were not kept until 1819, "but it is conceded by statistical experts that the number of immigrants arriving in the twenty-six years preceding was 250,000, exclusive of negroes." In the early periods of immigration a whole year did not bring to these shores as many immigrants as land now at the port of New York in a single week. "In 1718 the landing at Boston of five vessels, having on board 750 Irish immigrants, and in 1729 the arrival at Philadelphia in one week of several small ships containing passengers from Ireland excited much comment; while even toward the close of that century the entry into New York harbor in one day of two vessels laden with Germans created a sensation. During the era of Dutch rule in New Netherlands a couple of ships annually conveyed all the re-enforcements to the colony, and in that whole time the immigration consisted of only a few thousand."

From the time when the tide of immigration really began to set toward these shores until now, New York has been the great receiving and distributing point for the seekers of new homes. Of the entire number of immigrants who arrived in the United States from Oct. 1, 1819, to June 30, 1898, nearly 60 per cent. debarked at the port of New York. This has had much to do with keeping New York a cosmopolitan community. Governor Roosevelt, in writing of New York in 1775, says: "New York's population was composed of various races, differing widely in blood, religion and conditions of life. In fact, this diversity has always been the dominant note of New York. No sooner has one set of varying elements been fused together than another stream has been poured into the crucible."

A glance at the chart published herewith will show how immigration ebbs and flows from time to time. The Commissioner, in his report, says: "The figures in the table of annual arrivals indicate that immigration, like ocean tides, recedes for a while, then rises again. Aside from the civil war period and that part of the present decade ending June 30, 1898, the incoming wave of each decennial term rose higher than the one immediately preceding it."

Germany has furnished the largest number of immigrants to the United States. Next in order are Ireland, England and Wales, Norway and Sweden, British America, Italy, Austria-Hungary, Russia and Poland, France, Scotland, China, Switzerland, Denmark, the Netherlands, the West Indies, Spain and Portugal, Belgium, Asia, exclusive of China; islands of the Atlantic, Mexico, islands of the Pacific, South America, Central America and Africa.

In the first decade the arrivals from Germany numbered only 6,761. Subsequently there was a rapid increase from that country, reaching a maximum from 1851 to 1860. There was a decided decrease in the two succeeding decades, but between 1881 and 1890 the figures rose to more than double the number from any other country, and dropped considerably in the present decade.

From 1820 to 1850, 57 per cent. of all immigration was from the United Kingdom, and a large majority of the immigrants were Irish. Irish immigration increased rapidly until 1860, and then decreased until 1870. Then for ten years it slowly increased again, and between 1881 and 1890 showed a marked increase. Since 1890 Irish immigration has decreased. The immigration of English and Welsh rose steadily until 1871, when for ten years there was a falling off. In the succeeding ten years, however, English and Welsh immigrants increased rapidly, outnumbering the Irish, and being second only to the Germans. In the last seven years they again have fallen below the Irish in numbers. Italian immigration was small up to 1870, but since then it has rapidly been increasing, and in the last seven years nearly half a million Italians have arrived here. Prior to 1871 immigration from Russia and Poland was small, but since then it has been increasing fast, and since 1890 over 417,000 immigrants from those countries have arrived. The immigrants arriving in the United States in the four years ending June 30, 1898, brought to this country in cash the sum of $16,437,429.

In One District Consumption Has Increased Alarmingly.

In writing of the terrible scourge of consumption in Norway, United States Consul Victor E. Nelson, located at Bergen, says: In November of last year Dr. Claus Hansen, of Bergen, delivered a lecture before the Storthing, at Christiana, on the causes of tuberculosis and the fight against it. He stated that during the 30 years of his own experience consumption had increased in the Bergen district 80 per cent. In the year 1896, 54.5 per cent. of all deaths between 15 and 30 years of age were caused by tuberculosis, and statistics show that about 7,000 of the inhabitants of Norway die every year of this disease. In England, he continued, they have succeeded during the last 50 years in reducing one-half the number of tuberculosus cases, and physicians attribute this to the increasing cleanliness in English home life and the erection of consumptive hospitals. The foremost endeavors in fighting tuberculosis should be to agitate for greater cleanliness in general; particularly should efforts be directed against the habit of expectorating.

Statistics of consumptive sanitariums in Germany show that 66 1-3 per cent. of the inmates were able to work the first year after the cure, 60 per cent. after two years, 45 per cent. after three, and 35 per cent. after four years. On an average, it is estimated that 50 per cent. of the patients in sanitariums have their ability to work lengthened by one year. The advantages of public sanitariums for consumptives are so great that the German invalid-insurance companies erect these institutions simply for reasons of economy.

Another Ideal Shattered.

She was a kindly faced woman, and it was easy to see that she was bubbling over with love for the little folk. She walked modestly into the office of the city editor and inquired:

"Will you please tell me which one of the staff it is writes all those pretty little stories about children? I know he must love the little folks, because he writes such nice stories about them. I want to tell him a precious little story about my darling boy, who is only——"

"That's the man over there," interrupted the city editor.

"Which one, pray?"

"That one with the corncob pipe in his mouth and swearing at the office boy."—Omaha World-Herald.

How He Lost His Job.

An exchange tells the story of an old colored man who asked a white man if he could give him work. The white man asked the negro if he had a boat. When the negro replied, "Yes, boss," the white man responded:

"Well, you see all that driftwood floating down the river?"

"Yes, sah," was the reply.

"Well, then," continued the white man, "you row out in the river and catch that driftwood, and I'll give you half you get."

The colored man worked hard for a while, when all of a sudden he stopped and pulled for the shore.

On being asked the reason for his return, he replied: "Dat wood is jest as much mine as 't is his. I ain't gwine to give him any, and so I'm out of work ag'in."

Colds are not exactly contagious, but they are catching.

A THRILLING RESCUE FROM DEATH AT SEA.

Boatswain Who Was Swept Overboard Saved Without Lowering a Boat—Sailors with Buoys and Life-Lines Snatch Him from the Water.

"Notwithstanding their hard lives and their 'closeness,' the larger number of tramp skippers treat their crews with great humanity. They are generally much affected by the loss of any of the ship's company, and they have been known to risk the ship herself to save the lives of their shipmates. Perhaps one of the most stupendous efforts at life-saving ever reported at sea was that performed by Captain William Inness of the freighter British Prince. His boatswain, a hardy Swede named Lastadius, while getting a bucket of fresh water for a timid cook, was picked up by a heavy sea and carried overboard. As he swept along the starboard side of the ship Captain Inness saw him and shouted:

"'Keep up a stout heart! We will save you if we can.'

"It was getting very dark and the boatswain was three ship lengths astern before anything could be done aboard the vessel. He gave himself up for lost, but kept on swimming. It was impossible to launch a boat, as the seas were colossal. The captain had just finished his supper when he saw the boatswain swept astern. He ran toward the bridge, shouting as he did so to the engineer:

"'Stand by to stop those engines.'

"Then he flew to the bridge and laid his right hand on the telegraph.

"'Stop and reverse,' was flashed to the engine room, and the captain's voice rang out, 'All hands to starboard with lines and buoys!'

"The captain told me about the event thus: 'Our only hope in saving him lay in picking him up with the ship, for no boat could live in the sea that was running. When I backed the ship down to him I saw him struggling for his life. He had the buoy that the second officer had thrown to him under his arms and his body was well out of water. I determined to save him if he could hold out and I could fetch him alongside. We missed him the first time, and he was carried around the bow to the port side. He kept shouting and we answered back. Wewere going ahead a bit when he was whirled to starboard.

"'As the night had well set in, we soon lost him, but I turned on the bridge and got the bearing of his voice by a star. I kept that star in sight, and put the helm hard starboard and bore down in the direction of the star. We had lost his voice altogether, but as we steamed toward the star we heard it faintly. We caught sight of him too late to pick him up as we steamed past, so we came up with the wind again, with the bo's'n on our port hand. We steamed slowly, so that the men ranged along the port rail, each with a lifeline or a buoy, had a chance at him. I knew by the cheer that went up that he was saved. He had caught a line and was hauled aboard. He clung to the rail so tightly, not knowing that he was saved, that the men had to pound his hands to break his grip.'"—Ainslee's Magazine.

AMERICAN TEA AND CHOCOLATE

Englishman Says Neither of Them Is Fit to Drink.

"It's odd, now, isn't it, that one can get superbly good coffee in even the cheap restaurants in America, and can't get a cup of decent tea in even the best hotels?" He was young and amiable and good-looking, and had dropped in at 5 o'clock ostensibly for a cup of his national beverage, so the woman to whom he spoke simply smiled, says the New York Commercial Advertiser. "Of course, you won't agree with me," he continued, good-humoredly. "Americans never do agree with us, because the institutions we like they are tired of, and the things they are proudest of I'm afraid we don't appreciate. For example, those buckwheat—thanks, I will take another, no cream, please. But, as I was saying, the coffee is so good everywhere it almost makes one feel one is in Paris, and now, I come to think of it, the tea does, too. I suppose you've had nightmares after drinking French tea? But one expects nothing better in a wine-drinking country like France. In America it's more surprising. Why, in England, you know, we think of America as a place where drinks are invented, improved upon and made with the same genius you put into your patent clothespins and talking machines and song-and-dance comedies.

"Why, I remember when my sisters were at school they met some American girls who used to lament England's lack of 'ice cream soda.' Their relatives in this country used to send them out pounds of maple sugar—such dark, sticky stuff!—but the poor little beggars were very home-sick for their special tipple. When I came out here first I was homesick, too—when I tasted the tea. You know, tea is a panacea for the ills of the mind as well as for those of the body and for the 'blue devils.' There's nothing like a good cup of tea. What's that? We're a sad nation? Oh, come, now, we're a jolly, healthy one. And think how much sadder we might be if we didn't drink tea. But what I was going to say is that there is one drink Americans don't make as well as the French do, and that's chocolate. It's as hard to get in New York as tea—indeed, harder, because there are a few places where one can get tea properly made, by supplying directions, one's own teapot, and stipulating that one be served by the same waiter each time one orders tea. I'm not so fond of chocolate myself, but an American woman I know who has the chocolate habit of the Parisienne has experimented, and she assures me that there are only two places in New York where good chocolate is served—one is an English bakery, presided over by Frenchmen, the other is a French confectioner's. Yes, I will take another cup, please. My fifth? Oh, I assure you, it isn't. You are the exception that proves the rule, you see."

If a man has a good scheme and makes money out of it people call him a genius; if he loses they call him a fool.

The maker of alarm clocks certainly does a rousing busin.

SERMONS OF THE WEEK

The Young Hearts.—Character, faith and eternal life depend upon the young hearts.—Rev. A. Gillies, Methodist, Troy, N. Y.

Of Like Nature.—To enjoy the companionship of God we must be of like nature.—Rev. F. E. Smiley, Presbyterian, Denver, Col.

Luck.—The young man makes a terrible blunder who relies for his success on luck instead of hard work.—Rev. Dr. Vosburgh, Baptist, Denver, Col.

Unhappiness.—There are many secondary causes of unhappiness in this life, and hence the constant resort to secondary cures.—Rev. N. Woodside, Presbyterian, Pittsburg, Pa.

Truth.—If truth is in one sense broad it is in another sense narrow. It excludes the contradictory. Geometry is a very narrow science.—Rev. Geo. H. Trever, Methodist, Milwaukee, Wis.

Good Manners.—We must not depreciate manners of men. Good manners may be said to be the small change of Christian effort.—Rev. M. L. Haines, Presbyterian, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Real Christian Life.—Christ's life is the real Christian life. We live the Christian life in the degree that we live like him.—Rev. J. Titsworth, Congregationalist, Milwaukee, Wis.

A Partnership.—There is a partnership between the creator and the creature; and when we deny this partnership we are controlled by pride.—Rev. Father Mahony, Roman Catholic, San Francisco, Cal.

Predestination.—No preacher in the church to-day teaches infant damnation, and there are other things more important than philosophic quibbles over predestination.—Rev. D. G. Wylie, Presbyterian, New York City.

Truth of the Gospel.—The power of the Lord's resurrection was the strongest confirmation of the truth of the gospel, and the whole fabric of Christianity rested upon it.—Rev. A. J. Tardy, Episcopalian, New Orleans, La.

Real Progress.—Was real progress ever made through the senses alone, if such a progress in itself was not, indeed, a degeneration, by comparison with the life governed by spiritual guidance?—Rev. H. N. Brown, Boston, Mass.

Concentration.—By concentration the inventor accomplishes his plan, the discoverer attains his object, the student wins his prize. It is the convergence of argument that brings conviction.—Rev. D. C. Garrett, Episcopalian, San Francisco, Cal.

In the Scales.—Put the soul in one side of the scales and our Savior in the other, and downward goes the world's redeemer and upward to heaven flies the immortal soul. "The blood of Jesus Chrisa alone cleanses from all sin."—Rev. F. P. Spencer, Methodist, Atlanta, Ga.

Present Century.—The present century has been remarkable for research and active movements in every branch of science and art. The trend of thought is turning and prospects were never brighter for a restoration of religion.—Rabbi Hirsch, Hebrew, Chicago, Ill.

Patience.—Some people are so born that they have a splendidly balanced disposition. They are very fortunate in their original organization; their faculties are harmoniously adjusted. It is not so difficult for such people to be patient.—Rev. J. R. Shannon, Methodist, Toledo, Ohio.

The Stage.—The stage was an offspring of the church, and should, therefore, be its greatest ally for redemption. It is the duty of people to keep away from those plays that are morally bad, but to support those that are good.—Rev. W. E. Bentley, Methodist, New York City.

His Merchantmen.—You are not worth the things you possess on earth. They fade and vanish. You are only worth the treasure you have laid at his gates. These are the things which make your fortune. Ye are his merchantmen.—Rev. John M. Gaston, Presbyterian, Pittsburg, Pa.

A Mistake.—One mistake was made in trying to regulate religion according to man-made rules. Of course, we believe in rules of life. God has set out very clearly some rules for human conduct. We shall never outgrow the ten commandments, or the Sermon on the Mount.—Rev. N. H. Lee, Methodist, Denver, Col.

Successful Government.—There are two things that can make the people incapable of successful government. The one is the removal of the light, whereby the faults may be seen, and the other is the incapacitating of the eye to see, although the light may still be turned on.—Rev. A. B. Church, Universalist, Akron, Ohio.

Filial Duty.—No one thinks it strange that we should discard our fathers' thought respecting dress, habitation or form of government; yet the idea seems to be almost universal that filial duty demands that the child shall think religiously, think of God only as his fathers thought.—Wm. G. Ewings, Christian Scientist, Chicago, Ill.

Christianity.—The great doctrine of Christianity, rightly understood, is not that of the resurrection, but that of the incarnation. Jesus himself as the manifestation of God in humanity, showing us the essential divineness of human life and the greatness of its spiritual possibilities, is the real basis of Christianity.—Rev. R. F. Johonnot, Unitarian, Chicago, Ill.

Helping Him Out.

During the great strike a few years ago among the employes on the North British Railway, much difficulty was experienced in finding qualified engine-drivers. Upon one occasion a young fellow was put upon a section in Fife. One day he ran some distance past a station, and upon putting back he went as far the other way. The stationmaster, seeing him preparing for another attempt, to the great amusement of the passengers on the platform, shouted:

"Just bide whaur ye are, Tummas. We'll shift the station."

The Eel River Road Situation

The Columbia City Post has the folfowing article which, in the main, suits the views of Auburn and all the towns along the Eel River road:

The decision of the supreme court in the Eel River railroad case, if ultimately sustained, will seriously affect this city and this county. As the matter now stands, all the rights and franchises of the Eel River company have been forfeited to the state, and a receiver has been appointed to close up the affairs of that corporation. The grounds upon which this decision was rendered are that the Eel River company by leasing the road to the Wabash and ceasing to have any control over it, and by moving out of the state, abandoned the property, and under the law, the state has a right to take charge of it. What the state will do with it remains to be seen, but there can be no question about the serious character of the injury to the people along the line.

During the days when the line was operated by the old company as an independent line, running from Butler to Logansport, it belonged to the class known as a "one hoss" railroad and the accommodations were few and far between. The newspaper views of the decision state that the road was originally constructed as a competing line with the Wabash and that on this account large sums of money were voted along the line to aid the construction. This will be news to the people of this county who voted aid to the road, and it will also be news to other counties outside of Cass. The aid was voted here and elsewhere without any thought as to a competing line with the Wabash, and the people of this county never made a better investment than in voting aid to the building of the road.

The decision also says that after the leasing of the line to the Wabash, the road was permitted to fall into decay and disuse. This is no more startling than the other proposition, because no fact is better known than the fact that immediately upon the Wabash taking charge, the road ceased to be a little local road and at once became a through trunk line. The passenger and freight traffic has been all that could be expected. The fact that more than half the freight shipped out of this city has gone over the Wabash is the best evidence of the good service rendered to the people by the Wabash railroad company. And for several years the passenger service has been as good as that rendered by the Pennsylvania company to the people of this county. The same thing is true at every point along the line outside of Logansport.

The rights and benefits of the people along the old line seem to have been ignored in this case, and the only benefit accruing to anyone is to Mr. Dykeman and a small coterie at Logansport, and this only to the extent of gratifying a personal grudge against the Wabash company. Some other responsible company may take hold of the old Eel River line, giving a kind of service, but no company is in a situation to give the service that the Wabash can, on account of its connections east and west.

The people of Whitley county take pride in the Eel River road. It stands as a monument to the memory of the late Judge Collins, whose energy and industry originally built the line, and they hope and trust that by some means the Wabash company will continue to operate the road either as lessee or owner.

COURT NEWS.

Work began on time Monday morning with Judge Hartman on the bench. He shows somewhat the effect of his long illness but goes through with his duties with a good deal of his old-time vigor. As in all first days, the work was calling up cases and taking various preliminary steps.

Auburn attorneys were nearly all in court, and from Waterloo were noticed Gen. Blair and W. H. Leas; from Butler, Ott Baxter and C. J. Coats, the latter looking as if fully restored to health. Mr. Sharpless was over from Garrett.

Milo Husselman is at his old place, acting as court room bailiff. The grand jury has not been called, and will not be unless something more turns up than has so far. With no important cases it is not neccessary to call them in.

The Kentucky Election.

The test case to see who is to be governor of Kentucky, has been decided in favor of Beckham, democrat, by the supreme court of that state. It was then taken to the supreme court of the United States, and yesterday Chief Justice Fuller gave the decisson of the majority of the court, that the United States court has no right to interfere in an election contest over mere state officers, as such officers were not acting under the laws of the general government, but under state laws only. Several members of the court disagreed but the majority is what decides. Justice Fuller said that for over 100 years, Kentucky had this law, that contests as to the election of the state officers must be settled by the two branches of the legislature acting jointly. They have done so in this case, and the federal court had no right to call it up again. It was settled and over.

Justice Harlan's ground for dissent was that the action of the legislature, in determining the case, was not fair to both sides, and was in some points irregular.

This ends this unfortunate election case. It is no doubt settled according to the election laws of Kentucky. But the people will never believe that Goebel received more votes than Taylor. The election was smirched with frauds by both parties. But of these votes as a whole, both legal and illegal, Taylor no doubt had the most.

State Convention Details.

The arrangements for the democratic state convention, which will be held June 6, have just been completed. There will be 1,527 delegates. At 8 p. m., June 6, the district meetings will be held. Each district will select two delegates and two alternates to the national convention, one elector and one contingent elector, one vice chairman and one assistant secretary of the state convention, and one member of the commitee on organization, credentials and resolutions. At 9 p m. the convention committees will meet and the committees on organization will select a permanent secretary, four delagates at large to the national convention and four alternate delegates at large and two contingent electors. Its report to the convention usually is accepted as final, although the convention has the power to amend or substitute. Reports from over the state indicate that the convention will be largely attended.

Club Notes.

The L. L. C. met with Mrs. Swineford Saturday with a large attendance. "Nevada," was the subject for discussion with Mrs. Husselman as leader, assisted by Mrs. Olds and Mrs. Lackey. The lesson was made very interesting and much information was gained about this, one of our least known states. "Navajo Weaving," was the subject of an excellent paper by Mrs Eckhart. She brought with her some illustrations which helped to make her paper still more interesting. The report of the committee on plans for next year's work was given by the chairman Miss Hague. After a full and free discussion the club adopted the study of Ethics and Literature with an occasional lesson in Art through the year. This was adopted unanimously. The motion that the club year be shortened was taken from the table and fully discussed. The motion was lost by a three-fourths majority. The delegate and alternate to the Indiana State Union of literary clubs reported that neither of them could attend. Mis Hague was then elected to represent the L. L. C. at Lafayette this week. Mrs. Lewis, the president of the L. L. C., will represent the new State Federation at Milwaukee in two weeks, and Mrs. Ralston will represent the L. L. C. Mrs. McCord was elected as alternate for Mrs. Ralston. Several other members are talking of going to Milwaukee also.

Mrs. Hartman sent her resignation to the club which was accepted with much regret expressed by many members. She was made an honorary member. The next name on the waiting list was taken up and balloted on for membership was that of Miss Edna Davis, and the balloting resulted in her unanimous election. Next Saturday is the last "Guest Day" of the year and it was decided to have one guest. The club adjourned to meet next Saturday with Mrs. Willis.

BUTLER.

The U. B. friends are now Sabbath wanderers. Their church is undergoing repairs.

Our town is filling up mainly by the rapid marrying of our young people who all want homes of their own to live in.

J. A. Campbell paid up the Fred Gengnagle storm loss last week. Everything pertaining to the settlement was satisfactory.

The decision of the Eel River railroad case in favor of the state, stirred Butler people up more than a little. Visions of street cars, fire engines and fat policemen gleamed up all around.

Our people were painfully shocked last Friday morning upon hearing of the acoidental death of William Burns, who lived about three miles west of Butler near the Wabash road. Himself and his aged wife were on their way to Butler with a quiet and well-trained horse. As they approached the road at the Copeland crossing they failed to notice the noon east-bound passenger train until they were but two or three rods from the track. Their horse became frightened and turned sharply around and plunged into the deep, miry ditch on the east side of the road, throwing them both out. Mr. Burns fell face downward into the soft, oozy bottom of the ditch, with the buggy wheel across his head and shoulders in such a way as to press his face into the water and mud. His wife succeeded in releasing herself, but could not remove the buggy from off her husband. She called loudly for help. Mr. Copeland and son hastened to her relief. They soon succeeded in getting Mr. Burns from under the buggy, but not in time to save his life. The horse had mired into the ditch and had to be drawn out with another team. Mr. Burns, who was in his 83rd year, had been a resident of this county for fully forty years. He was a minister of the U. B. church, and was honored and respected by all who knew him. His funeral took place from the Dillon chapel last Sunday, Rev. Tussing from Hudson officiating. His remains were followed to their last resting place, Mount Pleasant, by the largest gathering of old people that have been gathered together in many years.

Disgrace to The Nation.

—The Cuban steal grows worse and worse. It is now known that the honest (?) officials sent there by McKinley to teach the Cubans how to run an honest and up-to-date government, have stolen about $125,000 and possibly more. The salaries they have managed to pay themselves amounted in all to more than four millions. This was besides stealings of all sorts. By this attempt to teach honest government to Cuba, we have made ourselves the laughing stock of the wolrd. McKinley's vanity has brought us to this. And he should have known the kind of men he was sending to Cuba.

LONG, HAPPY LIFE.

It all Depends on the Stomach, and the Following Information About the Recovery and Maintainance of Health is Worthy the Attention of Every Reader.

Who are those who live long? They, says Dr. Stone, are the people who are able to forget their stomachs. They are the fortunate ones who are never conscious that they have a stomach except as their hunger indicates it. If those who constantly suffer from indigestion with its hundreds of distressing symptoms can only be restored to that happy condition where they can become unconcious of their stomachs, and then keep so, they will enjoy life to an extent they cannot now imagine. Dr. Stone says this is possible and he offers to prove it without asking you to risk a cent. Early in his practice he realized that perfect digestion was the basis of all health, and now after thirty years of constant study and treatment of the stomach and liver troubles, he feels that he has more fully solved the problem of health than any other investigator. The remedy which has brought him the remarkable success of his later years is now given to the public in Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure. It is a double remedy put up in a single package. One tablet restores the digestive power of the stomach; the other regulates the liver and bowels.

THE CURE GUARANTED.

Dr. Stone insists that his remedy shall cost you nothing if it fails to benefit. Your druggist is authorized to refund the money to any one who fails to get entirely satisfactory results from the treatment. This is entirely fair, and you owe it to yourself to give this new, common-sense cure a trial. If you are dull, lifeless, nervous or irritable. If you do not feel well. If appetite is fickle. If you have pain or distress after eating. If you have heartburn, water brash or a sinking sensation in the pit of the stomach. If the bowels are constipated or irregular. If urine is scanty or high colored. If you have a dull, heavy feeling in your back. If you feel "used up" half the time. If you have all or a part of these symptoms, your body is suffering from the starving, poisoning results of indigestion and liver trouble. Half the symptoms can be banished in a week, and all be soon removed by Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure. It is guaranteed to do it. Price 50 cents. Sold by H. B. McCord.

Even the Woman who is the most particular about the style of her shoes will not deny herself ease and comfort in them, unless she sacrifices willingly.

The Herrick Shoe
is easy, VERY easy, but with its ease it combines style and the very Latest Style always. It is not an experiment, but the result of thirty-eight years of practical experience in the making of women's shoes. Three grades and each one is guaranteed—$2.50—$3.00—$3.50. Oxfords 50 cents per pair less than above above prices.

Special Notice.—Name and price stamped plainly on sole of every shoe.

From time remote e'en queens and kings
Themselves adorned with gems and rings,
Bequeathed as heirlooms, handed down,
Rare gems still grace the monarchs' crown.

A watch, a ring, a precious stone,
Most every one aspires to own,
And so they may if they will buy
From D. A. Hodge's choice supply.

All leading makes of watches sold,
In nickle, silver and in gold,
At prices so low, most people say
It fairly takes their breath away.

Choice silverware of rare design,
Knives, forks and spoons superbly fine,
Clocks with and clocks without alarms
And friendship hearts, the fad in charms.

All the swell stuff newly made,
The richest stuff and highest grade,
Please call at D. A. Hodge's store,
For life's too short to mention more.

We go on the theory that.....

"The Best is None too Good for Our Trade."

In this regard no line which we carry is slighted in the least. We keep our eyes open and are first to catch on to the proper ideas. Every article must be full value and backed by the people from whom we buy. For this reason it is easy to understand why we receive so many compliments on our stock and have so many expressions of satisfaction from our customers.

Dress Goods—We have an exquisite line of Dress Goods to show you. Finest assortment ever seen in the city. Beautiful colorings, finest textures and reasonable prices makes this stock all that you could wish it.

Shirt Waists—We show in great variety and at prices that are popular. Our trade in this line will (at the present rate) nearly double any previous year.

The new Umbrellas and Parasols are simply elegant. They are NEW in every sense of the word and are greatly admired by all who have seen them.

Shirts and Straw Hats—All the new and nobby styles you will find in our stock. We are selling many of the famous MONARCH SHIRTS to traveling men who see them in our window. They are absolutely right.

Our Carpet Stock—(the largest in this section of the state) is still in good condition. We keep adding new patterns each week to keep it that way. It will pay you to see us before buying anything in our line.

—There was a double wedding in Angola last evening in which DeKalb county parties were interested. The contracting parties were Asa Holcomb of Angola and Miss Bertha McNabb of Auburn, and Frank Philley of St. Joe, and Miss June Smiley of Angola. Elder Chas. S. Medbury of the Christian church, performed the wedding ceremonies.

Does the Baby Thrive

If not, something must be wrong with its food. If the mother's milk doesn't nourish it, she needs SCOTT'S EMULSION. It supplies the elements of fat required for the baby. If baby is not nourished by its artificial food, then it requires

Scott's Emulsion

Half a teaspoonful three or four times a day in its bottle will have the desired effect. It seems to have a magical effect upon babies and children. A fifty-cent bottle will prove the truth of our statements.

Should be taken in summer as well as winter.

OBITUARY.

George D. Denison was born March 1, 1816, died May 20, 1900, aged 84 years, 2 months and 19 days.

He was a native of Onandaga county, New York. When he was but fifteen mor ths old his parents, with their family moved to Richland county, Ohio, Auburn township, in which their home was located, had at that time but five white families. He grew to manhood in this home, and on April 28, 1840, was married to Miss Saloma E. Fenner. To this union nine children were born. In 1852 they moved to Wood county, Ohio, where they resided until 1868, when they came to DeKalb county, Ind., where he has abided till the end came. Thus for 32 years he has gone in and out among us, bearing his burdens of citizenship with success and honor, rearing his family to maturity and good citizens who in turn have taken up the duties of man and womanhood, and are reflecting the sterling principles of father and mother.

At their home on April 28, 1890, Father and Mother Denison celebrated their golden wedding on which occasion there were four generations of his family present. Just four days before the 51st anniversary on April 24, 1891, Mother Denison, the companion of his youth, fell asleep in the Christian's hope, to join an infant child, Clara, and another daughter, Mrs. Flora Kiplinger, who had preceded her to the land of the spirit. Thus there are left to mourn him, his second wife, to whom he was married July 5, 1892, and seven children. Mrs. Elizabeth T. Cramer, Felix E., Julius A., George O., Mrs. Cordelia E. Lytle, Mrs. Orpha T. Salyer and Capt. Levi L.

Funeral services were held at the U. B. church conducted by Rev. W. O. Butler assisted by Rev. C. E. Moorman. Many old neighbors and citizens were present and followed the remains to the place of interment in the Waterloo cemetery.

One of the Continental trips of Queen Victoria is a good thing for the class of officials known as Queen's messengers. They are kept actively employed, and naturally profit by the arrangements made. The salaries of those engaged on foreign service are £400 a year each, with an allowance of £1 a day in addition for fares while traveling abroad. There is another distinct staff of messengers whose peregrinations are confined to the United Kingdom, and they are not so highly paid. All of those referred to are at the disposal of the Foreign Office, but the other Government departments have also messengers of their own.

HISTORY OF A FINE OPAL.

Texas Ranchman Tells It to Break a Spell of Ill-Luck.

"The value of an opal is entirely arbitrary," said a Canal street jeweler, lifting a tray full of the stones out of his showcase for the New Orleans Times-Democrat man to see. "Here are some as big as your thumbnail that are worth about a dollar apiece, and here is a little fellow that would sell for $50 anywhere in the world. The finest opal I know of in New Orleans belongs to the wife of a wealthy cotton man. I am quite familiar with the stone. It is perfectly oval, an inch and an eighth long and three-fourths of an inch across. The general shade is light blue, but it is so full of fire and is shot with so many different tints and tones that it would be incorrect to describe it as of any particular color.

The jewel has a curious history. It was found in one of the mines at Zacatecas, old Mexico, and eventually came into the possession of a Texas ranchman. It is said that two former owners met violent deaths, but I don't know that to be a fact, and it is probably the usual bad-luck legend that attaches to most fine opals. The Texan had it mounted on a scarfpin with ten small diamonds around the sides and a diminutive ruby at the top and bottom, making it, as you may well imagine, a very gorgeous ornament.

"One night he was in a gambling house at San Antonio playing faro. He had just sold a bunch of cattle and had a tremendous wad of money, which he proceeded to lose almost as fast as he could get it out.

"The man at the box was a young fellow named Billy Cooper, and after dropping several thousand the cattleman suddenly pulled the pin from his scarf, and leaning across the table stuck it into the dealer's tie. 'Here, Billy,' he said, 'keep this hoodoo for me a while.' Strange to say, his luck changed immediately and he came very near breaking the bank. When he quit he refused to take the pin back, and as soon as the proprietor of the place heard the story he promptly discharged the dealer. Cooper thereupon drifted to New Orleans and worked for a while at one of the old-time houses on Royal street.

"He still had the pin, which he had kept in a spirit of obstinacy, but he was pursued by an inexplicable run of ill-fortune, and at last got frightened and sold it for a mere song to the cotton man I have already referred to. I reset the stone as a brooch, and its present owner has certainly never encountered any special misfortune. If there was a spell it is broken."

PLACED ON HIS COOD BEHAVIOR.

Shoestring Peddler Agreed Not to Turn Burglar for a Fortnight.

"It's one pair for 3 cents or two pairs for 5, you know," said the shoestring faker, "and the profits are so small that but for an occasional bit of luck I'd be hard put for three meals a day. Just now, however, I'm not worrying over the next two weeks. The other day a motherly looking old lady bought two pairs of strings from me and then asked about my sales and profits. When I gave her straight goods she said:

"'Young man, are you ever tempted to crime?'

"'Yes'm, I am,' says I.

"'But you always resist the temptation?'

"'I always have, but I can't promise for the future. I'm getting tired of this shoestring business.'

"'Do you think that you might turn burglar?'

"'I do, ma'am. That's what I shall go into if I make a change.'

"'How soon might you become a burglar?' she asked after looking me over.

"'I may begin to-night,' says I.

"'Look here,' says she in a whisper, 'I'm mortally afraid of burglars. I'm going to California with my daughter in about two weeks and I'll tell you what I'll do. If you will not turn burglar for a fortnight I'll give you $5.'

"'It's a very small sum, ma'am, but being it's you I'll strike hands on it and keep my word.'

"And she outs with a five," laughs the faker, "and hands it over, and if you hear of any burglaries within the next few days you can be sure that I didn't have a hand in the business. I'll wait till the old lady gets on the other side of the United States."—Washington Post.

What's in a Name?

The following list is given of the forms under which Shakspeare's name has appeared at different times: Chaksper, Shakspere, Shaxpere, Shakspire, Shaxspere, Schaksper, Shakespere, Shakespeare, Schakespeyr, Shaxespeare, Shagspere, Shaxpur, Shaksper, Shaxspeare, Saxpere, Shakespire, Shakespeire, Shackspeare, Shakaspear, Shaxper, Shakspear, Shaxpeare, Shakspeere, Shaxburd, Shackspeyr, Shakespear, Schakesper, Schackespere, Shakyspere. Dr. Furnivall admits the existence of only five unquestionably genuine signatures of the poet; two on his Blackfriars conveyance and mortgage, and three on his will. Of these the first two are Shakspere; of the three will signatures, two are Shakspere, while about the third is no agreement, Dr. Furnival making it Shakspere; Stevens and Malone, as well as Sir Francis Madden, deciphering it as Shakspeare.

A Prince in South Africa.

An Australian war correspondent in South Africa tells this story: "I had an amusing experience to-day. In riding past the Inniskillings some young officers came in a hurry to hear if I had any news. After some talk, one of them asked if I had been under fire. I said 'Yes,' but added that I did not appreciate it, and that any one who liked could have my share. He said: 'Well, we have to go under fire, whether we like it or not.' I said: 'Yes, but that is what you are paid for, isn't it?' The others all laughed, and it turned out that he was a Prince of the blood royal, a scion of the house of Teck, though in his absolutely plain uniform he might have been a private soldier for all one could tell."

Nature's Toothbrush.

One of the most curious plants in the world is what is called the toothbrush plant of Jamaica. It is a species of creeper, and has nothing particularly striking about its appearance. By cutting pieces of it to a suitable length and fraying the ends the natives convert it into a toothbrush, and a tooth powder to accompany the use of the brush is also prepared by pulverizing the dead stems.

Curbing the Mosquitoes.

Winchester, Vt., has passed a law which is designed to break up the mosquito pest there. The law requires that each property owner shall pour kerosene oil over every pool, sink or drain on his premises from time to time, and the police force is empowered to see that the ordinance is enforced.

THE RANKS GROW THIN.

Thin grow the ranks. A few worn, weary men,
With the white spray of age upon each brow,
Come in sad memory of those far-off days
When they marched gayly where they falter now.

A few are left. How short has grown the list!
We call it tenderly, with bated breath,
Lest from our ranks should fade the noble band
To answer to the roll-call of the ruler, Death.

Few, few are left. The ranks grow thin, and wide
Apart as the dim armies of the past,
Silent and slow they come, who once
Their conquering forces on the foeman cast.

Only a few, with weak and faltering tread,
And for a little while, their march they keep
O'er the rough way of poverty and age,
To bivouac-grounds of rest, so green and deep.

Thin grow the ranks. In silent camps they wait,
Who shared those hours of victory or defeat;
And marble war-worn heroes rest in slumber sweet.

So few are left! Where are those gallant ones
Who led the conquering bands to victory,
Who out of darkness brought the light of peace,
And set a race of suffering people free?

So few, but ah! the golden-fruited years
Have scattered memory-blossoms on their way;
And a glad nation comes with thankful heart
To tell its love on Decoration Day.

A MEMORIAL DAY UNION

BUSINESS had brought him to his native town in the sunny South. He was in haste that his mission should be concluded so that he might get away from the quiet village. The very beauty of its fragrant spring dress saddened him.

In a timid, hesitating way he had made a few inquiries for old friends, but the answer was ever the same. War had scattered most of the old families. Those alone remained who slept in the peaceful cemetery in the dip which formed a vale at the bend in the river.

"And the Ralstons?"

All were gone. Of the impetuous, high spirited family, only Miss Erma was still alive. The Ralston boys—four of them—lay in soldiers' graves beside their gallant father.

Mrs. Ralston had seen her brave boys brought home dead one by one. But she gave them for her country's sake, gladly, but her heart was slowly breaking. She did not long survive her husband.

"Did Miss Erma still live at Ironwood?"

No. The old plantation was desolate and Miss Ralston lived in a little white cottage down the road, the one almost smothered in jasmine and roses.

The gentleman took his cane and with a brisk step which told of some young blood still flowing in his veins, started down the street in the warm spring sunshine. The square shoulders, erect head and firm tread all bespoke the soldier.

As he came in sight of Miss Erma's house his steady walk became jerky and finally settled into an uncertain amble. For the fraction of a second he paused at her gate, then beat a hasty and confused retreat. Completely out of breath, he drew up beside the high arched gate which opened upon the soldiers' last tenting ground.

"By Jove! It's no use. I couldn't face her," and the old man mopped his brow. "Whew, how her eyes did blaze! Facing a cannon is play to standing the fire of Erma's angry eyes."

He leaned against the post. The light died out of his face and he thought of that long away time when he and Erma had been lovers. And then came the war. How quickly had followed that awful day when he went to say farewell and she would not look at him, because he wore the hated blue. He tried to argue, tried to persuade, but she would not listen.

She was a Southern girl—Col. Ralston's daughter. If he fought the South, he fought her and was her deadly foe. Was it not cruel enough that the dreadful war should deprive her of her lover, without calling him to fight against instead of for her?

How clearly he could see her as she stood then on the low, wide steps, a slim, girlish figure clad in clinging white. Her cheeks were flushed and her mouth tremulous, but the chin was firmly set. All through the war he had carried in his heart the memory of her as she stood in the sunshine, framed by the stately pillars of the gallery; while he, with despair in his heart, but a dogged determination in his eyes, turned, when half way down the broad avenue of live oaks, and lifting his Union cap, murmured, "God keep my Southern sweetheart!"

How often he recalled her words. He could almost hear them now. "Go. You are a traitor. I never want to see your face again."

The old man shook his head sorrowfully. No, she would never forgive him, not even now after all these years. Well, he would go back north on the morrow, so what matter?

He and the Ralston boys had been college students together. He would pay a visit to their last resting place. He opened the gate and slowly made his way among the flower-covered mounds. When he reached the Ralston lot, he looked about him sorrowfully. He felt sadly desolate. He alone was left of all those merry, laughing fellows.

Presently his eye wandered to a grave somewhat apart from the rest. The scarcity of its flowers drew his attention to it. He wandered idly toward it, thinking, "Some poor friendless chap."

He started and then dropped upon his knees in his eagerness to read the simple inscription on the headstone. It ran:

"MERRILL FREMONT."

"Born 1838. Killed at Gettysburg, 1863."

"Why, that's my name!" and the old man looked about him in a dazed manner as though for a moment he doubted his identity.

"Yes, my name is Merrill Fremont and I was born in '38, but though I was wounded I did not die at Gettysburg. A Union soldier in a Confederate graveyard. Ah, that accounted for the lack of memorial flowers," and he smiled grimly. "But I'm not dead," and he thumped his cane vigorously upon the gravel path.

He leaned his hands on his stick and stood gazing intently at his own name.

"It isn't me—but it is some Union soldier buried for me, and he shall have some flowers. Yes, I'll decorate my own grave," and with a chuckle Merrill Fremont started briskly down the path.

As he neared the gate it opened, and a tall, slender figure clad in black entered, followed by an old negro fairly staggering under the weight of magnolia blossoms.

Merrill faced about and watched them. He was certain now that the woman was Erma. He expected her to enter the Ralston lot, but she only paused, waved her hand toward the flower-hidden graves, said something to her attendant and passed on her way until she stood beside the undecorated grave.

Fremont rubbed his eyes and stared.

The lady motioned to the negro to lay his fragrant burden down.

Merrill hastened up the path. He was near enough to hear the well-remembered voice say, "You may go, Uncle Sorney; I'll arrange the flowers myself."

The servant shuffled away down the path he had come, while his mistress knelt to place the blossoms.

Merrill Fremont paused, hat in hand. Erma believed him dead and forgave him. How would it be when she found him alive? He stood in dumb uncertainty. She was his only love and to lose her again would be more terrible than not to have found her. Dead, she surely loved him; her action proved it. Would he not better go away in the certainty of that love than, by staying, perhaps revive the old bitterness which his return to her unharmed while all her beloved family lay dead, might recall?

He was about to retreat. It was too late, the lady turned and saw him. He stood awkwardly before her. She looked at him in puzzled inquiry.

Suddenly he cried out, "Erma."

She moved back a pace in surprise at being so addressed by an apparent stranger.

Once his tongue loosened Merrill gave her no chance of escape. In quick, incoherent words he poured forth the mistaken report of his death, his love, his sorrow for her grief and at last an earnest plea that she would prove more kind than in the past.

As she listened a delicate flush crept into the lady's pale, sweet face. The shadow that rested in the deep, blue eyes lifted. She looked searchingly at the man before her. Could this really be her young lover, returned in the guise of this impetuous elderly man? She had never thought of him save as the soldier boy who had gone away at her bidding. At last she seemed to understand. For a moment the corners of the lovely mouth forgot to droop.

By the light of memory the man and woman grew young again.

When his torrent of words ceased she stood silent for some moments, and then held out her hand as she softly said:

"'We banish our anger forever
When we laurel the graves of our dead.'"

WHERE HEROES LIE.

RESTING PLACES OF THE WARRIORS OF '61-65.

The Graves of the Leading Commanders of the Blue and the Gray Are Widely Scattered Throughout This Great Country of Ours.

The remains of our martial leaders and heroes are widely scattered. Grant sleeps by the Hudson, Sherman on the banks of the Mississippi and Sheridan at Arlington, across the Potomac from Washington. With the exception of West Point and Arlington there is no burial place especially set apart for soldiers and sailors, which contain the remains of any number of noted leaders. A number are buried in the civic cemeteries, Laurel Hill, Philadelphia and Spring Grove, Cincinnati.

Sumter's war hero, Gen. Robert Anderson, lies at West Point. In the same cemetery are the graves of Gens. Kilpatrick, the dashing cavalryman; J. M. Brannon, Grover, Hartsuff, William Hays, Mackenzie; also a distinguished cavalryman, Charles P. Stone; Sykes, leader of Fifth corps, and the veteran Keyes, who died in Switzerland in 1895, and was brought to West Point for burial.

The author of that phrase which in 1861 thrilled the Northern heart, "If any man attempts to haul down the American flag, shoot him on the spot," Gen. John A. Dix, found his last resting place in Trinity Cemetery on Washington Heights. Fremont, "The Pathfinder," is buried in Rockland Cemetery, on the Hudson, above New York. Far up the Hudson, and quite beyond the classic region of the Highlands, sleeps the "Rock of Chickamauga," Gen. Thomas. His grave is in Oak Wood Cemetery, Troy.

The grave of Gen. Sherman in Calvary Cemetery, St. Louis, is marked with a monument. McClellan lies in River View Cemetery at Trenton. Burnside sleeps in the soil of his adopted State, Rhode Island. His grave in Swamp Point Cemetery, Providence, is kept in good order, a permanent fund having been established for that purpose. Gen. Joseph Hooker, "Fighting Joe," the third commander of the army of the Potomac, sleeps in Cincinnati. Meade, fourth and last commander of that army, is buried in Philadelphia.

Col. Ellsworth, the zouave, known as the flag martyr of Alexandria, is buried in the little village cemetery at Mechanicsville, N. Y. Nathaniel Lyon, also a hero of the first months of the war, is buried at Eastford, Conn. Maj. Theodore Winthrop, another of the martyrs of 1861, and who was shot through the heart while leading a forlorn hope at Big Bethel, is buried at New Haven, Conn. "Hold the Fort" Corse, who survived his war wounds, and died a couple of years ago in Boston, is buried at Burlington, Iowa. Cushing, the hero of Albemarle sound, and who also survived his war injuries for some years, but at last succumbed to them, is buried at the naval cemetery at Annapolis.

Hancock, "the superb," who led innumerable battle charges famous in history, is buried at Norristown, Pa., in a vault constructed under his own supervision. Charles Eliet, Jr., who organized the first steam ram fleet, and died of a wound received in the desperate naval battle at Memphis, sleeps at Laurel Hill Cemetery, Philadelphia. Farragut, the bold fighter and brilliant fleet commander, is buried at Woodlawn Cemetery, New York. Gen. Stannard, whose brigade of "Green Mountain" militia turned the tide at Gettysburg, in repulsing Pickett's charge, is buried at Burlington, Vt.

Col. Robert G. Shaw, whose regiment of black soldiers, "Their line of eyeballs gleaming white," had the place of honor in the storming of Fort Wagner, was killed on the parapet, and the southerners, who held the field, placed him in a trench scooped out of the sand between the fort and the sea. In the course of time, the action of the waves destroyed the surface of the beach to a considerable depth and scattered the bones of Wagner's heroes beyond recovery.

Gen. Thomas Francis Meagher was drowned from a vessel in the Missouri river, Montana, and his body could never be recovered. The body of the gallant Custer was removed from the scene of the horrible massacre on the Little Big Horn, and buried at West Point.

Fighting Phil Kearney, "The One-armed Devil," was killed within the Confederate lines, where he had ventured alone with his usual rashness. His body was recognized by Stonewall Jackson, who had served with him in Mexico, and sent to his friends under a flag of truce, accompanied by a touching message of tribute to the gallantry of an old comrade. Kearney lies in Trinity churchyard, on Broadway, at the head of Wall street, New York. McPherson, who, like Kearney, was shot down within the enemy's lines in front of Atlanta, was also recognized by the enemy. The remains were guarded and sent into the Federal camp. They were brought North for burial in the family plot, in his old home, Clyde, Ohio.

Gettysburg's foremost hero, Gen. J. F. Reynolds, was shot by a sharpshooter while piloting his troops to the scene of the first encounter on that decisive field. He is buried at Lancaster City Cemetery, Lancaster, Pa.

Logan is buried in the National Cemetery at the Soldiers' Home, Washington, D. C. Slocum is buried at Greenwood, near the tomb of Henry Ward Beecher. Butler's remains lie in private grounds belonging to the family, a plot annexed to Hildreth Cemetery at Lowell. Banks' grave is at Grove Hill Cemetery.

The National Cemetery at Arlington, Va., is destined to become hallowed with the ashes of many of the distinguished soldiers and sailors of the civil war. Nearly two score whose names are household words because of their daring deeds in battle now rest at Arlington, among them Sheridan, who has already been mentioned. The heroes of the deck buried at Arlington thus far are Admirals Porter and Jenkins and Rear Admirals Queen, Johnson and Shufeldt.

Gen. Thomas Leonidas Crittenden sleeps at the "Bivouac of the Dead," on the banks of the Kentucky river, close to the spot where Col. O'Hara penned the celebrated lines beginning:

On fame's eternal camping grounds,
Their silent tents are spread.

A Massachusetts hero, whose fame rests upon a single incident, one which, however, will never be lost to history, is the sailor who sent the notorious cruiser Alabama to Davy Jones' locker, Admiral James A. Winslow. Winslow's grave is in Forest Hills Cemetery, Boston.

The little town of Lexington, Va., holds the ashes of Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson. In Richmond's noted cemetery, Hollywood, is "Jeb" Stuart. Gen. George E. Pickett is also buried at Hollywood. In ground known as the Hill plot, near Westbrook and close to Richmond lies the body of Gen. A. P. Hill. Hill was shot dead on the outskirts of Petersburg, the last day of the battle there.

Gen. Joseph E. Johnston is buried in Greenmount Cemetery, Baltimore. Gen. Polk, the soldier-bishop, who was killed by a shell which Gen. Sherman himself aimed and dispatched on the errand of death, is buried at Augusta, Ga.

The body of Albert Sidney Johnston rests in the State Cemetery at Austin, Texas, to rest in soil he claimed as his own by adoption. Beauregard is buried in Metarie Cemetery, New Orleans; Forrest at Elmwood Cemetery, Memphis; Semmes, commander of the cruiser Alabama, in New Orleans. Gen. Armistead, the only brigadier in Pickett's column who crossed the stonewall barrier on Cemetery ridge, was mortally wounded and died a prisoner. He was recognized by Federal officers and buried in a churchyard of the town.

THE OLD BATTLE FLAG.

Memorial Day.

Close in their serried ranks they lie
Under the smiling summer sky
Some 'so the fields where low they fell,
Wrapped in the land they loved so well;
Over them [illegible] wave,
Tributes of [illegible] brave,
Tended [illegible] by the wind and sun,
Garlands [illegible] victor and vanquished one.

This be the lesson that [illegible] learn
When to the [illegible] born,
Leaving behind them in [illegible] and strife
Looking upward to [illegible] life
Here lie the brothers asleep to-day,
Scatter the roses on blue and gray;
Hallow the places where low they lie
Under one flag in a cloudless sky.

HOTEL RATES FRIGHTENED HIM.

Mississippi Congressman Appalled at the Prospect of Paying $75 a Day.

Colonel Mann tells this story of Representative John Allen of Mississippi. When Mr. Allen journeyed over to Manhattan several weeks ago to enjoy the dinner of the New York Bankers' Association he arrived Saturday at noon and was taken to the Waldorf-Astoria. There the clerk assigned him to a room and, on going up, he found that it was a great suite of three rooms, magnificently furnished, one mass of gilt and dainty coloring, and with bunches of American beauty roses standing around on costly tables.

"Mr. Allen began to grow fearsome," said Colonel Mann, "and saw visions of large bills being presented when he left for Washington. After taking another look at the princely surroundings he concluded that they were too expensive for him and rang for a bell boy. When the boy arrived Mr. Allen gave him a half dollar and quietly instructed him to find out what the rates for the suite for a day were. The boy returned within a few minutes and reported the price per diem as $75. John Allen saw that he was living too high and after sending his grip down strolled up to the telegraph office and wrote himself a message from a dear friend uptown, who insisted that he come up and stay with his boyhood chum. He then adopted a long face and, going to the hotel office he extended his hand to the clerk and explained the situation.

"'Very well, Congressman,' said the clerk, 'but I am sorry you cannot remain with us.'

"'Oh, I would like to,' said Mr. Allen, 'but I can't disappoint my old friend. Well, good-by; and by the way, what is my bill?'

"Here he pulled out his wallet.

"'Oh, nothing at all, Congressman,' said the clerk. 'You were to have been the guest of the Bankers' Association at the hotel and your suite has been settled for.'

"Well, John Allen went out a sadder and a wiser man and hunted up a cheaper hotel."—St. Louis Republic.

ENGLAND'S GREAT BLACK ARMY

Dark-Hued Men Who Fight the Battles of Her Gracious Majesty.

The full strength of Great Britain's Indian army is 300,000 men, of whom 230,000 are native and 70,000 British soldiers. In addition to this military force, there are about 20,000 enrolled European volunteers, and a native police, officered by white men, nearly 200,000 strong.

Every regiment is divided into ten companies, each of which is usually made up of a different nationality—such as Goorkhas, Sikhs, Dogras, Pathans and Punjaubis. It is owing to this precaution that a combination of forces for the purposes of mutiny becomes almost impossible. The Goorkhas and Sikhs, whose loyalty is rated the highest, are, in some localities, permitted to constitute entire regiments by themselves.

The pay of the sepoy, or native soldier, is 18 shillings per month, with a gradual increase after three years' good conduct service. The pension system is particularly liberal, and is really the magnet which draws the native recruit. When a sepoy soldier falls in action his wives—and there are four of them—are all pensioned, as well as their young children. As regards the artillery branch of the Indian army, white men only are employed, both as commissioned officers and in the ranks, and the guns of all forts are entirely manned by Britons.

Of the native soldiers the Goorkha is the best, and many English experts believe that he is the best soldier in the world.—London Answers.

Waited for One Cent Change.

"I never felt so cheap in all my life," said Short, "as I did one day in a department store. I bought a book for 99 cents and while I was waiting for it a young woman, whose good opinion I valued, came up and we began to talk. The book was wrapped up and handed to me by the girl at the counter and after a short while the young woman asked:

"'Are you waiting for your change?'

"I replied that I was, but, in fact, I hadn't been thinking of it. I wanted to talk to her and made that an excuse for staying. After the usual delay, when it had passed entirely out of my mind, the girl at the book counter stepped up and said:

"'Here's your change, sir.'

"And she held a bright new cent in her open hand so that the other girl saw it. I felt a chill at once and just because it appeared to the young woman that I had been waiting all that time for a cent. I got a reputation for closefistedness that is still sticking to me."—Pittsburg News.

A Swap.

One evening at the Devonshire Club a New York friend was talking to Phil May, of Punch, about his youth.

"You seem pretty well contented with the world. You haven't the appearance of a man who knows what unhappiness means."

"Haven't I?" responded the artist with his odd little chuckle. "Let me tell you a very short and very true story. Not half a dozen blocks from where we are sitting I met a youngster one day with a big slice of bacon between two slices of bread in his hands. I was carrying a handsome walking-stick. The boy looked at my cane enviously, and I looked at his bacon hungrily. Our eyes met, and without speaking a word we swapped, and I needed the bread and bacon much more than he needed the cane."—London Truth.

Coxey Gives Food for Work.

Every man who applies at Coxey's quarry near Massillon, Ohio, can get work. All tramps have heard of Coxey and it is a favorite game of theirs to apply to him for work on Saturday afternoon. They are given good meals and comfortable beds, not having to work on Sunday. When Monday comes they make their escape. Two men tried this recently, but Jesse Coxey, a son of the "general," brought the runaways back at the point of a revolver and made them work out the price of the comforts they had received.

HUMOR OF THE WEEK

STORIES TOLD BY FUNNY MEN OF THE PRESS.

Odd, Curious and Laughable Phases of Human Nature Graphically Portrayed by Eminent Word Artists of Our Own Day—A Budget of Fun.

Coroner—Why are you so positive the deceased was accidentally killed? Perhaps it was a case of suicide.

Col. Bourbon—Youh seem to fohget, sah, that a quaht bottle full of liquor—full, I repeat, sah—was found in his overcoat pocket, sah.

Over the Limit.

"Your greatest enemy is whisky," said the parson to an incorrigible member of his flock.

"But," said the wayward one, "you have always told us to love our enemies."

"Yes," answered the good man, "but not to swallow them."

Sleight of Hand.

The Point of View.

Biggs—Figgs has the clearest head of any man I know.

Diggs—That's right; there is absolutely nothing in it.

Unmasked.

He—Who is that ugly old woman over there by the piano?

She—Oh, that's Mme. Cosmetique, the famous beauty specialist.

A Natural Question.

Four-year-old Harry, noticing that the clock had stopped, asked his father a question that has puzzled some older folk:

"Papa, when the clock stops does time stop?"

A Disastrous Smash.

"I understand it's a very disastrous smash."

"Yes, there isn't enough to pay the receiver's divvy."—Philadelphia North American.

The One Thing Needful.

Fair Customer—This cook book appears to be all right, with one exception.

Bookseller—Pray, what is that, madam?"

Fair Customer—It has no pictures in it."

Bookseller—Of course not, madam. One seldom sees a cook book with illustrations.

Fair Customer—But what's the use of telling us how to serve a dinner without plates?

About the Size of It.

"Money," said the political orator, "is a great lever, and——"

"That's right, mister," interrupted a man in the gallery, "it's such a great leaver that most of us can't keep it."

Two of a Kind.

Hix—What would you think of a man who divulged a secret intrusted to him?

Dix—Well, I should think he was on an equal footing with the man who intrusted it to him.

The Prettiest Picture.

Charming Hostess—Which do you consider the prettiest picture in this room?

Visitor—The one I can see now in the mirror before which you are sitting!—Meggendorfer Blaetter.

Very Similar.

"A good woman," said the lecturer, "is like pure gold."

"That's right," interrupted a facetious man in the rear. "Money talks."

Unappreciated Liberality.

Mr. White—Mis' Jackson, Ah paid ten dollahs foh dis here ring.

Miss Jackson—Hit am veby cute, Mistah White, but why didn't yoh git one ob dem kind dat cums in a popcohn package? Yoh know how Ah lubs popcohn."

Not as It Should Be.

The Parson—Learn to be content, my good man. The little mouths are never sent without food to feed them.

The Laborer (father of ten)—Ah, parson, but the mouths are sent to my home and the food to yours.—Chicago News.

Truly Surprising.

"Look," said little Bessie, who had never before seen a mule used for anything but hauling.

"What is it, my dear?"

"A man riding horseback on a mule."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

His Last Request.

The Captain—There is no hope! We are lost! It is now half-past 2; within an hour we will be at the bottom of the sea.

Rathkopfsky—Couldn't you manage to sink her by dree o'glock, captain? I owe Rosenberg here a hundredt dollars on a note dot falls due at half-past dree to-day, undt if de ship goes down before dot time, it let's me out of paying it, see?—Life.

In the Church Choir.

"Why can't you be obliging?" cried the facetious music rack. "The bells play when they're tolled. Come! give us a tune."

"No," grumbled the organ, in deep diapason, "I'll be blowed if I do."—Philadelphia Press.

Very Spicy.

Ida—When the hero saw her plight he climbed to the edge of the rock and clove the air.

May—My fellow has a less risky way of doing it.

Ida—Doing what, dear?

May—Why, when he wants to clove the air he goes out between the acts.—Chicago News.

A Change of Scene.

"Why is that Filipino running in that precipitate fashion?" asked the tourist.

"Oh," answered the native, gravely, "he's merely traveling for his health."—Washington Star.

Impossible.

Husband—Why do you persist in wearing shoes that pinch your feet?

Wife—Oh, I never could feel comfortable in a comfortable shoe.—Life.

A Tribute.

"I want to stop in front of this window," said Mr. Blykins.

"Why, it's full of millinery!" exclaimed his wife. "I didn't know you admired such things."

"I not only admire; I marvel. I take off my hat to genius, and the people who can get $20 apiece for a lot of bunches of odds and ends like those are qualified to give lessons to a Napoleon of finance."—Washington Star.

Some Other Kind Preferred.

"Your system is generally run down," said Dr. Kanard, the eminent specialist, "but I think I can promise a cure in a short time, if you follow directions. Would you prefer a home treatment?"

"I think not," responded Mr. Meeker, involuntarily lowering his voice. "It's—it's my home treatment, I am afraid, that really ails me."—Chicago Tribune.

Breath and Brush Act.

"Can you give a first-class polish to a pair of shoes?"

"Shud say so, boss. Why, when Ah polish a ge'man's shoes de ladies glance down at his feet to see if deh hats are on straight."

The Domestic Skeleton.

"Herr Merzer, what is there new from the seat of war?"

"Sir, I object to hearing any allusions to my family affairs!"—Der Dorfbarber.

Change the Style.

Mother—Look out you don't drop a stitch while you are knitting those stockings.

Daughter—Well, if I do they'll be drop-stitch stockings.

Not the Place.

Cholly—I think in me heawt——"

Daisy—Why, Cholly, you must be a freak. Every one else thinks in their head.

Like the Original.

An old family darky was being hauled over the coals for scratching the portrait of his past master with a stiff whisk broom.

"Marcus," said one of the family, severely, "what ever prompted you to do that mischief?"

"Pardon me, sah," responded the offender, "Ah jes cudn't help it. When Ah caught sight ob all dot dust on ol' marse's coat, Ah jes had to rush up en brush it off. Ah felt as dough ol' marse wud rap me wid his cane if Ah didn't."

About the Size of It.

Little Willie—Say, pa, when a man fails in business what is meant by his liabilities?

Pa—The sum for which his creditors get left, my son.

Willing to Oblige.

She—Ah, how nice it must be to be famous. How I wish I had a name——

He (interrupting)—Permit me to offer you mine.

Haunted.

Ida—I am afraid of this old house. They say skeletons hold high carnival in the next room.

May—But how can they get in here?

Ida—They might use skeleton keys.

A Prize Thought.

A teacher of music in one of the public schools of the South desired to impress the pupils with the meaning of the signs "f" and "ff" in a song they were about to sing. After explaining that "f" meant forte, he said: "Now, children, if "f" means forte what does 'ff' mean?"

Silence reigned for a moment and then he was astonished to hear a bright little fellow shout:

"Eighty!"—New Lippincott.

The House Habit.

"When," says John Muir in the Atlantic, "I asked Mr. Emerson's friends, if we were not going up into the grove to camp they said: 'No, it would never do to lie out in the night air; Mr. Emerson might take cold, and you know, Mr. Muir, that would be a dreadful thing.' In vain I urged that only in homes and hotels were colds caught, that nobody ever was known to take cold camping in these woods, that there was not a single cough or sneeze in all the Sierra. Then I pictured the big climate-changing, inspiring fire I would make, praised the beauty and fragrance of sequoia flame, told how the great trees would stand about us transfigured in the purple light, while the stars looked down between the great domes; ending by urging them to come on and make an immortal Emerson night of it.

"But the house habit was not to be overcome, nor the strange dread of pure night air, though it is only cooled day air with a little pure dew in it. So the carpet dust and unknowable reeks were preferred. And to think of this being a Boston choice! Sad commentary on culture and the glorious transcendentalism!"

His Best Ideas.

That the American "man with the hoe" does not find the life of the farm stultifying must surely be inferred from the words of an old tiller of the soil, who came across a classical volume and found in Plato a kindred spirit.

The good American farmer called upon a doctor, and was ushered into the library. At once the well-filled bookshelves drew his attention.

"Are you fond of reading?" asked the doctor, noting the wandering gaze.

"Well, yes," returned the farmer, modestly.

"I should be pleased to lend you a book to take home with you," said the other. "Just take any one that you think you'd like to read."

"Oh, I'm no good at selectin'," replied the old man. "You pick one out, doctor."

So the doctor, in a spirit of fun, gave the farmer a book written by Plato. The old man went his way, and at the end of a week reappeared with the book under his arm.

"Well," queried the doctor, "did you read the book?"

"Yes, I did," was the emphatic answer.

"And what did you think of it?"

"It was fust-rate," responded the farmer. "I've read it through from kiver to kiver. I never heard tell of this fellow Plato before, but all the same, I'm glad to find that the old chap has been writing up some of my very best ideas."

Curiosity Saves Life.

A package marked quinine was sent to a woman, but being curious she took it to a druggist who said it was arsenic. A like inquiry into some of the medicines offered will certainly detect the false from the true. For half a century Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has been curing indigestion, constipation and dyspepsia.

Unexplored Territory.

Leaving out of account the very imperfectly known regions of Central Asia and the interior of the northern parts of both North and South America, as well as the similar areas of Africa and Australia, there is an aggregate area of about 20,000,000 square miles of the globe as yet unexplored, and, therefore not working for its rent.

	Square miles.
Africa	6,500,000
Australia	2,250,000
North America	1,500,000
South America	500,000
Asia	250,000
Islands	500,000

Deafness Can't Be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Of a Different Family.

The society reporter of a daily paper had been detailed to procure the names of prominent persons in attendance at a performance of grand opera.

"I beg pardon, madam," she said, approaching one of the occupants of a private box, "but will you oblige me by giving your name?"

"Mrs. Archibald Jo Neeze," replied the lady.

"Pardon me," rejoined the reporter. "I did not quite catch the last name."

"Jo Neeze."

"May I ask how you spell it?"

"Certainly. J-o-n-e-s, Jo Neeze," haughtily answered the occupant of the box, and the reporter retired to the foyer to fan herself.

Europe's Highest Railway.

The highest mountain railway in Europe, leading to the top of the Gorner Grat, in Switzerland, situated between the Matterhorn and Mont Rosa, is about completed. It was begun in 1896. A train can take 110 passengers two miles above sea level. The power is furnished by the water which flows from a glacier, and is therefore most abundant in summer, when most needed.

Infection from Philippine Souvenirs.

Dr. Charles F. Mason, a volunteer army surgeon, writes from the Philippines to the Medical Record that there is danger of the communication of variola and small pox to friends of soldiers in this country through souvenirs sent to them. He says that these diseases are almost universal there among all classes, and that the people have their own looms in their homes and manufacture many varieties of fine "josi" and "pina" cloth, which are much sought after by American soldiers and by them sent through the mails to their friends.

THE HEALTH OF YOUNG WOMEN

Two of Them Helped by Mrs. Pinkham—Read their Letters.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am sixteen years old and am troubled with my monthly sickness. It is very irregular, occurring only once in two or three months, and also very painful. I also suffer with cramps and once in a while pain strikes me in the heart and I have drowsy headaches. If there is anything you can do for me, I will gladly follow your advice."—MISS MARY GOMES, Aptos, Cal., July 31, 1898.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—After receiving your letter I began the use of your remedies, taking both Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier. I am now regular every month and suffer no pain. Your medicine is the best that any suffering girl can take."—MISS MARY GOMES, Aptos, Cal., July 6, 1899.

Nervous and Dizzy

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to express my thanks to you for the great benefit I have received from the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered constantly from terrible sideache, had chills, was nervous and dizzy. I had tried different kinds of medicine but they all failed entirely. After taking three bottles of Vegetable Compound and three of Blood Purifier I am all right. I cannot thank you enough for what your remedies have done for me."—MISS MATILDA JENSEN, Box 18, Ogdensburg, Wis., June 10, 1899.

BABY'S BAWLS

MAM-M-MA!!
DON'T YOU HEAR BABY CRY?

Do you forget that summer's coming with all its dangers to the little ones—all troubles bred in the bowels.

The summer's heat kills babies and little children because their little insides are not in good, clean, strong condition.

Winter has filled the system with bile. Belching, vomiting up of sour food, rash, flushed skin, colic, restlessness, diarrhoea or constipation, all testify that the bowels are out of order.

If you want the little ones to face the coming dangers without anxious fear for their lives, see that the baby's bowels are gently, soothingly, but positively cleaned out in the spring time, and made strong and healthy before hot weather sets in.

The only safe laxative for children, pleasant to take (they ask for more) is CASCARETS. Nursing mothers make their milk mildly purgative for the baby by eating a CASCARET now and then. Mama eats a CASCARET, baby gets the benefit. Try it! Send for a 10c box of CASCARETS to-day and you will find that, as we guarantee, all irregularities of the little and big childrens insides are

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of an execution issued on a judgment rendered in the DeKalb circuit court on the 9th day of January, 1895, and to me directed by the clerk of said court, I will offer for sale at public auction and outcry, to the highest bidder, at the door of the court house in Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, on

SATURDAY, JUNE 9, 1900,

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following described real estate, situated in Auburn, DeKalb county, in the state of Indiana, to-wit;

Lot number two hundred fifteen (215), except thirty feet off the east end thereof, and lots number two hundred forty-nine (249), two hundred fifty (250), two hundred eighty-one (281) and two hundred ninety-eight (298) in the original plat of the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana.

And in case the rents and profits fail to bring the amount demanded to satisfy the judgment and decree aforesaid, interest and costs, together with all accruing costs, I will, at the same time and place, and in like manner as aforesaid, offer for sale, at public auction and outcry, to the highest bidder, all the right, title, interest and estate in fee simple of Lyman Lockwood, subject to the inchoate interest of Mary O. Lockwood, wife of Lyman Lockwood, in and to the above described real estate, or so much and such part thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the judgment and decree aforesaid, which is in favor of Sarah J. Pooler and against Harvey Clarke and Lyman Lockwood, upon which judgment, interest and costs there is now due the sum of four hundred eighteen and forty-one one-hundredths dollars ($418,41.)

Said real estate will be sold without relief from valuation or appraisement laws, and subject to the redemption laws of the state of Indiana.

JOHN H. HATHAWAY,
Sheriff of DeKalb County, Indiana.

—South Bend Times:—There is a man down in DeKalb county who would make a very creditable candidate for governor. He is not a professional politician, nor what might be called an eloquent speaker, but he is splendidly equipped with strong common sense. His name is Samuel S. Shutt.

—Mort E. Olds has sold the St. Joe News, which he has edited and published for the past thirteen years. Mr. Olds made the News a bright and newsy paper, and the new proprietor, L. J. Yeiser will doubtless keep it up to the standard, We extend a welcome to Mr. Yeiser to a place in the journalistic ranks of DeKalb county, and wish him success.

—Auburn Haymakers have received an invitation to attend a state pow-wow to be held at Kokomo on July 24 and 25. The pow-wow promises to be a big affair and will be largely attended by Haymakers from all over the state. There will be a sham battle, a representation of the battle of Tippecanoe. The committees an arrangements are at work on the big pow-wow of the Haymakers of Eastern Indiana, to be held at Gas City on the Fourth of July.

QUESTION ANSWERED.

Yes, August Flower has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers' and grandmothers' never thought of using anything else for Indigestion or Billiousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart Failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Sample bottles at O. P Barber's, Corunna.

—The big Utility paper mills at Hartford City burned last evening. The loss is about $180,000, insurance $110,000.

Last Tuesday was the Day to begin taking Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for that indigestion. If you didn't you had better ask H. B. McCord at his drug store. He will tell you just what's what for he is reliable and on the square.

CASTORIA.

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. The Kind You Have Always Bought

A Trip to Paris.

We noted briefly yesterday that Wilson Feagler had gone to Buffalo. Today we are able to announce that himself and brother Lester have started on what will be a novel as well as instructive trip to include a visit to Paris and other points in the old world. The boys expect to reach New York City next Sunday, where they already have arranged to work their passage across the ocean on a cattle ship. Landing on foreign soil the program, carefully mapped out months ago, will be followed, and the boys expect to see the big exposition and other sights at a very small outlay of cash. We wish them a pleasant trip and a safe return home.

Governor of South Dakota.

Krause's Headache Capsules are splendid; never failed to cure my headaches and save a world of suffering. I am recommending them everywhere. The druggists of Aberdeen, Hecla and Britton, Marshall county, all promised me to get them in stock. I give your address to every sufferer I meet. I am going to Colorado in June, and I shall do you good among the miners, nearly all of whom suffer from headache in that high altitude. Yours, etc.,

Celebrated Her Birthday.

Mrs. J. H. Weaver celebrated her fifty-eighth birthday yesterday, and in honor of the event Mr. Weaver arranged a surprise for her which was successfully carried out. About twenty-five of her old neighbors and friends were present to join in the festivities and it was one of those gatherings which all thoroughly enjoy. A present which Mrs. Weaver greatly appreciated was a bunch of fifty-eight carnations, one for each year of her life. Nice refreshments were served in three courses.

Child Swallows Lid of a Tin Can.

A very singular accident happened to little Grace, the seven-year-old daughter of William Coolman and wife, of Washington township, last Friday evening. The little girl was at home amusing the youngest child, a baby, and was using a small tin can for the purpose. She had the lid, which measured over an inch in diameter in her mouth, and while singing a lullaby song to the little one, swallowed the tin can cover.

This caused great excitement about the home and Dr. Schuman of this city was summoned. Upon examination he soon learned that the piece of tin had found its way to the child's stomach and there was no way to remove it except by surgical operation. It was apparently doing no harm, and the doctor thinks the gastric juice will in time destroy the metal.—Columbia City Post

His Life Was Saved.

Mr. J. E. Lilly, a prominent citizen of Hannibal, Mo., lately had a wonderful deliverance from a frightful death. In telling of it he says; "I was taken with Typhoid Fever, that ran into Pneumonia. My lungs became hardened. I was so weak I couldn't even sit up in bed. Nothing helped me. I expected to soon die of Consumption, when I heard of Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle gave me great relief. I continued to use it, and now am well and strong. I can't say too much in its praise." This marvelous medicine is the surest and quickest cure for all Throat and Lung Trouble. Regular size 50 cents and $1. Trial bottles free at H. B. McCord's Drug Store; every bottle guaranteed.

No Time to Think of His Soul.

An American Mother, writing in the February Ladies' Home Journal on "Have Women Robbed Men of Their Religion?" uses this anecdote in illustration of how men of today are neglectful of the welfare of their own souls: "After a revival in a village near Philadelphia a dozen young converts met regularly to compare their spiritual condition. Sam B—, a sickly lad, was conspicuously the most zealous among them. He could not make sure of his salvation. He prayed and agonized, and bemoaned his sins incessantly. A sudden death threw a sawmill, a widowed sister and her five penniless children on Sam's hands. He came no more to the conference.

"'Sam,' said one of his friends one day, 'how is it with you now? Are your calling and election sure?'

"'I hope so, I'm sure,' said Sam. 'But I've got my work to do now. I havn't any time to think of my soul.'"

Volcanic Eruptions

Are grand, but Skin eruptions rob life of joy. Bucklen's Arnica Salve, cures them, also Old, running and Fever Sores, Ulcers, Boils, Felons, Corns, Warts, Cuts, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Chapped Hands Chilblains. Best Pile cure on earth. Limit Removed.

By a vote of 433 to 238 the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church yesterday decided to abolish the pastoral time limit by which a minister has been able to remain in one charge not longer than five successive years. Thus one of the fundamental laws of the denomination and one of the principal features of the itinerant ministry is laid aside, and preachers may remain in places as long as the bishops appoint them. While still a pilgrim and a stranger, the Methodist itinerant hereafter can tarry more than five years, other conditions being favorable, for from section 3 of paragraph 173 of the book of discipline has been removed the five-year restriction.

"A Howling Success."

Wherever properly introduced Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as a cure for constipation, has met with phenomenal sale. Many druggists cannot say enough in praise of its merits, as well as its great popularity with the people. In 10c trial size and also 50c and $1.00, at H. B. McCord's.

BANNER SALVE, the most healing salve in the world.

BREAD 1,800 YEARS OLD.

It Was Baked in Pompeii Before the Eruption—Other Food as Old.

Sufferers from indigestion are advised to eat stale bread; the staler the better, they are told. There is in the museum at Naples some bread which ought to be stale enough for anybody. It was baked one day in August, 79 A. D., in one of the curious ovens still, to be seen at Pompeii, according to the London Mail.

More than eighteen centuries therefore, have elapsed since it was drawn "all hot" and indigestible from the oven. So it may claim to be the oldest bread in the world. You may see it in a glass case on the upper floor of the museum. There are several loaves of it, one still bearing the impress of the baker's name.

In shape and size they resemble the small cottage loaves of England, but not in appearance, for they are as black as charcoal, which, in fact, they closely resemble. This was not their original color, but they have become carbonized and if eaten would probably remind one of charcoal biscuits. When new they may have weighed a couple of pounds each, and were most likely raised with leaven, as is most of the bread in oriental countries at the present time.

The popular idea that Pompeii was destroyed by lava is a fallacious one. If a lava stream had descended upon the city the bread and everything else in the place would have been destroyed. Pompeii was really buried under ashes and fine cinders, called by the Italians lapilli. On that dreadful day in August when the great eruption of Vesuvius took place showers of fine ashes fell first upon the doomed city, then showers of lapilli, then more ashes, and more lapilli, until Pompeii was covered over to a depth in places of fifteen and even twenty feet.

Other comestibles besides the bread were preserved, and may now be seen in the same room in the museum. There are various kinds of grain, fruit, vegetables and even pieces of meat. Most interesting is a dish of walnuts, some cracked and ready for eating, others whole. Though carbonized, like all the other eatables, they have preserved their characteristic wrinkles and lines.

Important to Mothers.

The manufacturers of Castoria have been compelled to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to familiarize the public with the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. This has been necessitated by reason of pirates counterfeiting the Castoria trademark. This counterfeiting is a crime not only against the proprietors of Castoria, but against the growing generation. All persons should be careful to see that Castoria bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, if they would guard the health of their children. Parents, and mothers in particular, ought to carefully examine the Castoria advertisements which have been appearing in this paper, and to remember that the wrapper of every bottle of genuine Castoria bears the fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, under whose supervision it has been manufactured continuously for over thirty years.—Phila. Bulletin.

As Pleasant as Maple Syrup.

Most remedies have something unpleasant to taste and in consequence many people, especially children, dread the dose and put off entirely or delay taking the medicine that can do them good. Not so with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin—everybody likes its taste and when taken it will cure constipation and all kinds of "stomach troubles" In 10c, 50c and $1.00 sizes at H. B. McCord's.

Our Saturday Evenings.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Our own state, Indiana, as we have always maintained, is full of interesting things, and the Hoosiers need not go outside their own state to look for the wonders or the beauties of nature. Nor is our state devoid of some things to remind us of the quaint and curious in the old world. So we copy a letter to the Indianapolis Press, which contains facts that will surprise many, and instruct all. It is a fit addition to our own experiences in Orange county, that were published some time since in this column.

PICTURESQUE INDIANA.

ST. MEINRAD, IND., May 9.

A confidential pointer to the Indianian who is figuring on his summer vacation—don't go away from your own state. By way of suggestion: Catch an excursion to Louisville, go down the Ohio river to Evansville, and then come back—mostly overland. Two weeks of the best scenery, most delightful experiences and good eating Indiana affords, should not cost more than $15 to the fellow that has to economize.

There is a decidedly wrong impression prevalent that there is nothing worth seeing in Hoosierdom. Too many Indiana people think they have to go to Germany to see wooden shoes; that a trip to old Italy is necessary to come in contact with monastic life; that no point closer than the Hudson affords a river ride that is worth the taking, and that they must go west to see scenery, and get way off north to find a place where the sunshine filters through forests whose monotony is not even broken by the yelp of a dog. All this and much more can be found in Indiana at a nominal outlay of time and money. It might be added that none of these home attractions are controlled by a trust, or the "money power."

Few Indianians know that there are communities in Indiana where the old-fashioned cross-roads post still point the traveler his way and where the sun is the standard of time and dials are used; that there are sections where German or French is spoken almost to the exclusion of English, and that the Indiana state seal picture every Indiana child gazes at with a feeling between admiration and fear that the only big tree in sight—which the woodman is belabboring, is going to fall on him, is to be had "in life"—minus, of course, the buffalo galloping off across the plains. A still smaller per cent have even dreamed that there are monks and old St. Benedictine monastic life right in their very back yard. All of this is off the beaten path of travel and can only be reached by the idler.

The sun was just sinking as the old German driver and his horse that had left Lincoln City at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and had made fifteen miles in the remarkable time of four hours, entered the picturesque hill country near the Perry county line. The drive had been made pleasant by the quaint old German driver maintaining a taciturn silence only broken by a "Yaw" when a direct question was put at him. By way of an interpolation it might be stated that in holding his tongue he was no exception to the run of the people through the insulated settlements of the wooden-shoe country.

As we entered the hills the smoke from the "spring clearings" could be seen rising from every hillside. The little old log cabin in the clearing that all have thought was only preserved in picture books was found here and there, stuck up against the hillsides, and the wood-chopper was seen going over the half-cleared areas to his cabin. The farm bells were proclaiming that supper was ready, and the very generously proportioned families of children were at work splitting the wood for morning and drawing the water from the old sweep wells, and pouring it out of the identical old oaken bucket that has been preserved to memory in song. The queen of the cabin generally came down the hill to the road side and asked the venerable old patriarch of the highway—whom the English wives knew as John, and the Germans further back in the hills called Hans—if he had "got the mail over to Dale."

The scenery became more primitive, the forests more superb, the hills steeper and the valleys narrower and more frequent, until it seemed that one-half of the distance was in going straight up and down. The damp of the evening that began to settle acted as an impervious cover for the smoke from the clearing, and as the old German and his horse drew their cargo on top of the hills the next valley seemed to be under a beautiful gauze of a curtain that was dense and thick in a hit-and-miss fashion that remined the "cargo" of the old time Castile soap that used to have several streaks of red running in circular abandon through it. Through the misty portions of the veil the most picturesque hillsides in Indiana could be seen from the hights. Here and there the lonely cabin of the woodman and the little brook were revealed. There was a dip down the hillside and the cloud of smoke became a covering for a panorama of blissful quietude that forced the remembrance of the first stanza of Gray's Elegy.

Novel Uniforms for Baltimore & Ohio Employes.

The Baltimore & Ohio railroad management has introduced an innovation in uniforming its entire corps of train and station employes.

The conductors' suits are made of navy-blue serge, three-button cutaway coats, embellished with gold B. & O. buttons and monogram "B. & O." in shield device on coat collar, with appropriate cap.

Baggagemen and brakemen, sack suit of dark blue "Slater" cloth and gold B. & O. buttons, with shield device on coat collar and cap to match.

Train porters, sack suit of same material as trainmen, with silver buttons and trimmings and cap of khaki.

Station masters, "Slater" cloth suits, Prince Albert coats with two rows of five gold buttons on breast and gold metal badge on cap.

Stationmen, dark blue "Slater" cloth suits, with square-crown black silk caps; and station porters with brown corduroy trousers, dark blue flannel shirts with initial "B. & O." in white across the breast, and khaki caps.

These attractive uniforms will enable the traveler to readily distinguish train and station employes, who at all times will be prepared to courteously render any service and furnish all information possible to patrons of the road. 20

Beware of a Cough.

A cough is not a disease but a symptom of Consumption and bronchitis, which are the most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated as soon as this cough appears are easily cured. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has proven wonderfully successful, and gained its wide reputation and extensive sale by its success in curing the diseases which cause coughing. If it is not beneficial it will not cost you a cent. For sale by H. B. McCord.

Cured a Running Sore

"I had a running sore on my breast for over a year," says Henry H. Richards of Willseyville, N. Y. "and tried a great many remedies, but got no relief until I used Banner Salve. After using one half box I was entirely cured. I cannot recommend it too highly, and will never be without it in the house." H. B. McCord.

THE DECISION OF JUDGE HIGGENS.

A decision has been rendered by Judge B. S. Higgens, of the Boone county circuit court, where it was taken on change of venue for trial, in a case which has excited much general interest.

Zimri C. Lewis of Indianapolis brought against suit proprietors of a beer garden, alleging that the place was a nuisance, and depreciated the value of his property as a residence.

The place had been run for two seasons, and is fitted up in the most attractive manner, many thousand dollars have been spent in beautifying the ground and maintaining attractions of various kinds.

The Judge has given a verdict for the plaintiff. In his decision he uses the following language:

"The nuisance that is sought to be abated in this case does not belong to the class of business such as mills, factories, etc., that are necessary to the thrift, welfare and prosperity of the community, nor does it belong to that class of trade without which mankind would suffer great inconvience, and, being possessed of which, the daily and ordinary comforts of life will be supplied, and by the encouragement of which good order, sobriety and public morals will be fostered; but rather is it, that it consists in the daily and hourly violations of the criminal laws of the State.

"The injury to the plaintiff does not consist in a physical injury to his dwelling-house to the extent of a single farthing; but it does consist in the fact that he and his family are deprived of rest and sleep until the hour of 11 o'clock for six nights in the week and during five months in the year; and it does consist in the fact that before his own door, in plain view of the plaintiff and of his wife and children, acts of impropriety and public indecency, both on the part of men and women, occur; and it does consist in the fact that the ears of the plaintiff and his wife and children have been assailed with vulgarity and profanity by a trespasser almost upon the portals of his own home; and this injury and nuisance is produced by the open, public, repeated, continued and persistent and intentional violation of the criminal statutes of the State."

NEWS IN BRIEF GUSTS

BLOWN IN FROM ALL PARTS OF THE EARTH.

An Important Record of the Week As Told by the Telegraph—Latest from Foreign Shores—Crimes, Casualties, Fires, Etc.

To Convert All London.

Leonard Weaver, who is said to be an American evangelist, who converts people by wholesale, announces that he is about to begin a great crusade in and about London. He says he will erect eleven huge tents in various parts of the city and hold nightly evangelistic services, supported by local choirs and orchestras. He promises to provide one place in the heart of London where he can preach to 9,000 people at once, and says he expects to talk to at least 2,000,000 people during his work there.

The St. Louis Strike.

St. Louis special: Postmaster Baumhoff reported to United States Attorney Rosier that the Federal injunction to prevent interference with the postal cars on the lines of the St. Louis Traction Company had been repeatedly violated. The Postmaster thinks that substantial aid from the United States Government to insure the prompt operation of mail cars is imperative.

Nothing resulted from the conference between the Governor and Police Board.

Fatal Railway Wreck.

The engine attached to the west-bound fast mail train on the Lake Shore Road went into the ditch at Westfield, N. Y., and Engineer Reagan and his fireman, William Leighbody, were killed. The train for some reason not yet ascertained, was taking a sidetrack at Westfield when the accident occurred. The engine was derailed and badly wrecked, blocking the main line of the road. The train carried no passengers.

It Was Accidental.

An accidental shooting in which nine persons were painfully hurt and several more slightly injured, took place at Terre Haute, Ind., near the close of a performance given by the Buckskin Wild West Company. The accident was caused by the accidental discharge of a Winchester shotgun in the hands of Elmer Mendenhall, one of the performers, who was engaged in fancy shooting.

Offices Turned Over.

Frankfort (Ky.) special: Republican Auditor Sweeney has notified Democratic Auditor Coulter that he is ready to turn over the State Records and the office in the State-house without waiting for action by the Court of Appeals. The transfer will be made at once. It is understood the other Republican officials will do likewise within the next day or two.

Many Fishermen Drown.

A dispatch from Astoria, Ore., says: A heavy gale caught many fishermen. Boats were overturned, and the following are known to have drowned: Mike Pelloma, Albert Johnson, John Varanzaug and Sakey Korpela. It is almost certain that others were drowned. Patrols are out scouring the river for upturned boats.

Postoffice Robbed.

The postoffice at Gilead, twelve miles from Peru, Ind., was entered by burglars, and the safe was forced. A number of blank money orders, with cash and stamps, were taken, but the postmaster declines to make public the amount of the loss. The safe was entirely wrecked. The work was evidently that of professionals.

Must Pay the Claims.

It is reported from Constantinople that the United States has presented to the Turkish Government another demand that the Armenian indemnity be settled immediately. Secretary Hay confirms the report.

Certain Checks Exempt.

Commissoner Wilson of the Internal Revenue Bureau has held that bank checks issued by clerks of United States and state courts by direction or authority of the court are exempt from taxation.

Cotton Takes a Fall.

Price, McCormack & Co., member of the New York stock, cotton and produce exchanges, have failed. Their failure caused great excitement on change, and cotton went down thirteen points.

A Call to Arms.

Cape Town special: President Kruger, it is announced here, has issued a proclamation saying he will defend Johannesburg, and calling upon all the Boers to fight to the bitter end.

Bank Robbers Secure $10,000.

The Peninsular Bank at Williamsburg, Va., was entered by robbers, the safe blown open and about $10,000 in money taken. There is no clue to the robbers.

Mafeking Wild with Joy.

A dispatch from Mafeking, dated May 17, the first message, except Col. Baden-Powell's dispatch, forwarded since the relief of the town, says the place was wild with joy, that many people wept as they greeted their deliverers, and that the scene as the troops traversed the streets baffled description.

No Plague in Honolulu.

The steamer Australia brings Honolulu advices to May 15. At that time there had not been a case of bubonic plague for forty-six days and business had resumed its former activity.

Telephone Linemen Strike.

About 425 linemen employed by the Cleveland (Bell) Telephone Company in that city struck for an eight-hour day without a reduction in wages. The men now receive $2.50 and work ten hours. The company offered to compromise on nine hours, but this was rejected.

Find Copper Ore in Missouri.

Recently copper ore was found in the neighborhood of Van Buren, Mo., and investigations have been made which show that the ore exists in immense quantities sufficient to rival the largest copper mines in the world. A company is being organized to work the mines.

BUSINESS SHOWS DECLINE.

Trade Not What It Was a Year Ago—Opinions as to the Cause.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: "Business is not what it was a year ago, but men do not agree in defining the difference. The working force, then increasing fast, is now decreasing. Works are stopping to relieve excessive output in manufactures of paper, cotton, wool, leather and some forms of steel, while prices are suddenly reduced for the same purpose in lead, wire and nails. What seems to some 'merely spring dullness,' others think 'the beginning of reaction.' The remedy for one difficulty does not fit the other, and there is more need than usual for close attention to the meaning of events. In place of the wild speculation in securities which swelled exchanges a year ago there has come such liquidation that twenty preferred industrial stocks have sold this week at prices averaging $88.14 a share, though the same stocks sold in April last year for $99.66 a share, and twenty common have sold this week for $38.49 which sold last year at $76.99, double the price. The industrials have reached the lowest average they have ever known. Failures for the week have been 117 in the United States, against 147 last year, and 30 in Canada, against 17 last year."

SEE A THEFT IN A MIRROR.

Detectives Witness a Street Robbery While in a Barber Shop.

Detective Oscar Holty and his partner, Considine, were being shaved in a shop at Madison and Carpenter streets, Chicago, when a horse on the street was seized with blind staggers and a crowd gathered about the animal. Holty was looking into the barber's mirror and saw two young fellows pushing about in the crowd. Then the detective saw one of the young men place his hand in the pocket of a spectator and pull out a gold watch and chain. Considine's attention had also been drawn to the young fellows, and, through the mirror he witnessed what Holty saw. The officers were about to leap from their chairs when a commotion was caused in the street, and just then the same two young men walked hurriedly into the barber shop. Holty and Considine quietly settled back in their chairs, and when the barbers had finished with them they permitted the newcomers to take their places. They also were shaved, and were about to depart when the detectives arrested them. They gave their names as John Dammers and Robert Dugan. In the latter's possession was found the watch and chain.

WERE READY TO BREAK JAIL.

Plot of Prisoners at Chillicothe, Ohio, Discovered on the Eve of Success.

A fortunate chance prevented a desperate attempt at jail delivery at Chillicothe, Ohio, in which there would probably have been some fatalities. The county jail now contains as desperate a lot of criminals as ever were within its walls. The other night a man named Pummell, who has been serving a short jail sentence, was released, and informed the sheriff that every arrangement had been made for a wholesale jail delivery, the prisoners concerned being four burglars named Canter, Smith, Boston and Foley. The men were at once brought out, searched, and placed in the dungeon. An examination showed that they had sawed two bars clear through, so that they could be removed at a moment's notice, and had provided themselves with boxes filled with pepper to throw in the eyes of the guard and blind him. Where they got their saws is a mystery. The pepper was secured from their meals from day to day, and had been saved for a long time.

Jeweler and Editor Fight.

As the result of an old grudge, H. S. Devoid, a Guthrie, Ky., jeweler, and J. Frank Hutchinson, editor of the Guthrie Graphic, had a shooting affray, during which Devoid shot Hutchinson twice through the lungs and once in the arm. Virgil Marshall, a witness to the fight, was accidentally shot and fatally wounded.

Coast Swept by Tidal Wave.

Reports from outlying States show that the recent earthquake in Mexico, which was mild in the capital, was severe on the Pacific coast. The second shock was followed by a tidal wave many feet high, enveloping every coast town of Colima and Jalisco. At Penitas and Zapotillo fishing boats were swamped and several natives drowned.

Stolen by Gypsies.

At Bowling Green, Ohio, a pair of gypsies stole the 4-year-old child of William Frederick. The little fellow was playing out in the yard when two strangers came along, caught up the baby and fled. A posse of citizens was formed and the men were pursued four miles through the country before they abandoned the boy in a wood.

New Theater for St. Louis.

A new theater designed especially for the Castle Square opera company is projected for St. Louis. Under present plans it will be completed for the winter season. It is to be situated at Tenth and Olive streets, near the Century Theater, and will seat 3,500 persons.

Famous Old Theater Burned.

The old Buckingham Theater, No. 226-230 Green street, Louisville, now occupied by the Albin Furniture Company, was almost totally destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $50,000 to stock and $15,000 on building.

Methodist Bishops Are Chosen.

After voting for a week to break a deadlock the Methodist general conference in Chicago elected as bishops Dr. David H. Moore and Dr. J. W. Hamilton. This was accomplished on the seventeenth ballot.

Palmistry Drives to Suicide.

Because the life line on her hand was broken before it reached the base of the thumb and the reading of the cards foretold a violent death, Mrs. Jeanie Patriquin committed suicide at her home in Chelsea, Mass.

Young Evangelist Disappears.

Samuel Wyatt, a young English evangelist of good family, who is missing in Chicago, leaves queer letters indicating that he has committed suicide and making wild charges against prominent men in England.

Fire Loss About $30,000.

The Diamond Breaker, owned by the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Company at Wilkesbarre, Pa., was destroyed by fire. The loss is about $30,000. It is supposed the fire was accidentally started by tramps.

British Take Botha.

It has been officially announced in London that Hutton's mounted infantry surprised and captured Commandant Botha and twenty-three others thirty miles northwest of Kroonstad.

Death in St. Louis Riot.

Fierce rioting has prevailed in St. Louis. One man was shot dead in his own door by a bullet fired by a motorman. Many were wounded in conflicts between the police and strike sympathizers.

Kills Relatives of Fiancee.

William Raines and his son were killed near Cordele, Ga., by a Mr. Gleaton, who intended to marry Miss Raines. Gleaton went to the home of Miss Raines, accompanied by a friend. The girl's father interfered and tried to induce her to remain at home. A quarrel arose and the young woman's brother rushed up with a pistol and began shooting at Gleaton and his companion. Gleaton shot and killed the father and brother and mortally wounded a neighbor who tried to stop the fight.

HUSBAND AS "STAR BOARDER."

Judge in Cincinnati Court Makes an Unusual Suggestion.

Judge Pfleger at Cincinnati has solved the knotty problem of Joe Hoenschemeyer, the Court street grocer, and Mary, his wife, who left Hoenschemeyer and took their children. As the wife and mother positively refused to live with her husband and he must support the little ones and cannot be deprived of their society, the court suggested: "Let Mrs. Hoenschemeyer take her husband to board with her and charge him enough to keep the family." The proposition to change the status of husband to that of "star boarder" was taken under consideration by Hoenschemeyer. The father has a right to call on his children at reasonable times. Both testified that they quarreled from five to twelve times every day.

BIG PAPER PLANT BURNS.

Explosion of a Gas Engine Causes a Loss of $100,000.

The big strawboard and paper box board factory of the Utility Paper Company at Hartford City, Ind., covering five acres of land, was almost destroyed by fire. At 7 o'clock in the evening the 150-horse power gas engine exploded and the flames soon spread through the plant. The efforts of the local fire department to combat the flames were futile on account of the plant being located outside the corporate limits and a great distance from the fire hydrants. The loss of the company is estimated to be $100,000 on the buildings and contents. One of the large machines alone cost $30,000. The loss is believed to be fully covered by insurance. The capacity of the concern had but recently been doubled and this is the second big fire within six months.

Mutiny on Warship.

The crew of the Texas mutinied on the ship's last cruise, which recently ended at the Brooklyn navy yard. The commanding officer was insulted, the officers and men guarding the mutineers were assaulted and one petty officer was injured fatally. Orders for the court-martial of ten of these men have been issued.

Dog Causes a Fatal Accident.

Superintendent E. A. Donkin of the Dakota division of the Great Northern Railroad was killed in an unusual manner. He was on his way to Inkster on his railroad gasoline motor, when a small dog crossed in front of the machine, throwing him and the car from the track. The accident occurred in front of the depot at McCanna, N. D.

Moves to Oust Clark.

Gov. R. B. Smith of Montana, who had just returned from California, announces that he had decided to disregard Lieut. Gov. Spriggs' appointment of Senator Clark to the vacancy created by that gentleman's resignation, and that he has himself appointed Maj. Martin Maginnis of Helena to the vacancy. Maj. Maginnis wired his acceptance.

Bloody Shooting in Kentucky.

A bloody fight occurred at Manchester, Ky. Felix Davidson, a deputy sheriff, started out to arrest Millard Philpot, who had been discharging a revolver promiscuously around the streets. When he attempted to arrest Philpot, the latter turned his pistol on the deputy and fatally shot him.

Negro Kills and Burns Girl.

Near Ryan, I. T., Rufus Bunor, a negro, killed a 9-year-old girl, who was living with his family, and attempted to conceal the crime by burning the dead body. He was caught in the act and an attempt made to lynch him. Bunor was rescued and landed in jail at Ardmore.

Hawaii's Former Ruler Dying.

Queen Liliuokalani has been suffering for three years from cancer of the neck. It is hoped the soft, mild climate of Honolulu will effect a cure, but the queen's intimate friends say she is going home to die.

Two Killed and Seven Hurt.

Two men were killed and seven injured, three fatally, by the explosion of the boiler of the locomotive attached to southbound passenger train No. 21 on the Illinois Central Railroad at Dubois, Ill.

Dayton Strike Declared Off.

The street car strike at Dayton, Ohio, has been settled and declared off. The cars are running on schedule time. The settlement was made by concessions from both sides.

WILD DAY FOR WIND.

FOURTEEN TORNADOES SWEEP OVER KANSAS.

Many Prairie Counties Are Visited—Breaking Up of Hurricane Center Reduces Force of the Wind—Small Loss of Life Results.

This season Kansas has had fourteen tornadoes in one day. This beats all records in the tornado line, even in Kansas. According to weather forecasters, however, the unusual number of these storms is precisely the thing that prevented the most wholesale destruction of life and property that ever visited the State. Originally it is believed that one great tornado was formed and that almost at once it split up into subdivisions. This segregation reduced the force of the wind, so that only two people were killed by the storms and twenty injured. A great deal of damage was done to crops and many cattle and horses were killed. Over the whole Southwest as far as Texas the storm wave spread, and as far as human prescience could discover conditions in that section of the country were never so favorable for great loss of life and property. For some mysterious reason the storm wave widened and the strength was reduced by 50 per cent or more.

The first storm formed in the neighborhood of SS. Peter and Paul's Church, five miles north of Ellinwood, Kan., at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon, destroying one house completely and damaging several other farm houses and outbuildings. Almost simultaneously another tornado formed about four miles east of Great Bend and, moving in a northeasterly direction, demolished fences and barns and killed considerable live stock. Here a farm house and building were demolished, but the family escaped. Another storm at about the same time struck near Pawnee Rock, thirteen miles southeast of Great Bend, and wrecked several buildings and destroyed crops. Considerable damage, with no loss of life, is also reported at and near Claflin, in the northeast part of Barton County, and at Frederic, in the western part of Rice County. Rain and hail following the storm did great damage to crops in some localities.

Tornadoes, but not of great violence, occurred in parts of Nebraska, near Siler, Monroe City, Fayette, Oregon and Rich Hill, Mo. A terrific windstorm struck San Antonio, Texas, at 4 o'clock Monday morning, doing great damage.

The Kansas storms have set the weather forecasters to work. Predictions on the whole are very favorable for this year. United States weather bureau experts, of course, refuse to dabble in the future beyond forty-eight hours. Any distant glimpses of the coming weather are regarded by them as academic alchemy of the rankest sort.

FOURTEEN TORNADOES IN KANSAS IN ONE DAY.

VISIT THE PRESIDENT.

Boer Peace Envoys Are Received at the White House.

Messrs. Fischer, Wessels and Wolmarans, the three Boer envoys, who are now in this country, visited the White House Tuesday morning, according to previous arrangement, to pay their respects to the President. No official status was given the visitors and they presented no credentials.

The envoys were received in the blue parlor, no one being present but themselves, the President and Secretary Cortelyou. At first the conversation touched upon a variety of subjects. The Boers talked about Washington; told how they admired the city and the President escorted them to the porch at the rear of the executive mansion, where a splendid view is obtainable of the Washington monument and the Potomac river. President Kruger's name finally was mentioned and the visitors then stated their purpose in coming to this country. They said they understood that what Secretary Hay had told them was final and that the position of the United States was that this country could not interfere in the present struggle in South Africa. The President confirmed this view. He said that the action he took some time ago (when, at the request of the Government of the Transvaal that this Government should intervene, he offered his good offices to England to bring about peace) he did with great pleasure in the hope that it might possibly bring the conflict to an end. This offer had been declined by Great Britain, and, he said, there was nothing further that the United States could do in the premises.

The envoys intimated that they were glad to feel they had friends in this country and then bade the President good-by.

CUBAN POSTAL OFFICERS.

MAJOR BATHBONE, Director of Ports.

POSTMASTER THOMPSON, Of Havana.

BISHOPS ARE CHOSEN.

Methodists Elect David H. Moore and J. W. Hamilton.

Dr. David H. Moore of Cincinnati, editor of the Western Christian Advocate, and the Rev. John W. Hamilton, also of Cincinnati, corresponding secretary of the Freedmen's Aid and Southern Education Society, were chosen bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church on the seventeenth ballot at the general conference in Chicago Tuesday. The balloting was: Total number of votes, 665; necessary to choice, 444; D. H. Moore, 534; J. W. Hamilton, 510; J. R. Day, 104; H. Spellmeyer, 71; T. B. Neely, 41; J. F. Berry, 22; C. J. Little, 13; scattering, 23.

DR. HAMILTON. REV. MOORE.

The men who were given the highest honor in the gift of Methodism in being elevated to the episcopacy were escorted to the platform and presented by Bishop Warren amid tumultuous applause.

By an overwhelming vote the general conference on Wednesday decided to abolish the pastoral time limit, by which a minister has been able to remain in one charge not longer than five successive years. Thus one of the fundamental laws of the denomination and one of the principal features of the itinerant ministry is laid aside, and preachers may remain in places as long as the bishops appoint them.

An event of great interest and far-reaching importance was the action of the conference in changing the words "lay man" to "lay member" wherever they occur in the organic law of the church. This admits women to the conference and as a result Methodism begins the new century on as liberal a platform concerning women as the latter can ask. Two measures such as the admission, first, of the laity to equal rights and privileges in the quadrennial conference, and, second, the admission of women, are sufficient of themselves to rank the present conference as an epoch-making one in the history of the Methodist Church.

MUTINY ON THE TEXAS.

Ten Men Are Court-Martialed at the End of a Long Cruise.

The crew of the warship Texas mutinied on the ship's last voyage, which has just concluded at the Brooklyn navy yard. The commanding officer was insulted, the officers and men guarding the mutineers were attacked and one petty officer was injured fatally. Orders for the court-martial of ten of the men have been issued.

This is the most startling case of mutiny that has taken place on board a United States vessel in years. The Texas has been on a long cruise, during which it touched at Galveston and the Bermudas. The crew was in a condition of insubordination during the whole cruise and the Navy Department officials are at a loss to understand why severe measures were not adopted at the very first uprising. The cause of the trouble is said to have been rum secured at Galveston.

FACTS ABOUT THE CENSUS.

When the young man with the winning smile rings the door bell and announces that he is a census enumerator, if you have the slightest hesitancy in accepting his word for that fact, just ask him to show you his badge. If he is really Uncle Sam's agent he will unbutton his coat and display a silver badge just like that shown in our illustration. This confers upon him all the powers of an officer of the United States Government, and as such he is entitled to all due respect. When his labors are over Uncle Sam generously is going to allow him to keep the emblem of his authority as a souvenir.

CENSUS BADGE.

The director of the census will make an effort to obtain exact returns from every gin and press in the South of the number of bales of cotton they handle during the present season. No gin is too small or insignificant to be overlooked, and the information sought is so important to the Southern people that the enumerators and special agents anticipate their helpful cooperation. The work will begin on the 1st of June, and if successful it is expected that a similar cotton census may be taken every year. The price of cotton is always based upon the volume of the crop, and from the beginning of the planting until the last bale is pressed thousands of people throughout the South are studying the subject with anxious care in order to determine whether to sell their crop at the ruling prices or wait for an advance. The Agricultural Department has a thorough system that is generally reliable. Several private agencies, newspapers, transportation companies and commercial organizations have undertaken the same work, but their estimates are always hundreds of thousands of bales apart. There is only one means by which the exact amount of the crop can be obtained, and that is from the ginning establishments. Every bale has to be ginned, whether it is consumed on the plantation or sent to Europe, and the director of the census proposes this year to count every bale that goes through the ginneries of the country.

-:—:-

Mr. Wu, the Chinese minister at Washington, has issued a proclamation to the Chinese residents of the United States, explaining the purpose of the census and requesting them to give all the information asked for by the enumerators without hesitation. Ten years ago the enumerators found it difficult to obtain information from the Chinese, who suspected that it was to be used against them, and Director Merriam, anticipating similar difficulties this year, requested Mr. Wu to allay the suspicion of his fellow countrymen.

-:—:-

For the first time in the history of the national census there will be an enumeration this year of animals employed in cities and towns. Heretofore the live stock census has been confined exclusively to farm animals, horses, cows, sheep, etc., but Director Merriam has ordered the enumerators to ascertain the number of carriage and saddle horses, draft animals and other live stock owned in cities, towns and villages.

-:—:-

It may be a matter of interest to superstitious people that the enumeration of population this year will be made on Friday—the 1st of June happening to fall on that unlucky day.

CONGRESS

The Senate on Thursday considered the postoffice appropriation bill. The committee amendment for the extension of the pneumatic tube service created some debate and was under discussion when the measure was laid aside for the day. Mr. Wolcott, chairman of the committee on postoffices and post roads, vigorously attacked the committee's proposition to appropriate $750,000 for pneumatic tube service, declaring the extension of the service was unnecessary and the appropriation a waste of public money. Mr. Mason quite as vigorously supported the proposition. An amendment of Mr. Butler to reduce by 10 per cent the amount to be paid the railroads for the transportation of mail was rejected, 11 to 41.

In the Senate on Friday nearly the entire day was devoted to the pneumatic tube system service in the postoffice appropriation bill. The debate at times was sharp and almost personal. The appropriation was defended by Senators Chandler, Mason, Carter and Wellington and opposed by Senators Allison, Hale, Tillman, Lodge and Wolcott. Senator Morgan introduced a resolution to investigate the Panama Canal Company, and in a speech severely criticised that company. Senator McCumber made a speech in favor of the retention of the Philippine Islands, during which Senator Tillman took issue with him over an assertion that the people of the South were glad the confederacy was unsuccessful. The House devoted the day to the consideration of bills reported by the committee on war claims and in committee of the whole favorably acted upon a bill to appropriate $200,000 to pay ex-Confederate soldiers for horses and other property taken from them in violation of the terms of Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox.

After a spirited debate, by the decisive vote of 32 to 16, the Senate on Saturday laid on the table the whole proposition relating to the transportation of mail by the pneumatic tube system. An effort was made to secure the adoption of an amendment to appropriate $225,000 to carry out existing contracts for the service in New York, Brooklyn, Boston and Philadelphia, but no action was taken upon it, special orders superseding the appropriation bill. The closing hours of the session were occupied in accepting from the State of Missouri statues of Benton and Blair, located in Statuary Hall of the capitol, and from the Grand Army of the Republic the statue of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, located in the capitol rotunda. The House devoted the day to unveiling of the Grand Army statue of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant.

A pyrotechnic discussion of the status of the Boer commissioners now in Washington was precipitated in the Senate on Monday by a resolution offered by Mr. Allen (Pop., Neb.) extending to the commissioners the privileges of the floor of the Senate during their sojourn in the national capital. The resolution was defeated by a vote of 36 to 21, but not until after a sharp controversy between its author and Mr. Davis, chairman of the committee on foreign relations. The postoffice appropriation bill was passed, the amendment to carry out existing contracts for the pneumatic tube service being agreed to. An effort was made by Mr. Morgan (Ala.) to displace the Spooner Philippine bill with the Nicaragua canal bill as the unfinished business, but it failed by a vote of 21 to 28. A bill to create the southern division of the southern district of Iowa for judicial purposes was passed. In the House two important labor measures were passed under suspension of the rules, one to extend the eight-hour law to all laborers under contract on Government work, the other to prohibit interstate traffic in prison-made goods by bringing them under the jurisdiction of the public powers of the State. Mr. Payne, floor leader of the minority, offered a joint resolution for a sine die adjournment of Congress on June 6. It was referred to the ways and means committee.

On Tuesday the Senate heard Mr. Spooner in support of his resolution giving the President full power over the Philippines until the suppression of the rebellion. Received the credentials of Senator Clark of Montana, on the appointment of Lieut. Gov. Spriggs, and allowed them temporarily to lie on the table. Adopted a resolution by Mr. Allen asking the President to send to the Senate translations of the constitutions of the South African republic and the Orange Free State; also one by Mr. Jones of Arkansas directing the Secretary of War thoroughly to investigate the operations of the North American Trust Company in Havana; also one by Mr. Allen calling upon the Secretary of War for information regarding conditions in the Philippines. The House devoted the entire day to the Alaskan civil government bill. An amendment to reduce the number of judges in Alaska from three to two was defeated. The conference report on the army appropriation bill was adopted, the Senate amendment for the library at Manila having been stricken out.

The Senate on Wednesday agreed to the conference report on the army appropriation bill, passed the Morgan resolution calling upon the Secretaries of War and Navy for information regarding the cost of the transportation of troops to the Philippines, and devoted the rest of the day to debate on the Cuban postal frauds, with Messrs. Platt (Conn.), Spooner and Hale as speakers. The House passed resolution for sine die adjournment June 6; also resolution authorizing committee on ways and means to sit during recess of Congress to frame bill reducing war taxes; also the Neely extradition bill.

OLD AGE CREEPING ON.

Oh! lay thy hand in mine, dear!
We're growing old;
But time hath brought no sign, dear,
That hearts grow cold.
'Tis long, long since our new love
Made life divine,
But age enricheth true love
Like noble wine.

And lay thy cheek to mine, dear,
And take thy rest;
Mine arms around thee twine, dear,
And make thy nest.
A-many cares are pressing
On this dear head,
But sorrow's hands in blessing
Are surely laid.

Oh! lean thy life on mine, dear,
'Twill shelter thee!
Thou wert a winsome vine, dear,
On my young tree.
And so, till boughs are leafless
And birds are flown,
We'll twine, they lay us, griefless,
Together down.

A Western Girl's Story.

"AFRAID!" I cried out with a laugh. "Why on earth should I be afraid?"

And I suppose my face must have mirrored forth the careless independence of my spirit, for my brother's rugged countenance brightened up as I spoke.

We lived alone upon a solitary road, miles away from any human dwelling place, in one of those antique, gable-ended farmhouses which look so picturesque to an artist's eye in the summer time and so indescribably desolate when November gales are howling around the chimney tops or winter snows are heaping up their feathery pearl upon the doorstone; we—that is, the old bedridden aunty, my brother Robert and myself. As for a servant girl, dear me, when I become rheumatic or lose the use of my limbs I might need one, not before.

We had just received $100 from the railroad people for the year's wood which Bob had cut and hauled to the junction—$100, all in nice, clean, crackling tens—and Bob and I and Aunt Jemima all agreed—for once entirely unanimous—that so much money ought not to remain over night in the house.

So Bob was taking the $100 to the Ottarsfield bank, twenty miles away, over a rough and uneven bridle road. And I and Aunt Jemima were left alone.

In spite of my reassurance Aunt Jemima persisted in going to sleep with a flatiron and two pokers under her pillow.

I sat before the fire until past 9 o'clock, finishing a pair of gray mixed stockings that I was knitting for Bob. And then, rising with a yawn, I looked out of the windows. It was raining and——

Merciful heavens! I started back with a low cry, as I saw a white, wild face pressed suddenly against the outer side of the pane—a face made paler still by the contrast of a heavy black mustache, and hair the most raven jet I ever saw.

My first impulse was to run and hide, my second to face the matter out.

"What do you want?" I asked, opening the window a little way. "Who are you?"

"I am a belated traveler. I need food—rest—rags to bind up my hurt foot. See!" And then I saw that one of his feet was bleeding.

I hesitated an instant. He perceived my doubt.

"You are afraid to let the vagrant in," he said, bitterly. "Well, I don't wonder much. But there's no danger. Let me in, as you have a dear father or brother of your own. Give me but a crust of bread, a drink of milk. I will go on my way with the earliest dawn of the morning."

My decision was taken at once. His pale face, his blood-stained foot, his piteous voice, so unlike the professional whine of the regular mendicant, all appealed to my womanly pity. I remembered my brother's caution, but I also remembered that there was an unused one-story wing, on the north end of the house, fitted up in a rude sort of way for the occasional sleeping place of the additional farm hands that we needed in the height of the season of harvest.

"Go around to the farther door," said I. "I will let you in."

I admitted him accordingly. Gaunt, pale and limping, he came in.

"There is a bed," said I. "And here is food. While you eat I will get salve and a bandage for your foot."

When I returned he was eating as greedily as if he had not tasted food for a week, and drinking long draughts of coffee.

"You are hungry," said I, kneeling to my task.

"I hope you may never be as near starvation as I have been this day," he responded, in a low, thrilling voice. "Thank you, young woman—the foot feels easier now."

So I left him.

I went to bed and fell fast asleep in less than fifteen minutes.

The sound of the old wooden clock striking 3—or something else—roused me, and, opening my eyes, I saw the shrouded light of a dark lantern in the room, and by its glimmer three men were searching the contents of the old hair trunk that stood underneath the window.

I started up with a scream—probably the most imprudent thing I could have done—but I did not stop at that instant of terror to measure the consequences.

"Stop that girl's squeaking pipe," muttered a low, threatening tone, and the next instant an iron hand was upon my throat, my eyelids seemed staring from their sockets, and a horrible death by suffocation seemed closing around me.

In the self-same second, however, I saw the deadly white face of the man I had so recently succored and fed, in the doorway. I heard the click of a pistol being cocked. My first impression was that he belonged to the gang—that he had made an entrance into the house through my weak pity, and afterward admitted his comrades, but ah! how unjustly I judged him.

"Let go that girl's throat, or I'll send a brace of bullets through your brain!" he shouted, and instantaneously I was free. "Now, then, get out of this! Drop everything. Quick! Do you see this pistol? It carries charges enough to send every one of you to kingdom come quicker than lightning."

His eloquence was of a most persuasive nature. One of the men dropped a red leather pocketbook of papers that I recognized as Bob's; another let fall a calico bag containing Aunt Jemima's six silver teaspoons, and all three tumbled out of the door in hot haste. My unknown friend calmly examined the fastenings.

"The bolt has been pried away," said he, "but I can fix it in a minute. And even if I did not, I hardly think they will be likely to come again after the lesson I have read them."

"How can I ever thank you!" I cried, almost hysterically, in my mingled terror and gratitude.

"I was thinking to-night as I watched you bind up my foot that I would like to do something for you," he said in a low tone, "and I have done it. Good-night."

Early the next morning I carried a tray of breakfast in to him, but he was gone. From that time to this I have never seen or heard of him, except that once in an illustrated newspaper I saw his portrait as the detected murderer of half a dozen travelers on the Omaha plains—an accomplished villain—a cold-blooded wretch, who thought no more of extinguishing the sparks of a human life than others do of killing a fly—so read his biography—and I shuddered to recollect how utterly we poor women were at his mercy on that December night, and of how he spared and shielded us.

Bob never knew of that night's adventure. Aunt Jemima never knew. It is a secret that I keep to myself.

A HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

The Oldest Letter.

Probably the oldest letter in the world is the letter of the Panbesa, written fifteen centuries before Christ, to his friend Amenemapt, the scribe.

The manuscript is of perishable papyrus, and it is amazing that it should have survived for more than thirty centuries and still be legible.

It is preserved in the collection of the British Museum. It has been several times translated during the present century. It presents an interesting picture of life in Egypt in the time of Rameses II. It is more in the nature of a literary production, a poem composed in celebration of the visit of Pharaoh to the city of Pa-Rameses than an ordinary letter of to-day.

Panbesa "greets his Lord, the scribe Amenemapt, to whom be life, health and strength," and then goes on to describe the verdant fields, the thrashing floors, the vineyards, the groves of olives, the orchards of figs; the great daily markets with their fish and water fowl and swarms of purchasers.

The citizens had their "sweet wine of Khemi, pomegranate wine, and wine from the vineyard," and to these they added "beer of Kati."

There was music in plenty furnished by the singers of the school of Memphis.

On the whole, Pa-Rameses seems to have been a pleasant place to live in. "The lesser folk are there equal with the great folk," and Panbesa writes that its maidens were in "holiday attire every day," with locks "redolent of perfumed oil."—Kansas City Journal.

Books for Summer Reading.

"Oh, dear!" said Mrs. Parkington as she began making plans for her summer campaign, "I wish I knew just what books to take. I haven't room 'to have and to hold' all of them, nor time to devour that mess of 'Red Pottage' and hardly to finish my 'Day's Work.' I wonder if George would like me to take 'The Gentleman from Indiana' along. He might say, 'Vengeance Is Mine.' However, he can hardly object to the 'Little Minister.' I must put in a Bible and prayer book. I wonder what he'd like to take for himself. There he is. I'll ask him."

Which she did.

"There's one I've got to take," said George, "and it won't do to put it into the trunk. I shall want it along with me."

"Which is that?" she asked.

"The one bound in leather and stamped. The contents are printed and published in Washington."

"Oh," she said, "some stupid old government publication."

But the book he meant was his pocketbook.

Another Edison Invention.

The manager of the electrical exposition in Philadelphia asked Mr. Edison to send on a phonographic cylinder setting forth some of his latest ideas of electrical interest. Mr. Edison complied in his own way. The message was as follows:

"My Dear Marks—You ask me to send you a phonographic cylinder for your lecture this evening and to say a few words to the audience. I do not think the audience would take any interest in dry scientific subjects, but perhaps they might be interested in a little story that a man sent me on a phonographic cylinder the other day from San Francisco. In the year 1873 a man from Massachusetts came to California with a chronic liver complaint. He searched all over the coast for a mineral spring to cure the disease, and finally found down in the San Joaquin valley a spring the waters of which almost instantly cured him. He thereupon started a sanitarium, and people all over the world came and were quickly cured. Last year this man died, and so powerful had been the action of the waters that they had to take his liver out and kill it with a club. Yours truly,

EDISON."

A Fortune for a Single Flower.

The purchasing power of money in the seventeenth century is shown by an article in the Ladies' Home Journal, on the tulip craze in Holland, which reached its height about 1634. At a sale of bulbs, about that date, a single one of the Viceroy variety was purchased by delivering to the seller two hundred bushels of wheat, four hundred bushels of rye, four fat pigs, eight fat oxen, twelve fat sheep, two hogsheads of wine, two barrels of beer, five hundred pounds of butter, one bedstead with pillows, mattresses, blankets, etc., one thousand pounds of cheese, one suit of clothes, and one silver goblet. The money value of the bulb was one thousand dollars, but as the purchaser did not have the cash the seller was willing to accept its equivalent in the form just recited, notwithstanding that it was somewhat bulky and diversified.

Studying a Prodigy.

At Indiana University a 19-year-old boy who possesses extraordinary powers of arithmetical calculation is under investigation to determine, scientifically, the nature of his mental processes. It has been found that a tenacious memory underlies much of his singular power, the rapidity of his calculations depending upon the great quantity of number relations which he has memorized, as well as upon the short cuts that he has invented.

Paid the Doctor to Come Back.

A physician in Scott County, Kansas, recently moved to another part of the State because he could not make both ends meet in his practice, but his services were so badly needed in the old field that the citizens circulated a petition asking the county commissioners to appropriate a bonus of $500 annually to the doctor on condition that he should return. The commissioners made the appropriation, and the doctor has gone back to his former home.

Chief Source of Amber.

Gold of the Baltic Sea, as amber is often called, is found in various places on the globe, but nowhere in such abundance as on the shores of the Baltic from Memel to Danzig, and there principally on the coast of the oblong piece of land jutting out into the sea between the Kurische and the Frische Haff. It is, in fact, a vegetable product, a fossil gum of a coniferous tree, and from time immemorial it has been used as a jewel by many a fair lady.

Railroading Sixty Years Ago.

Among the curiosities in the new railroad museum at Dresden is a proclamation printed in 1839 warning passengers that trunks cannot be forwarded unless they are brought to the station at least an hour before the departure of the train.

Divorces in European Cities.

Copenhagen's divorce rate is higher than that of any other European city—572 per 100,000 marriages per year. The figures for Paris are 362, for Berlin 302, for Vienna 190, for Buda-Pesth forty-five.

Collection of Heads.

A French professor is said to be the owner of a collection of 920 heads, representing the various races of people on the globe.

A gratuitous falsehood is probably one that gives itself away.

Dignity may stoop to conquer, but it never grovels in the dust.

DOINGS OF WOMEN

THE DANGEROUS ARGUMENT.

ANYONE who has the privilege of visiting in many houses, at such times as the families are off dress parade and have on their everyday manners as well as their everyday clothes, must have been impressed with the fact that the most dangerous foe that threatens the peace of any home is the argument. By the side of that insidious and deadly enemy, the things that we have been accustomed to consider as the greatest menace to domestic peace and concord become as innocuous and harmless as an exploded bomb. Like the poor, we have the argument always with us. In the homes where it is permitted to flourish one can always be furnished at a moment's notice. Like an orchid, it feeds on air, and requires nothing to support it. Let one member of a family make an assertion, and it is equivalent to throwing down the gage of battle. Someone is sure to take it up, and a free-for-all war of words ensues. There is nothing upon which they will not argue. Politics, religion, books, the drama, are of course always fruitful themes, but the list can be indefinitely extended to take in everything under the sun.

The right of free speech in the family, like the right of free speech in the government, is one of the things that are admirable in theory, but of doubtful virtue in practice. Of course we can always defend ourselves by saying that our argument is an intelligent interchange of views, but the truth is that there isn't one time in a hundred that an argument, no matter how sanely begun, or how temperate it was at the start that doesn't end in loss of temper, and more or less bitter personalities. None are so stupid as those who do not think just exactly as we do, and we are apt to clinch our arguments by some reference to the mental status of our opponent, that we are sorry to remember half an hour later.

The most surprising thing about our clinging to this prolific mother of strife is that nobody ever accomplished anything by it, or carried a point. "A man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still," says the old adage. Likewise a woman. Only more so. Let her have to martial all her resources to combat you in an argument, and your change what was before merely an impression into a conviction she is ready to defend with her life. The effect of this on home life is nothing less than disastrous. It makes the hearthstone the scene of perpetual wrangles, the dining table a bloody battleground, where every question is fought out to a finish, and the nursery a place where the children quarrel and fight over their games like little savages.

It is not too much to say that family jars and disagreements would be almost impossible if the argument could be eliminated from daily life. The woman who can barricade her house against an argument, has fortified it against foes from within and without.—New Orleans Picayune.

Paris Woman Editor.

La Fronde was the first daily newspaper published for women by women. It is published in Paris, and was founded by Mme. Marguerite Durand, wife of the deputy. Published at a sou, it contains four fairly large pages—being about the same size as most of the Paris "dailies"—and probably about half this space is occupied by matter which would interest men as well as women, such as home and foreign politics, literature and the drama, finance and sport—although sport is treated mainly from a woman's standpoint. On the other hand, the heading "The Home," is so unfamiliar in a French newspaper as to give it a very distinctive meaning. La Fronde shows a strong interest in the welfare of working women—among whom it circulates largely—and has organized a special department for the benefit of the female "unemployed."

Education for Girls.

The question of how girls should be educated is one that is attracting a vast deal of attention in this last year of the century. An hundred years ago, it was thought to be amply sufficient, if a young woman knew how to read and write and understood the duties of the household. Those treasured letters of our great-grandmothers give ample evidence that their knowledge went no further, not even to the point of spelling. The development of the public school has changed all this, and now the young woman that has not at least gone to a high school is the exception, even among those of slender means, while very many of those that can afford it obtain the advantages of college education. Others are sent to "fashionable finishing schools," where they learn chiefly the art of being utterly useless in the world. For that matter, a girl is rather apt to learn to be useless at a high school, but the mothers that complain of this have nobody but themselves to blame.

Best Age for Men to Marry.

Edward Bok, writing in the Ladies' Home Journal, on "A Boy for a Husband," contends that "no young man under 25 years of age is in any sense competent to take unto himself a wife. Before that age he is simply a boy who has absolutely nothing which he can offer to a girl as a safe foundation for life happiness. He is unformed in his character, unsettled in his ideas, absolutely ignorant of the first essentials of what consideration or love for a woman means. He doesn't know himself, let alone knowing a woman. He is full of fancies, and it is his boyish nature to flit from one fancy to another. He is incapable of the affection upon which love is based, because he has not lived long enough to know what the feeling or even the word means. He is full of theories, each one of which, when he comes to put it into practice, will fail. He is a boy, pure and simple, passing through that trying period through which every boy must pass before he becomes a man. But that period is not the marrying time. For as his opinions of life are to change, so are his fancies of the girl in the world to make him happy. The man of 30 rarely weds the girl whom he fancied when he was 20."

To Gain a Plump Arm.

Thin, scrawny women will have a hard time this summer unless they begin at once to make themselves ready for warm weather frocks. We are not only promised collarless gowns, but elbow sleeves as well, and she of the thin arm is looking aghast. Here is an exercise to make the arms plump: Stand erect and carry the arms straight out at the sides parallel with the shoulder. Clench the hands and make the muscles tense the entire length of the arm. Now twist the arms very slowly from the shoulder to the hand as far forward and backward as possible. This will strengthen and develop the muscles the entire length of the arm, but it must be practiced very slowly. If repeated regularly three times a day, giving fifty twists each time, it will increase the arm perceptibly in a month.

Linseed Oil for Corns.

Have you ever tried linseed oil for corns? It is excellent. Soak a piece of cotton wool in the oil, lay it on the corn, cover with a piece of oiled silk, which must be tied on so that the oil may not escape, and leave till morning. A few nights of this treatment softens the corn so much that it can easily be removed.

A solution of boracic acid applied in the same way as the linseed oil to corns relieves them, because it reduces the inflammation. To make the solution, pour one pint of boiling water on one ounce of boracic acid, and stir till dissolved. Bottle, and when cool it is ready for use.—New York Telegram.

Cleaning Fine Lace.

Occasionally a piece of fancy work on the lace order does not show soil enough to justify sacrificing its lacy newness to the process of washing. If such work is laid away for a week in a heavy book between blue tissue paper, having had rubbed into the soiled places calcined magnesia or pipe clay, it will come out cleaned and brightened by the process. This is a good way to treat Battenberg and point lace work which has become dingy or yellow.—Woman's Home Companion.

You will remember the perplexities in which we were formerly involved in the selection of a cycling costume. This one question prevented many girls from cycling with their brothers or young women with their husbands. To-day one wonders how so simple a thing can have caused any embarrassment. There is now only one way to dress while cycling—that is to wear the tailor-made costume habitually worn by Englishwomen on all sporting occasions—skirt down to the ankles and blouse chemisette over which is a jacket matching the skirt, says the New York Telegram. Many fantastic costumes have been invented, skirts with pleats, corsages with yoke of embroidered leather. These are the mistakes of dressmakers, who consider themselves constantly bound to invent new shapes to please their customers.

In making buttonholes it is a great help if a tiny strip of stiff white paper is cut just the least bit smaller than the buttonhole and placed through the hole, so that the sewer has but one at a time to deal with. If the material be dark it is a decided help in more clearly defining the edge and thus saving eyesight, as well as preventing any catching of the threads on the other side of the opening.

A useful dressmaking hint relates to the fastening of the various vests and fancy fronts so much worn. Often these hook over in almost inaccessible places, and upon an eye or ring that is difficult to find. Dressmakers now, wherever it is possible, sew the length of the waist, across the shoulder or down the underarm seam, a single strand of fine silk cord. Wherever the hooks strike this cord it finds a fastening, a welcome change from the elusive eyes and rings.

A piece of inch-wide white satin ribbon sewed inside the neckband of a bodice protects the throat from the defacing mark that is a common result from the wear of the prevailing high dresses collars. It is not intended that the ribbon shall show from the outside.

In some of the daintiest foulard and India silk gowns have reappeared the sprigged hand embroidered and tambour undersleeves; anyone fortunate enough to have these sleeves on hand will now find a chance to use them again.

In the shops are sold any number of lace or embroidered undersleeves that may be put with almost any gown, and which are to be used in silk as well as in muslin bodices.

One source of trouble in wash dresses, it goes on to say, as well as frequently with others, is in using too fine a machine stitch which causes the seams to pucker.

Thrown Down Again.

"I have always been a reader of your poetry," began Mrs. Gushe.

"I am glad," replied Algernon Charles Mystic, "that some one understands me."

"Oh, but that is what I have been hoping to meet you for. I wanted you to explain."—Philadelphia North American.

Would Do in His Absence.

"Dobley has just bought the Century Dictionary for his wife."

"Yes; he said something might come up she'd want to know about some time when he didn't happen to be at home."—Life.

Girlish Playfulness.

"I wrote that girl three letters asking her to return my diamond ring."

"Did you get it?"

"Finally she sent me a don't-worry button."

Kindness Cures a Bad Habit.

Horses often have what is called the vice of shying, that is, of starting suddenly at the rustle of a leaf or a piece of paper, or at the approach of any object to which they are not accustomed. Clearly this is the remnant of an instinct inherited from their wild progenitors in the steppes or prairies, where the sudden rustling of a leaf might indicate the presence of a wolf and where everything that was strange was, therefore, suspicious.

It is idle as well as cruel to beat a horse for shying. That only increases his alarm, and may easily reduce him to the state of terror in which he loses his head entirely. Horses in that state seem to lose not only their heads, but their perceptive senses, and a horse in that condition may dash headlong against a stone wall. The habit of shying, when once formed, is difficult to cure, but it may almost always be prevented by such consistent kindness of treatment as to overpower the inherited instinct of instant flight from possible danger in which the habit originates.—Our Animal Friend.

Revenue Stamp Tax.

It appears to be the wish of all parties now, that the stamp tax for an internal revenue, which was arranged to secure the increased funds to carry on the Spanish war, should now be done away with. We do not now need the money, or at least not all of it, and the most inconvenient parts of the law should be repealed. It is a great nuisance as well as an expense to be obliged to put a stamp on every little article made, such as eighths, quarters and halves of a cent. If any part of this law is retained it might be on large transactions such as deeds, mortgages and other transfers of property. Instead of meeting this issue and settling it at once, congress has appointed a committee to talk it over this summer. Next December it may or may not be brought up, and eventually acted on.

Congressman Robinson of Indiana has the right idea. He says this is only a trick to skip the responsibility and keep the law in force longer and raise money not needed He quoted from the debates of May and June, 1898, and showed that Messrs. Dingley, Payne and Cannon, republican leaders, had promised the country that the stamp tax was a war measure and would be repealed as soon as the Spanish war was over; that hostilities had ceased a year and a half ago; that the surplus, as estimated by Secretary Gage for 1900, is $70,000,000, for 1901, $82,000,000, and the total in the treasury, $300,000,000, including gold reserve; that the treasury anticipated interest on bonds and loaned money to banks; that the only proper relief was a reduction of the surplus by a repeal of the stamp tax, and the people would not longer be deceived.

Keasy-Waters.

Married, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bartels, west Fifth street, Auburn, on Saturday, May 26, 1900, Mr. W. E. Keasy and Miss Lina Waters. The ceremony was at 8 o'clock in the evening, performed by Rev. Meese, the bride and groom standing in front of a lovely bank of flowers, ferns and plants. The bride wore a lovely dress of tan cloth trimmed with white passamenterie; the groom wore the conventional black. After the ceremony light refreshments were served. Mr. Keasy is an industrious young man, formerly of Ligonier but for some time employed at the Eckhart factory in the blacksmith department. The bride is a most worthy young lady who has since early girlhood made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Bartels, who have reared her with kindly care and judgment. She received a number of appropriate gifts from neighbors and friends. They will remain citizens of Auburn, as we are pleased to note. The wedding was a quiet one. With the exception of the immediate family there were present the groom's brother, Nolan Keasy of Ligonier, and Miss Effie Smith; and Mrs. Chas. Sheets of Fort Wayne.

Latest Naval Fights.

A queer mistake occurred in Philippine waters recenty. The United States has a number of small gunboats cruising among the islands, and one of them sighted a good sized steamer one evening, and noticed she was trying to get away. She was hailed and ordered to stop, but instead she kept going off. Several shots were sent after her, and the strange vessel fired back. But at last she was compelled to lay to and our men boarded her and learned she was a Spanish steamer chartered by an American officer to take him and few of his recruits to join their regiment at a distant point. They thought the American gunboat was a Filipino pirate. No one was hurt, but the people on the stranger boat, including a number of Filipino passengers, were badly scared. The men on the American gunboat enjoyed the change; as they were tired of idle life, the excitement of the chase and firing was a relief.

Story of a Sheep.

In the spring of 1885, upon the farm of S. S. Shutt near Spencerville, Mrs. Shutt took under her kindly care a small twe lamb which had been given up as a probable subject for burial. It was weak and sickly, but with close attention soon recovered and until the death of Mrs. Shutt was one of her most favored pets about the farm. This sheep is still on the Shutt farm, and by the way one of the most valued of Mr. Shutt's earthly possessions, but a point in connection worth mentioning is that for fourteen consecutive years the animal has been sheared by the same man, D. W. Wasson, an old-timer at the business. We don't believe there is another instance of the kind in the state.

THAT FIELD DAY CONTEST.

Fort Wayne Flunked and Wanted a Hole to Hide In.

Preliminaries had been agreed upon and Auburn was expecting a manly meet and fine field day at Fort Wayne. Principal Lane of the Fort Wayne high school had certified that their men were all in good standing and with one exception had attended the entire year; the one excepted had been in school about three months. Principal Brown of the Auburn school certified the same except as to one who had attended seven weeks. No time limit had been agreed upon. The entries had been published in the Fort Wayne papers and none of our men were protested. Programs were distributed on the grounds in which all men were properly entered. Auburn entered the contest with nine men; Fort Wayne had seventeen. Auburn had no official; Fort Wayne had all of them—three judges, three timers and one starter.

Fort Wayne was to pay the visitors' expenses, and the first exhibition of their great littleness was in the form of a telegram received about an hour before the start on the 10:44 train—"Eat your dinners before you start." The feeling produced by this message was aggravated at every turn of the deal. A delegation of one man met the boys at the Fort Wayne depot, and he was evidently not burdened in bringing a welcome over the bridge. Others were observed sizing up the visitors and evidently made a report favorable to Auburn, as the "committee on reception" soon disappeared and we were left to find our way as best we could to the woods two or three miles away.

No preparations had been made for the events. The vaulting and jumping were to be done on a track as hard as a pavement. This might have been all right for all the Fort Wayne men were able to do, but for the nine-foot vaults, nineteen-foot broad jumps the Auburn boys were prepared to make it would be ruinous. We looked around for the $75 cup, for which Auburn people had put up the required amount, and were told that it had not been purchased, but could be attended to later. They evidently intended to keep it in Fort Wayne.

After waiting an hour beyond the time the Fort Wayne manager got upon a high moral plane and posing as a self-constituted censor of clean athletics made an astonishing exhibition of asinine kicking, finally announcing that the field day would not go on unless our seven weeks' man was disbarred. Disgusted with the dirty treatment our team withdrew. From Fort Wayne's experience it was evident to them that they were no match for the Auburn boys. Their manager begged off, saying "I want you to realize that our contestants are only school boys." Judging by his talk we were led to believe they only had a kindergarten down there. The score would have been, as they well knew: Fort Wayne (as always in the past) 0; Auburn (as always the whole thing) 135 this time.

Due credit should be given the better element of the Fort Wayne association and Principal Lane, who represents the manly element of the high school department. The disgust and chagrin toward the Fort Wayne management were manifested in a way very gratifying to Auburn.

Club Notes.

Saturday was "Guest Day" with the L. L. C., the last of the club year, and nearly every member was present with her guest making a goodly company. After the usual opening exercises the first item on the program was a talk by Dr. Lida Leasure of Angola, who is an honorary member. This was a "talk" indeed, being of a chatty nature and was a commentary on the fads and fancies of fashionable dress of today, and it abounded with delicate puns and witty sentiments, and was very enjoyable throughout. The speaker, however, was suffering with a sore throat which caused her to shorten her talk somewhat.

This was followed by a charming letter from Miss McTighe of Las Vegas, N. M., in which she described her journey to her present home and gave interesting notes of the country through which she has recently traveled. Mrs. Zimmerman gave an interesting paper on the relation of "The United States and Foreign Powers." She treated of the diplomatic relations to some extent and gave some very interesting bits of diplomatic history of our country which will add very much to the knowledge already gained during the club year now so nearly ended.

After current events the club was formally adjourned, but was invited to remain for a social time. In a short time a committee appeared on the scene bearing plates of delicious ice cream and cake which they proceeded to serve. This committee consisted of Mrs. Eliza Schaab, Mrs. Nettie Eckbart and Mrs. Wildred Olds. They had also previously handed each member and her guest a carnation as they entered the parlors.

The club was pleased to have with them Mrs. A. S. Leas of Ann Arbor' Mich., who is an honorary member and who addressed the ladies in a few minutes talk. It was at the home of Mrs. Leas that the L. L. C. was organized a little more than eighteen years ago. There was present as a guest Mrs. Franklin of Cleveland, O., who is also a club woman. The ladies separated to go to their several homes very much regretting that this was the last of several very enjoyable "Guest Days" given by the L. L. C. during the past year. The club will meet with Mrs. Guild next Saturday.

A Close Call.

Saturday afternoon about five o'clock Mrs. D. N. Myers had a thrilling experience that she will never forget. She had been out east of town to visit her people, the Carpers, and was driving home. When she came to the Wabash railroad track she did not notice a wild west-bound engine and caboose that was flying down toward her, and before the last wheel, the left hind one, had cleared the track the engine struck it and smashed it to splinters. Luckily the horse did not run, at least she did not let it get away, and she was not thrown out, nor hurt. Someone came along on a bicycle and hurried to town and told Mr. Myers, who at once drove out there. He found Mrs. Myers still sitting in the wrecked buggy to which the horse was still attached. She seemed a good deal frightened, but was all right after getting home. But it was a blood-curdling experience she will never forget.

Republican Convention.

Next Wednesday occurs the republican county convention, which will be held in Waterloo. Plans have already been made for this convention, and it is expected to be the largest ever held in this county by the republicans. Numerous committees have been appointed by the local organization of the republicans, and good music has been engaged for the day. The convention will be held in the town hall and a great many visitors can be accommodated with seats. The hall has nearly 500 opera chairs, and as there are to be 272 delegates there will be plenty of room for the visitors, as also will be placed nearly 200 chairs on the stage for the use of spectators.

The ladies nickel society of the Presbyterian church will serve the dinner at the armory on the day of the convention and a first-class meal will be served for twenty-five cents.

No Right To Ugliness.

The woman who is lovely in face, form and temper will always have friends, but one who would be attractive must keep her health. If she is weak, sickly and all run down, she will be nervous and irritable. If she has constipation or kidney trouble, her impure blood will cause pimples, skin eruptions and wretched complexion. Electric Bitters is the best medicine in the world to regulate the stomach, liver and kidneys and to purify the blood. It gives strong nreves, bright eyes, smooth velvety skin, rich complexion. It will make a good-looking, charming, woman of a run-down invalid. Only 50 cents at H. B. McCord's Drug Store.

Notice of Final Settlement.

Another Waterloo Fire.

About 2:30 Sunday morning fire was discovered in the rear of a block of buildings on the east side of Main street at Waterloo, just south of the McClellan bank building, and though the firemen and citizens responded promptly and made a hard fight the buildings were burned to the ground, together with all their contents. The fire originated in the room occupied by the bowling alley and rapidly spread to the buildings on the north, south and east. Several families occupied rooms on the second floors and barely escaped with their lives, losing all their belongings.

The principal losers were Levi Hartman, buildings; Wm. Mutzfield, building; Frank Smith, stock of groceries; John Topper, notions; Frank Zirwes and Richard Till, buildings; A. H. Hamilton, photograph gallery and household goods: Frank Miller and Mr. Smith, household goods. The total loss is estimated at about $4,000, about two-thirds of which is covered by insurance. The fire was evidently of incendiary origin and an effort will be made to ferret out the perpetrator.

Mrs. William Stafford Dead.

Mrs. Mary J. Stafford, wife of Wm. Stafford, died yesterday morning at 7 o'clock, and the funeral will be held at the home on Thursday, the 31st, at 10 a. m., interment in Woodlawn. She had been a sufferer for some years, so much that it had affected her mind. For a time she was under treatment at Longcliff, a few months ago was brought home greatly benefited, though not entirely cured. As her health continued critical, her death was not unexpected.

BUTLER.

William Rook, a gentleman, who came here recently in the interest of the Butler Co. and lived on the south side, died rather suddenly last Saturday. We have not learned anything at this writing about the funeral or burial.

Arthur Aldrich died last Saturday after a long illness. His obsequies took place last Monday and was attended by a large number of people.

Mrs. Hall Blaker, living near Newville, was buried last Sunday. Her death was very tudden.

Sam Miller of Stafford has bought the old school house that stands on East Ninth street in which a great many of the middled-aged of our place and vicinity attended school in the fifties and sixties to Bert Lamson, David Jay, Dr. McGaw and others, will erect a substantial brick dwelling and move to town.

The U. B. people have raised their church and put a wall under it and are again occupying it. It makes a decided improvement.

A barn owned by Mr. Devinney, near Butler, was burned by lightning last Sunday.

Died, near Orland, Ind., May 22, 1900, after a few hours of illness, in his sixtieth year, John P. Jadwin. John Packer Jadwin was born in Carroll county, Ohio, June 26, 1840; removed with his parents, Andrew and Mary Packer Jadwin, to Indiana in 1849, settling on what is now known as the Knisely farm in Troy township. When Butler became a town about 1855 he sold his forty acre farm which he had purchased with a horse, wagon and $15 in money, and moved to Butler, occupying a dwelling on the present site of A. G. Jones' residence. In 1862 he enlisted in the 100th Indiana volunteer infantry and served until June '65, participating in many hard-fought battes. In January, 1864, he was united in marriage to Lucina A. Taylor of Orland. To this union survive him his wife and three children, all grown and married, and three grandchildren. His funeral took place from his late residence, Rev. Griffice of the U B. church officiating, assisted by Rev. Ratzel of the Congregational church in which he had held membership for more than twelve yaers. Remarks were also made by M. T. Rose a prominent member of the church and a former friend. His remains were interred in Orland's new cemetery. Mr. Jadwin was a man of sterling qualities, a useful and firm friend of the church of his choice, a developed and successful Sunday school man, a lover of his family, his friends and his country. He leaves a host of friends to mourn his very unexpected departure.

Eat What You Like.

Starving is Not the Way to Cure Dyspepsia, Says Dr. Stone.

Dr. Stone's argument is this: The stomach supplies material for nourishment and repair of the body. It must furnish material for its own repair, as well as for the repair of the rest of the body. Therefore plenty of good food is necessary. Overrating is of course harmful, but the proper supply of substantial food is always recommended to those taking Dr. Stone's Dyspepsia Cure. Dr. Stone is in a position to know what he is about, for he has cured a number of dyspeptics with this unique double remedy—a stomach cure and a liver cure.

People who for years have had to be extremely careful as to diet are often amazed at the early results from Stone's Dyspepsia Cure. They find that forbidden articles of food became easily digestable. This indicates the thorough manner in which this remedy cures. It is guaranteed to cure you. No matter what form of stomach or liver trouble you have, try Stone's Dyspepsia Cure. If not benefited by the time the first package is used, your druggist will refund your money. Price 50 cents. Sold by H. B. McCord.

District of Lake Michigan.

There is a tract of newly made or filled in ground on the lake front side of Lincoln Park, Chicago, that contains about 180 acres. Early Saturday morning it was found that Capt. Streeter who has for some years been claiming such patches of unoccupied land along the lake, had sent an armed force to take possession of this ground which he said nobody owned, and therefore belonged to the people. He was not with the party, but had sent thirty armed men from Englewood and South Chicago in a boat. All but thirteen had deserted on the night march to the boat. These thirteen landed, built a sort of fort, hoisted a flag and proclaimed the territory of "The District of Lake Michigan" free and independent. The city police heard of the trouble and gathered a force of men, over 500 armed police, and at the same time sent two tugs with men and a cannon apiece, to drive the invaders off. In the meantime there had been skirmishing and several shots fired. Two or three were wounded while trying to cross the "district" boundaries contrary to the orders of the "army of occupation." Finally all was ready for an attack, when a park policeman hurried ahead and called on the "army" to surrender, as 600 armed policemen were marching down on them. They gave up their arms and he marched them back and gave them up. There were only five by this time, as the others seeing only defeat and a prison ahead of them, had managed during the day to sneak off. It is all a queer and ridiculous piece of business, and goes to show what foolish things men may be induced to do, when designing rascals get hold of them. It is believed that some parties are behind Streeler, who want to cast a cloud on the title of the city to such lands, in hope of reaping some gain themselves. But of course the city will hold all such lands in some way.

OBITUARY.

Mary Magdalena, daughter of Peter and Mary Heck, was born near Taneytown, Frederick county, Maryland, on the 25th day of December, 1812, and went to rest from the labors of this life on the 25th day of May, 1900, aged 87 years and 5 months. At the age of five months she was baptized by Rev. John Grubb of the Lutheran church of which she was a consistent member to the day of her death. In 1839 she was united in marriage to William Cornell and to this union were born seven children, the husband, one son and two daughters preceding her to the spirit world. In 1850 they emigrated from Maryland to their farm in Butler township, DeKalb county, Indiana, where she spent the remaining fifty years of her life. Mother Cornell leaves four children, eighteen grandchildren, six great-grandchildren and a large number of friends and neighbors to mourn their loss. The funeral was at Cedar chapel, Sunday, May 27, at 2:30 p. m., and interment in the cemetery near by. The services were conducted by Rev. W. L. Meese of this place.

—A barn on the Reed farm, southeast of Butler, now owned by C. A Devinney, was struck by lightning yesterday and destroyed with all the contents, including a yearling colt, mowing machine, harness, etc. There was $700 insurance on the barn and contents, which covers less than half the loss.

South Bend enjoys the distinction of being the home of a family consisting of father, mother, son and daughter, whose combined weight is 800 pounds, the mother 185, the son 215 and the daughter 177. It is believed there is no other family of four members in Northern Indiana that can approach this one in aggregate weight.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

OF COD-LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES

should always be kept in the house for the following reasons:

FIRST—Because, if any member of the family has a hard cold, it will cure it.

SECOND—Because, if the children are delicate and sickly, it will make them strong and well.

THIRD—Because, if the father or mother is losing flesh and becoming thin and emaciated, it will build them up and give them flesh and strength.

FOURTH—Because it is the standard remedy in all throat and lung affections.

No household should be without it. It can be taken in summer as well as in winter.

—Little Miss Golda Miser of East Auburn was six years old yesterday, and in honor of the event the following young people were entertained at her home: Ethel and Ruth Long, Nellie Owens, Maggie Pilgrim, Clifton and Ethel Bolander, and Delphia Arnold. The little hostess received many nice presents and all spent a pleasant afternoon.

—We publish elsewhere the obituary of Mrs. Cornell, whose funeral sermon was preached by Rev. W. L. Meese. The noticeable fact, however, is that this is the third funeral of a very aged lady, at which he has officiated within a short time. The first was Mrs. Delilah Topper, who died July last, at the age of 73 years, 9 months and 2 days; and Mrs. Ruth Haynes who died April 13, 1900, at the age of 84 years, 11 months and 27 days.

—Dr. Sebring was called to the telephone Monday by parties in Corunna who gave notice that a child near that place had died of scarlet fever, and the family was expecting to have a public funeral. This being contrary to law Dr. Sebring telephoned to his deputy there, Dr. A. F. Phillips, to see that the burial was private and the interment within twelve hours as the law directs. But Dr. Phillips found the coffin could not be procured before this morning, and there was no other way than to give a few hours extra time, which was done, and the burial was held this morning.

—W. C. Hartman writes from Wabash that the big mill there is cutting out hoops of the highest grade and very rapidly. The hardwood and stave mill at Roann is also doing a lively business.

—Hon. L. J. Bobilya, one of the best known citizens of Fort Wayne, died yesterday, aged 43. He had served his county as senator and auditor with marked ability and his death will be sincerely regretted by a wide circle of friends.

—The stealing of bicycles has become so common of late at Huntington that the "craze" has reached members of prominent families. The last theft was by a girl of fourteen. On account of the high standing of her family she will not be prosecuted.

—Dr. Stamets brings word that Clarence Kruger is getting along well. One of the bones of his arm had decayed from an old injury and the doctor removed a large part of it a short time ago. Of course, in a case of this kind, it may still cause trouble.

—The program has been arranged for the annual meeting of the Northern Indiana Editorial Association at Anderson, June 14 and 15. On the evening of the first day the visitors will be tendered a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Campbell.

—FOR SALE;—Two short-horn bulls, ten months old, color red, weight about 900 pounds, good individuals. Farm about 4½ miles southeast of Butler, Ind. Correspondence and inspection invited. Joseph Wilson, breeder of fine registered short-horn cattle, Butler, Ind.

—The action of the school board at Fort Wayne in dismissing Supt. Study has raised a storm of indignation and the members of the board who voted to release him are getting a thorough roasting. It looks to a "man up a tree" as though personal spite had a good deal to do with the case.

—Joseph S. Conlogue, editor of the Kendallville Daily Sun, was nominated for joint senator for Noble and Lagrange counties yesterday by the republicans, securing the honor on the first ballot. The party has done itself credit in the selection of a candidate, and we extend congratulations to Brother Conlogue.

—Uncle John Pepple was around with a basket this morning, delivering floral gifts from his sons in Texas. Of course there was a quantity of flowers for "mother's grave," which came in time for Decoration day. Several friends got choice plants and the editor and wife were not forgotten, for there was a fine bunch marked with "Sam, Rose and Erma." Sam, John & Co., are always doing something for the old friends in Indiana.

VOTING BY MACHINERY

A QUARTER of a century ago when a citizen desired to vote he was beset with difficulties—at least annoyances—from the time he hove in sight of the army of "heelers" at the polling place until he reached the ballot box handlers. He was crowded out of line, jostled, yelled at, delayed by challenges. Voting was a matter of strength, brute force and endurance. There was no privacy or secrecy of political inclination. The program then in vogue disgusted the respectable voter, and there was no remedy or improvement afforded until the Australian system came into use.

This plan exceeded in purity and accuracy anything that America had been able to devise. Its salient benefits were that the intending voter has a clear 200 feet in which to approach the voting booth unattended, that no man but the judge of election could hand him a ballot, thus preventing tissue ballots and vest-pocket voting; that he retired to make his choice of candidates free from prying eyes, and that he saw his ballot get inside the box.

But at this point the lesson ended, for after trying the Australian system—beneficial as it has proven—it is certain that progress demands still further improvements, with eight tickets in the field, and each ticket with sixty candidates, all printed on one sheet of paper, many a voter, even of average intelligence, has been bewildered. Outside of this, the question of economics, in money and time, has arisen. The "blanket ballot" has been found cumbersome; to the uneducated voter it has often proved a puzzle. Intricacy has been the fault. To show how common is the confusion, the faulty marking of ballots, it may be stated that in the New York election of 1897 some 122,086 ballots were thrown out as blank or defective. Add to this the fact that in the city of Chicago it costs $75,000 merely to hold an election for two judges, and some of the defects of the Australian system may be understood.

STANDARD VOTING MACHINE.

For these and many other reasons the public mind is dwelling earnestly on the theme of voting by machinery. It is certain that the voting machine would in time be able to defeat the workings of the party machine. Several things are asserted in its favor that appeal strongly to the honest voter. One is the reduced expense of conducting elections, which is brought about by the increased speed in balloting, and the consequent reduction in the number of polling precincts. A great stride has been made in this direction in the way of practical experiment, and, in order to understand the workings of the new system, a typical case would be that of a great city like Chicago. Here there are 1,120 precincts, with an average of 328 registered voters. Five men to the precinct are officials at every election, and each man receives $5 daily. The city sets aside $124,000 for salaries of these judges and clerks. The rental of the precinct headquarters averages $15. The ballots cost over $5,000. When the care, keeping and distributing expenses are added this cost is doubled or trebled. The office expenses of the commissioners are also extremely heavy.

Without too close analysis a saving could be effected by the use of machinery that can be shown at once. It is estimated that on this basis the number of voting precincts could be reduced to 650. The printing of ballots would be done away with. Of course the care of the machines would be an expense, although not nearly so heavy. On an equitable table of reduction, after careful computation, it is calculated that the enormous sum of $57,000 could be saved on every city election. Itemized, this plan shows as follows:

Reduction in number of precincts	470
Reduction in salaries of officers of election	$39,950
Reduction in rentals at $15 a precinct	7,050
Reduction in ballots and handling	10,000
Total	$57,000

This is a showing based wholly on the assumption that the voting machine can handle double the number of voters that can be handled under present methods. The machine, according to reliable experts from cities where it has been tested, can handle 600 voters to the precinct without trouble. It is asserted that the voter can record his vote in one minute. In one city precinct in Detroit it was reported that 150 men voted in exactly 150 minutes.

In its adaptation to villages and to country districts generally the voting machine appears to be even at present within the compass of all as to economy, utility and expense. One machine can be taken for a type of all. To a city like Buffalo it sells for $500. The great feature of the machine is that it insures absolute accuracy in expressing the will of the voter. It is automatic, registers only what the voter wills, cannot be disturbed without being wrecked, and casts up the totals as it goes. As soon as the polls are closed the returns are there, totaled up and ready for transcription to the records for canvass. It provides for the voting of "split tickets" by an ingenious device, varying, of course, in the various types. But it insures one thing—it renders any contest impossible.

The cash register was once scoffed at as a thing of wills and buckfulness, designed to toss the store proprietor in the air and bungle his accounts. It was remarked with scorn and hilarity that one graduate of a commercial college was worth more than 1,000 machines in casting up the receipts in cash. That day, as all others, passed. Comparatively few concerns in these days omit the humble cash register, because of its speed and approved accuracy in assembling totals. The longest-headed arithmeticians the world has ever produced cannot calculate skillfully enough to destroy the equipoise of the delicate machine, which attends to business and merely rings a bell when cleared for action.

At least half a dozen voting machines have been invented, each of which has points in its favor, according to the reports of investigators. A typical one deserves a detailed description. It is about four feet square and ten inches deep, and is supported by legs, the top being a little over six feet from the floor. From the upper corner projects a semicircular bar, on which is hung a curtain, which forms a booth. An operating lever extends from the center of the top of the machine, the outer end of which is attached to the curtain. The voter throws this lever, which closes the curtain about him. Placed on the front of the machine in full view of the public before it is closed by the curtain is an Australian ballot, 22x14 inches. At the head of each ticket over the party emblem is a straight ticket knob, and in front of each name where the marking space should be is an indicator which may be moved over the name to indicate the voter's choice, which connects the counter, but does not register the vote until the lever is moved to open the curtain.

The voter first selects his party ticket, and by pulling the straight knob at the top over the party emblem down to the right, moves all the pointers for that ticket. If he desires to split his ticket he can move the pointer back from over the name that does not suit him, and in the same office line move the pointer over the name he wishes to vote for. After pulling the straight ticket knob, a pointer may be moved back and forth, making a click at intervals to indicate splitting, and at the same time, vote straight. In splitting his vote he can move the pointers silently, with a little care. Having arranged his vote satisfactorily, he is now ready to register it, which he does by throwing the curtain open by means of an operating lever, with which he closed it, thus casting and counting his vote in perfect secrecy. After the votes are closed and the machine locked against voting, the doors in the rear are unlocked, and the vote of each candidate is shown on the counters, ready to be copied over the election returns.

The machine is constructed of steel and non-corrosive metal, and where steel is used it is protected from rust by plating with copper and nickel. Every movement is positive, the machine is wholly different in construction from any other, and cannot be manipulated fraudulently. The machine weighs about 500 pounds, and when boxed for storage or shipment occupies a space about four feet square and sixteen inches deep.

There is another device, known as the "United States voting machine," that has a keyboard on which is placed a printed ballot, or labels, with the name of each candidate, with a separate push button adjacent to each name. The machine has a large push button for each party ticket. The operation of the door through which the voter passes out of the booth registers the vote he has indicated. This device will readily accommodate up to 800 voters. By actual test a voter can enter the booth, vote the straight ticket, and make his exit in from five to ten seconds. When the polls close the door is locked in an open position, which locks the mechanism of the machine, after which the counting compartments are thrown open to inspectors and watchers and the total number of votes received by each candidate taken off and read in public and ample opportunity is given to compare the figures with the dial on the machine. It is mounted on wheels, and is as readily transported as any ordinary truck.

The machine tried at the Irvington, Ind., election, a year ago the present month, has some advantages over both of the machines just described. It is arranged to handle seven different tickets, with eighty names to each ticket, while the face, or keyboard, is 36x44 inches in dimensions. This device both registers and records every vote cast—first on the dial, and then in addition on a perforated proof, or tally sheet. It has also a time lock, which can be set to stop voting at any hour fixed by law for the closing of the polls. Further, it handles fractional votes.

In a recent election in Rochester, N. Y., the voting machines made it possible for the first return to be given to the public within six minutes after the closing of the polls, while the final returns were declared just thirty-one minutes later. The entire result was known three-quarters of an hour after the closing of the polls.

From all of this it will be conceded that voting by machine has many desirable features. The reduction of the cost of holding elections, the speed with which the votes can be taken, and the speed with which returns can be made, all important elements to consider.

UNITED STATES VOTING MACHINE.

THE AUSTRALIAN BALLOT SYSTEM.

Once adopted by law, the inanimate faces of these engines formed to tell what the people want will be the medium of stopping foolish contests, which cost the people heavy sums of money.

One lack will yet remain, however. Complete purification of the ballot cannot be effected until some device is perfected which will insure absolute security and legality in the registration of voters themselves, whereby a corrupt man may be prevented from registering under the name of some other man long dead or removed from the city. When such a device is created—and why may not photography and other science abet?—then voting will become an accurate expression of the people's will. The reign of "the boss" will end, for the entire electorate will be "boss!"

HOW BABY TOOK TO WATER.

Clever Device of Grandmother Overcomes Fear in Learning to Bathe.

Baby is a dimpled darling of some 6 months of age. She is a gentle little thing, full of life and as much curiosity as should belong to her sex. But one day when her mother attempted to bathe her in the altogether in a big bowl baby set up a howl. The water was possibly a bit too cold and the tender flesh revolted, so the infant became afraid of water.

Her grandmother, having brought up a flock of boys and girls, is up to many tricks to gain baby's confidence. She decided the little one must be taught to like the feeling of water, so she filled the bowl with carefully warmed water and then placed several large, brightly colored marbles in it. Then she took the baby on her lap and placed her own hand in the bowl and rolled the marbles about. This ruse proved successful to the extent of making baby yearn for the marbles.

The child gingerly placed one dimpled hand in the water, but quickly withdrew it. Then she looked surprised, but as grandma played in the water the child grinned and plunged her fist into the bowl. She soon had the balls rolling about and chuckled with glee. She grew so interested that she stuck both hands and arms in and tried hard to capture the slippery marbles. Then grandma placed her in the water. This seemed to please baby, for she commenced to wiggle her small legs back and forth.

All at once she discovered that water will splash. She screamed in happiness and set arms, legs, feet and hands vigorously to work before grandma had any chance to head her off. The elderly woman was thoroughly wetted before the child quit. She quit when all the water had been splashed over the floor, herself and granma. Then she looked for more. Since then it is a case of fight when they try to take her out of her tub.—Chicago Chronicle.

The Plaything of a King.

The Emperor of Germany has a toy that would gladden the heart of the most exacting boy. It is a miniature frigate, a full-rigged three-masted warship, fifty-five feet in length, drawing but four feet of water, and having a capacity of thirty tons. The ship is an heirloom in the imperial family of Germany, having been presented by William IV., King of England, to the present German emperor's great-grandfather, Frederick William III. It gave the reigning monarch his first taste of life on the wave, and in his boyhood days one of his favorite amusements was to sail on the watery Potsdam, in company with his brother Henry, in this tiny man-of-war. At a distance the ship's dimensions are very deceptive, but a man at the rail or boat moving alongside soon brings out, by contrast, the smallness of the craft. The frigate can be sailed in the same manner as the largest ship, but the crew must be Lilliputians in size and scanty in number; a seaman of ordinary build would be totally out of place on the yards of this vessel. He would probably be in grave danger of bringing the spars down to the deck with his own weight. "Royal Louise" is the name of this kingly toy; she was christened after Prussian Queen Louise. The little frigate was built on the Thames River, at Woolwich, England, in 1832, and was towed down the river and across the North Sea by a steamer to Hamburg; from this place a flat barge floated her up the Elbe and into the Havel at Potsdam, where she still remains.—Woman's Home Companion.

How Canned Meats Are Tested.

Among the most incomprehensible proceedings to be observed within the vast area of Woolwich depot are the doings of a small party of officials, one of whom appears to do nothing all day long but sit at a table and tap on the top of tin canisters with a couple of bits of stick something after the manner of a child beating on the upturned end of his drum. The tins are passed before him about as fast as he can tap them and absolutely nothing seems to come of the game. To the unenlightened onlooker it is quite unintelligible. The tins contain meat and before they are passed into store it is, of course, important to examine the condition of what is inclosed, and this, in fact, is the way it is done. The trained ear of the expert examiner can tell whether the meat is in a wholesome or a putrid condition by the sound emitted when rapped with the stick, just as the examiner of railway carriage wheels is supposed to be able to tell whether the wheel he taps with his hammer is cracked or not. The rapidity with which the business is gone through and the seeming inattention of the performer with the sticks and his total indifference to all sorts of noises about him render the procedure a very curious one to watch. The test is said to be practically infallible.—London News.

The surprise at an amateur concert is the number of good places for stopping which are disregarded by the performers, who keep right on.

NATION IS IN PERIL.

ONLY A SWEEPING DEMOCRATIC VICTORY CAN SAVE IT.

American Republic Approaches a Period of Corruption as Deep and Degraded as That Which Preceded the Downfall of the Roman Empire.

Washington correspondence:

The Cuban frauds grow in size and significance every day. There does not seem to be an honest man in the service. From the beginning the department at Washington declared with absolute positiveness that there was certainly one honest man, and that was Postmaster Thompson of Havana. The Senators from Indiana and every one from Postmaster General Smith up and down declared that Thompson was all right. They argued, as did Abraham, who pleaded for the city of the plain, that if there was one honest man in the Cuban postal service the service should not be entirely condemned.

Alas! Thompson had already fallen by the wayside. Thompson is under arrest and has confessed that he "borrowed" money from the money-order funds, that he instructed his subordinates to juggle with the stamp accounts and that whenever an inspection was to take place he would put in money to cover the defalcation and take it out the next day. Alas! poor Thompson! A great deal of sympathy is expressed for him in administration organs, seemingly because they expected him to be honest, though he has turned out like the rest of them. As for Neely, the head center of the corruption in Cuba, the administration will now consider itself lucky if the extent of his looting does not reach $400,000. Never was there such a close corporation worked for the benefit of the insiders as the Cuban postal service.

As for the administration, while with one breath there is a loud declaration that every criminal shall be punished, with the next breath orders are issued in every direction to administration organs in this country and to the officials in Cuba to minimize the whole affair into the smallest possible compass. Postmaster General Smith's newspaper, the Philadelphia Press, has scarcely mentioned the fact that there has been corruption in Cuba. But there it is, hanging like a millstone of corruption around the corrupt neck of a corrupt administration.

The Michigan Platform.

That the Democracy is advancing in the direction of a better government than that offered by a plutocracy is evident from the platform adopted by the Michigan State Democratic convention. Although the Democracy persists in maintaining the principles upon which our system of government was based, by the maintenance of which it alone can be successfully perpetuated as a government of the people, yet it finds the more we progress in the direction of the solution of the human problem, that the ills to which all flesh is heir can only be cured by a close study of the wants, the demands and the necessities of the whole people, and that those necessities can only be supplied by the people themselves.

Hence municipal ownership and direct legislation, following in the lead of Nebraska, the adoption of which is in strict line with the most advanced ideas of statesmen and economists everywhere in the world. Because the Democratic party insists upon the rigid observance and the practical adaptation of the principles specified in the Declaration of Independence, enacted into the United States constitution as the organic law, and always observed, enforced and impressed upon the people as their only salvation, until the McKinley administration cast it all overboard, the Democratic party has been charged with senility, old fogyism, effeteness, and has been plainly told that the government has outgrown the principles which it has always borne close to its heart, and is therefore incompetent to handle the affairs of the government as they have progressed. In the light, however, of the recent declarations and enunciations of its statesmen and leaders, no man can say that this charge is true. The Democratic party does not carry its bag of grain to mill with the wheat in one end and a big rock to balance it in the other. It, in common with all American citizens except the Republican party, has outgrown this old fogyism. The main point after all is, how are we going to stop the increasing corruption, extravagance and wandering away from the principles of government which have made the nation great? How are the people to be drawn out from under the crushing weight of monopolists, trusts and plutocracy which cannot live unless they are based upon the imperialism adopted as the policy of the Republican party? Would the government expend in three years over one thousand millions in cash, a sum greater than the total of the much-vaunted balance of trade in our favor for the same period if the people themselves possessed any influence with the law-making power? Could Mark Hanna, as the agent of criminal combines, stand behind the Presidential chair and dictate laws, expenditures and policies for the benefit of his own special class if the people stood between him and that Presidential chair? How could the people of the country be annually drained of a sum of money in excess of the entire circulating medium, gold, silver and paper money, if they owned, controlled or regulated the means by which this money is diverted from their own pockets for the special class already alluded to?

The great Democratic party is drawing closer and closer to the people, as is evidenced by the Michigan, Nebraska and other platforms, and in the daily enunciations from the Democratic press.

Corruption in the Philippines.

What is true of Cuba is trebly true in the Philippines. There the censorship, which Gen. Otis declared abolished last September, is more active and oppressive than ever. Private letters from the Philippines make the most horrible charges in regard to the condition of affairs. It is declared that the war has degenerated into a massacre, in which hundreds of Filipinos are being shot down weekly, whether armed or unarmed. The Filipino soldiers are now called bandits and robbers in order to find a convenient justification for the abandonment by the American army of the rules and decencies of civilized warfare. Not only have over four hundred volunteer officers tendered their resignations, but hundreds of American soldiers are in prison for absolutely refusing to obey orders to shoot unoffending Filipinos.

The insurrection is blazing from one end of the archipelago to the other. In and around the American outposts large bands of insurgents are constantly hovering, attacking whenever the slightest advantage is to be gained. The Filipinos are not well equipped with arms. The native sword or bolo is their principal weapon, but a hundred men a week are added to the death list by this terrible weapon. The hospitals are overcrowded. Over six thousand men are on the sick list, and the rainy season is not yet four weeks old. Neither the correspondents at Manila nor the local newspapers there are permitted to lay the facts before the public. Yet in this horrible tragedy corruption is rampant. The lives and even the deaths of American soldiers and Filipinos alike are compelled to pay tribute to the ghouls who thrive amid death and pestilence.

It is hard to conceive that the American republic is rapidly approaching a period of corruption as deep and degrading as that which preceded the downfall of the Roman Empire. But it is unfortunately true. Every phase of the Roman corruption is finding repetition in the affairs of the United States. Unbridled corruption and cruelty in the government of the Roman colonies is repeated to-day in Cuba and the Philippines. The rottenness of Rome was no greater than the rottenness prevailing in Washington. Rome went through the farce of popular elections long after the will of the people had been subverted by the compact and powerful oligarchy at Rome. Here in Washington the influence of less than a hundred men outweighs the sentiment of ten million voters. Worse yet, there are strong signs that every important piece of legislation taking money from the public treasury, from the ship subsidy bill and the appropriation bills for building war vessels for the navy to the Pacific cable subsidy bill, is made to pay a tacit tribute to Mark Hanna's Republican campaign fund. This is a fearful charge, yet the signs are only too evident that the favored interests are the ones which furnish the Republican corruption fund, and that they furnish it because they are favored. Only a sweeping Democratic victory next November—overwhelmingly sweeping at that—can save the country from its peril.

A Bright Ray of Hope.

It is declared by Mr. Bryan that the Senate of the United States is not definitely lost to the people, and that if he should be elected in November with the almost certain Democratic gains, the free silver force in the Senate would certainly be considerable and in the end decisive. The St. Louis Globe-Democrat, a rabid gold standard organ, concedes this much, and that Mr. Bryan's election will be a serious breach in the gold standard intrenchments and would give prestige to further efforts to break them down completely. The majority against silver in the existing Senate is not over seven. Of the thirty Senators whose terms expire March next, seventeen are Republicans, including one each from Kansas, Montana, West Virginia, Oregon, Idaho, Nebraska, Wyoming and Colorado. Two gold Democrats go out at the same time. The Democrats are likely to fill two of the three vacancies, those in Delaware and Utah, and Bryan's election will bring in a Democratic Vice President, who would vote in case of a tie. Thus far the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Still further extending the idea, the people of the Western States have reached the conclusion that they are misrepresented in the Senate. Colorado, Wyoming, Kansas, Montana, Idaho and Nebraska are represented by six Senators, who were elected on the pretense of being bimetallists, and who voted for the single gold standard, the placing of paper money in the hands of the banks and the creation of a bank trust controlling all the business of the country. There is no question that the people of each and every one of these six States are absolutely opposed to the things for which their six Senators voted, and the evidence is accumulating that they are taking exceedingly great care not to permit any of the six to further misrepresent them after next March. The change of these six States alone will cut the gold majority in the Senate in two, without taking into account gains that may be made in other parts of the country. Kentucky has already elected a silver man to succeed Lindsay. In Louisiana Caffrey has been defeated overwhelmingly in the primaries by a silver man. The review of the whole situation will therefore appear to be one of great hope to the Democracy and to the cause of the people, and that the election of Mr. Bryan will not be, as has been so often alleged, a useless expenditure of votes and the placing of a helpless incumbent in the Presidential chair. Success, however, can only be attained by constant efforts to abide by unity of purpose. There never has been a time in the history of the country when the lines have been so clearly defined between the cause of the people and that of a special class.

General Otis on the Filipinos.

An interview given out by Gen. Otis just before his departure from Manila contains some passages of special interest.

"It is astonishing," says the General, "how eager these people are for schools. They are clamoring for them everywhere. We bought $40,000 worth of books and have exhausted the supply of Spanish-English primers. I told some prominent Filipinos that they must wait for a new supply, but they said no, and suggested that we give English instead of Spanish books, declaring that the children would learn very quickly."

This is encouraging, but even more significant is the following: "At present there is little understanding of a real republican government, but the people are eager to learn, and they readily assimilate American ideas and become Americanized. When once they recognize the beneficence of our institutions, these people will quickly adopt them, adapting themselves to the changed conditions."

If all this is true the war policy of the administration stands condemned by its chief instrument. Conciliation and recognition of American principles are required, not brutal aggression. Tact might have prevented the war. It may yet bring peace. At any rate, we have here a confession that the Filipinos exhibit marked liking and aptitude for American ideas and principles. Why not apply them?—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

MARK HANNA—"I AM AFRAID THAT TESTIMONIAL WILL BE A BOOMERANG."

—Chicago Record.

Boss Hanna.

Boss Hanna was forced to put his ship subsidy bill in his pocket, a bill which contemplated a steal from the people of $9,000,000 a year, but he was mad, and he swore a great oath that "the bill must and shall pass next session." This belligerent boss would have forced the bill down the throats of the Senators this session had not a Presidential campaign been impending. Fearing defeat of McKinley at the polls if the iniquitous measure were forced through Hanna has withdrawn it for the present, but hoping that McKinley will be elected he cannot refrain from boasting that he will crack his whip over the Senators next session.

Hanna means what he says. Senators are afraid of him, and as they are not elected by the people they will do what the boss says, irrespective of the wishes of the masses. The only way to defeat Hanna's robber schemes is to retire McKinley to private life. This is in a fair way of accomplishment, and if the voters do their duty next November both McKinley and Hanna will find their occupation gone.—Chicago Democrat.

Where Success Lies.

The administration and its masters and serfs have created the Presidential issue of "the trusts against the constitution," which is to dominate the campaign of 1900. They do not dare to meet it squarely in their platforms, and they will not be able to anywhere else. Indeed, if a united Democracy under competent leadership could be certainly assumed, the situation in which the Hanna administration and machine have placed themselves would destroy the last hope of Republican success in November.—Washington Times.

Large Steamers.

The largest steamers which were launched in the United Kingdom during last year are the following: Oceanic, 17,274 tons gross; Ivernia, 13,900; Minneapolis, 13,750; Saxon, 12,970; Saxonia, 12,750; Persic, 11,973.

Colorado produced last year $31,122,169 in gold, $12,680,256 in silver, $4,641,520 lead, $1,854,226 copper, and $877,500 zinc and manganiferous ores.

The debilitating drains and discharges which weaken so many women are caused by Catarrh of the distinctly feminine organs. The sufferer may call her trouble Leuchorrhoea, or Weakness, or Female Disease or some other name, but the real trouble is catarrh of the female organs and nothing else.

Pe-ru-na radically and permanently cures this and all other forms of Catarrh. It is a positive specific for female troubles caused by catarrh of the delicate lining of the organs peculiar to women. It always cures if used persistently. It is prompt and certain.

The Passion Flower.

The Passion Flower was so called by the first Spanish settlers of America because they imagined that they saw in its flower a representation of Our Lord's passion, the filamentous processes being taken to represent the crown of thorns; the nail-shaped styles, the nails of the cross; the anthers, the marks of the five wounds; the leaf, the spear that pierced the Savior's side; the tendrils, the cords or whips by which He was scourged; the column of the ovary, the upright of the cross; the stamens, the hammers; the calyx, the glory or halo; the white tint, purity; the blue tint, heaven. The passion flower is a native of the warm parts of America, and its flowers are large and beautiful.

PILES OF PAIN.

"For Twenty Years I've Suffered, and Now I Am Well."

A Miracle Performed for a Father and His Three-Year-Old Son—Millions of People Need Relief.

What causes them?

Nothing but irregular working of the bowels. When a nauseous mass of undigested food ferments in the intestines instead of being passed out of the body, its pressure congests the blood vessels, and produces all kinds of piles—bleeding, blind, itching, all horribly painful and annoying.

Nothing will cure them except to go at the cause, make the bowels regular, and then tone up the intestines so they can keep regular. Only a strong intestinal tonic can do it, and Cascarets Candy Cathartic are the best known. The best kind of a proof is the experience of Mr. Heitz:

Chicago, Ill., February 19, 1899.

Gentlemen—I have been using your Cascarets for almost a year with great success, not only relieving chronic constipation, but they have cured me of bleeding piles (which two surgical operations failed to do, putting me to great expense and needless pain). I have recommended them to many friends, with good results. Very truly yours, FRANK ROGERS, No. 228 East Forty-first street, Chicago, Ill.

Sufferers from piles! Go and do likewise! Buy and try Cascarets to-day! It's what they do, not what we say they'll do, that proves their merit. They make the liver lively, the bowels regular, the blood pure. All druggists, 10c, 25c, or 50c, or mailed for price. Send for booklet and free sample. Address Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago; Montreal, Can.; New York.

CCC This is the CASCARET tablet. Every tablet of the only genuine Cascarets bears the magic letters "CCC." Look at the tablet before you buy, and beware of frauds, imitations and substitutes.

Do Cats Suck Infants' Breath?

Will cats squat upon the breasts of sleeping babies and kill them by sucking their breath? Old colored women, nurses of the old school and some persons from the country will answer this question in the affirmative. Physicians and wise men will say it is a vain superstition, like that of Friday being unlucky. Yet there is the experience of a chemist of Wissahicken, a Harvard man, whose word is above reproach:

"I slept on Wednesday night with my door open—it is usually closed. In the middle of the night I awoke. There, in the dim light, I saw our fat tabby cat sitting on my breast, and her moist, cool nose was against my lips. I drew back my head, and the cat, without moving, looked calmly in my eyes. 'Scat, you beast!' I said, and she leaped softly off the bed and vanished in the blackness of the hall. In the morning I thought this ghastly thing must have been a dream, and to verify it, if possible, I left my room door open the next night. Well, what I remember first is a kind of nightmare. I was in a closed room, and an enemy was pumping all the air from it. Then I seemed to awake. I opened my eyes. The cat's warm, soft body was pressed close upon my breast and neck, and this felt comfortable, like a muff. But the mouth of the cat was glued upon my mouth in a loathsome kiss. My life, my very life, if you can understand me, seemed to be flowing out of my lips. I felt so weak, and, through my weakness, so calm and indifferent, I debated whether it was worth while to push the cat away. Finally, with an effort—my arms were heavy as lead—I got rid of that squatting incubus. It scratched me before it would go, and I have the scratch yet as witness of my story."—Philadelphia Record.

Sleep Changes the Verdict.

A jury recently agreed upon a verdict, sealed it and went home. After sleeping over it, they disagreed. This shows the power of sleep to strengthen the mind. Those who are troubled with insomnia or stomach disorders should try Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It puts the stomach in good condition and induces sound sleep.

Craftiness.

"Madam," said the tramp, as a middle-aged lady came to the door in response to his knock, "would you give a poor old man a bite to eat?"

"Why," replied the lady, "you're certainly able to earn a living. You don't look very old."

"Looks are often deceitful, lady," answered the wanderer. "I am old enough to be your grandfather."

A moment later he was seated in the kitchen and nothing she had in the pantry was too good for him.—Chicago News.

What Do the Children Drink?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing, and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs about ¼ as much. All grocers sel lit. 15c and 25c.

It is calculated that the shareholders of the United Kingdom outnumber the railway employes by about 40,000.

PIMPLES

Perhaps you have already discovered that powders and washes will not cure these eruptions on your face. They may cover up and suppress, but they cannot remove. Rashes, boils, salt-rheum, shingles, hives, eczema, tetter, etc., are but surface indications of a deeper trouble. And

That's Bad Blood

The question for you now is,—how to make bad blood good blood; how to get rid of all these impurities in your system. Everybody knows the answer,—a perfect Sarsaparilla. No ordinary Sarsaparilla, such as you can buy at almost any store, will answer; it must be a perfect one. There is such a Sarsaparilla, and it differs widely in every way from all other Sarsaparillas.

MAKES MANY MOTHERS MAD.

Address of Professor Chrisman Is Resented by 3,000 Women.

At the second day's session of the National Congress of Mothers in Des Moines great indignation was raised by the address of Oscar Chrisman, A. M., Ph. D., professor of paidology or child study in the State normal school at Emporia, Kan. "Men never love as women do," he said. Instantly the big convention hall was filled with hisses, and it was several minutes before the speaker could proceed. He continued to say that women were made for love and men for reason. This was greeted by an indignant protest from 3,000 throats. The professor dropped this branch of the subject and went on with his address. At its conclusion a dozen women leaped to their feet and demanded recognition.

Mrs. Birney, who was presiding, gave the floor to Mrs. Winfield S. Hall of Berwyn, Ill., who cried in a voice that reached the street, "Men do love!" Mrs. Hall then gave Prof. Chrisman a tongue-lashing for fifteen minutes. When she ceased a man and fifteen women jumped up. The man, T. H. Smith of Harlan, Iowa, was recognized. "It is false," he said. "Men do love. It is a slander that the professor has given you. He ought to be ashamed of himself for standing before this audience and saying such things. Men do love their sweethearts and wives. As boys they love their mothers. As men they love their families. Prof. Chrisman has queer ideas for an educator of the young. He has no business telling this congress of mothers that men do not love. They know better, and I am glad of this magnificent rebuke the speaker has suffered justly at your hands." The man closed, and the women cheered.

The meetings of the congress were well attended and full of interest. More than 1,000 delegates were in attendance from out of the town. Policemen had to help keep the doors closed Tuesday on account of the crush. Gov. and Mrs. Shaw received the delegates in a formal reception at the State House Tuesday evening.

TWENTY-TWO DIE IN A MINE.

Colliery Explosion at Cumnock, N. C., Terrible in Its Effects.

Twenty-two miners, ten white men and twelve negroes, lost their lives in an explosion at Cumnock coal mines, Chatham County, North Carolina, Tuesday afternoon. The explosion is supposed to have been caused by a broken gauze in a safety lamp. Between forty and fifty men were in the mine at the time.

About fifty people from Sanford, a town six miles from the mine, started immediately when the news of the disaster was received to assist in the work of rescuing the dead and helping the injured. Within an hour after the explosion the work of rescue began and by night all the bodies except one had been brought to the top. This is the second explosion this mine has had within the past four years, the former one having occurred on Dec. 28, 1895, when forty-three men lost their lives.

Following is a list of the States which by action of their Legislatures have approved election of Senators by the people: Nevada, Utah, Washington, Wisconsin, Wyoming, North Carolina, Montana, Arkansas, Idaho, California, Colorado, Florida, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Nebraska, New Hampshire, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, and Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, Missouri, Texas and New Jersey are among the States which have taken no action.

In Newton, Mass., the other day, a man's $5 bill was blown out of his hand, and he could find it nowhere. A friend cut a piece of paper just the size of the bill and liberated it at the place where the man had lost his money. The paper blew down the street and around into an alley, and there the man found the $5 bill.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

His Mind Was Long a Blank—Sportsman Breaks His Neck—Mysterious Disappearance at Daleville—Railroad Practically Tied Up by a Snake.

Fred Fry, under detention for several days at the Indianapolis police station as an insane person, has been recognized by his father, Stephen D. Fry, a well-known traveling man, and released. The young man is 19 years old, and until his father arrived his mind was a positive blank as to his own identity, but the moment he saw his sire his mental condition seemed to clear. His father reports that his son has been ailing for several years, and physicians have been unable to afford permanent relief. He usually is rational on every subject, but occasionally he loses his own identity, and if away from home at the time the attack seizes him he is unable to give information of himself, although talking readily on other subjects. Last June he wandered away and after a long search was found at Kokomo, where he had been earning his own living, no one suspecting him of mental infirmity.

Squirrel Hunt Proves Fatal.

Because his wife expressed a wish for a squirrel for her supper, Elijah Myers, a farmer of Prairie Creek township, met his death. Mrs. Myers has been a helpless invalid for more than two years. She is suffering from consumption and cannot live longer than a few weeks. The other night she expressed a desire for some squirrel broth, and her husband went into the woods. He shot a squirrel, but the animal lodged in the fork of a tree, and Myers, in climbing the tree, fell and broke his neck, dying instantly.

Assaulted and Spirited Away.

Because of the strike at the Daleville stove works at Daleville, Arthur Walker, aged 20, has disappeared. He was a non-union man and was going to the factory to work when he was attacked by a crowd of the strikers. The crowd after beating Walker took him away in a buggy and searching parties have failed to find trace of him. Muncie officers arrested three men on charges of being implicated in the assault. Walker's home is in Portsmouth, Ohio.

Snake Ties Up a Railroad.

Traffic on the Chicago and Erie Railway was delayed the other day on account of a big rattlesnake. The reptile crawled up a telegraph pole near Preble, and stretched itself across the wires. As a result the current was broken and messages could not be sent. A special crew was sent out from Huntington to ascertain the cause of the delay in the transmission of dispatches, and the snake was discovered and dislodged.

The United Debenture Company, Goshen, has secured control of 640,000 acres of fine California land. It is in the Ensenado de Tedos valley, borders on the Pacific and has one of the finest harbors on the Pacific coast. The land will be subdivided and sold. It is valued at $10,000 a section.

Henry O'Hare, 17, was found at Logansport, locked in a freight car. He had been there several days and was almost famished. He got into the car at Newport News, Va., and gave a tramp, whom he supposed was a railroad man, $1.50 for permission to ride to Cincinnati. The car was locked and sealed and he had neither food nor water for five days.

RARE FEAST BY THE WAYSIDE.

Good Fortune Befel a Detachment of Soldiers on the Plains.

"You mightn't believe it," said an army lieutenant, "but once upon a time when three of us officers were out on the plains starving in the snow, fifty miles from any town bigger than a water tank, we were suddenly dropped into a feast of champagne, oysters, turkey and roast beef and all the good things you can imagine a starving man would like to encompass. Of course, you don't believe it, but let me tell you.

"A force of fifty men with five officers were doing detail work in Montana one winter and as amusements of all kinds were scarce we were ready for almost anything. One day three of us started out on a hunt and when night came we were caught by a snowstorm in an old cabin out on the plains. There was nothing to do but stop where we were and, making a fire with such parts of the cabin as we could spare, we made ourselves comfortable as possible for the night. We had nothing to eat and as soon as morning came we faced the storm, which was still bad, and started to find headquarters. We were in fairly good spirits at first, but as we floundered around through the snow, able to make very little progress, and that in a direction we were not certain of, matters began to look serious, and when the shades of evening came on and we were completely lost and without shelter of any kind we began to droop and to wonder how long it would be until our friends found our bodies in the snow.

"Of course we didn't mention anything of this kind to each other, but I will admit that we were not very cheerful, and when it had become so dark that we held hands so that we should not be lost from each other, I for one, felt that it was our last handclasp on earth. We had become very silent now and were struggling along aimlessly, growing a little weaker all the time, and colder and sleepier. As a sudden blast stronger than the others swept by I turned half round to shield myself and as I did so I saw off to the left the glimmer of a light. It seemed to be rising from the snow and we thought it might be some cabin half covered by the drift with a roaring fire inside streaming up through the chimney. In any event we let loose the strongest shout we had left and made for it, still clinging to each other. It was not more than a quarter of a mile away—if it had been farther we never would have seen it through the storm—and when we got to it we found it was a Northern Pacific Railroad train snowed in. It was digging its way slowly through the drift and when we came down over the snow bank on to it the train men thought it was a 'hold-up,' but we told them pretty soon what the matter was and they hustled us aboard. It was just after the second call to dinner, the dining room car was in full operation and there in the midst of the cold, the desolation, the distance from civilized homes and the howling storm, we sat down to a dinner which fifteen minutes before seemed to be farther away from us than heaven. It was like a fairy tale, I tell you. We spent the evening telling our story to all the passengers, went to bed early, slept like moles, and the next morning the train had worked through and we got off at the first station to take the next train back to headquarters."—Washington Star.

Tobacco as a Disinfectant.

Dr. Norman Kerr, the temperance advocate, who died recently at Hastings, England, had made a life study of the subject of inebriety, concerning various aspects of which he had published about thirty volumes, together with numerous articles in medical journals. On the efficacy of tobacco as a disinfectant he also held strong opinions, and some time ago he made the following statement: "On broad, general grounds, I am decidedly of opinion, from my own experience and observation, that tobacco smoking—other things being equal—does give anyone exposed to infection a considerable amount of immunity."

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science have proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

The Pinkham Remedies

For disorders of the feminine organs have gained their great renown and enormous sale because of the permanent good they have done and are doing for the women of this country.

If all ailing or suffering women could be made to understand how absolutely true are the statements about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, their sufferings would end.

Mrs. Pinkham counsels women free of charge. Her address is Lynn, Mass. The advice she gives is practical and honest. You can write freely to her; she is a woman.

Essentially a Fort Wayne Favorite.

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of an execution issued on a judgment rendered in the DeKalb circuit court on the 9th day of January, 1895, and to me directed by the clerk of said court, I will offer for sale at public auction and outcry, to the highest bidder, at the door of the court house in Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, on

SATURDAY, JUNE 9, 1900,

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following described real estate, situated in Auburn, DeKalb county, in the state of Indiana, to-wit;

Lot number two hundred fifteen (215), except thirty feet off the east end thereof, and lots number two hundred forty-nine (249), two hundred fifty (250), two hundred eighty-one (281) and two hundred ninety-eight (298) in the original plat of the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana.

And in case the rents and profits fail to bring the amount demanded to satisfy the judgment and decree aforesaid, interest and costs, together with all accruing costs, I will, at the same time and place, and in like manner as aforesaid, offer for sale, at public auction and outcry, to the highest bidder, all the right, title, interest and estate in fee simple of Lyman Lockwood, subject to the inchoate interest of Mary O. Lockwood, wife of Lyman Lockwood, in and to the above described real estate, or so much and such part thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the judgment and decree aforesaid, which is in favor of Sarah J. Pooler and against Harvey Clarke and Lyman Lockwood, upon which judgment, interest and costs there is now due the sum of four hundred eighteen and forty-one one-hundredths dollars ($418,41.)

Said real estate will be sold without relief from valuation or appraisement laws, and subject to the redemption laws of the state of Indiana.

JOHN H. HATHAWAY,
Sheriff of DeKalb County, Indiana.

John W. Baxter, Attorney for Plaintiff.

DOES IT PAY TO BUY CHEAP?

A cheap remedy for coughs and colds is all right, but you want something that will relieve and cure the most severe and dangerous results of throat and lung troubles. What shall you do? Go to a warmer and more regular climate? Yes, if possible; if not possible for you, then in either case take the only remedy that has been introduced in all civilized countries with success in severe throat and lung troubles, "Boschee's German Syrup.,' It not only heals and stimulates the tissues to destroy the germ disease, but allays inflammation, causes easy expectoration, gives a good night's rest, and cures the patient. Try one bottle. many years by all druggists in the world. Sample bottles at O. P. RABER'S, Corunna.

Rev. W. L. Meese.

We are pleased to copy the following from the New York Sunday Daily World of May 27. As this paper has perhaps the widest circulation in the country, and this especial number has 58 pages, it will be seen that Mr. Meese is having extensive notices. This article also has his likeness.

"One of the most unique characters in the Hoosier state is the Rev. W. L. Meese, of Auburn, Ind., because of his record as a marrying parson. This venerable man is the father of the only matrimonial reunion ever held, and the idea of the novel gathering is entirely original with himself. It is not every minister who would care to meet all the couples he has ever married, but the Rev. Mr. Meese has done so, and has won for himself a niche in the temple of fame, not only for his record but for his undoubted bravery. He is indirectly responsible for the joys and sorrows of a multitude who propose to celebrate with him again this summer.

Contract for $300,000,000.

The largest contract ever let since the world was created, was that let to the Carnegie Steel Co. the other day, when it closed a three hundred million dollar contract with the American Bridge company, the new combine of steel-bridge-building concerns which has just been organized. The contract was a portion of the consideration for the Keystone bridge works, owned by the Carnegie company, at 51st street and the Allegheny Valley railroad. The Keystone works is one of the best equipped in the country and the Carnegie company refused to become a part of the combine without a provision being made for the disposal of some of its structural steel.

It is understood that by the sale Carnegie secures a contract to furnish 75 per cent of all the structural steel used by the new combine.

QUESTION ANSWERED.

Yes, August Flower has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers' and grandmothers' never thought of using anything else for Indigestion or Billiousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart Failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Sample bottles at O. P Barber's, Corunna.

A Prosperous Newspaper.

The South Bend Tribune on Monday May 28, celebrated the 27th anniversary of its daily edition, for the first issue of its daily was on that date 1873. Its weekly edition had then been running a year and about two months, earlier. Among those who left the office of the South Bend Register to assist in starting the Tribune, was E. W. Hoover, a brother, we believe of Mrs. Isaac Hague of this city and of Frank Hoover at Ashley. The plant has grown to large dimensions, for South Bend is now a pretty large city and the plant has been well managed. It has besides its newspaper plant which has a Hoe perfecting press and uses linotype machines, a complete job department and a book bindery.

Hard on Indiana.

A late dispatch says: Friends of Hon. Perry S. Heath are worried by rumors of the approaching resignation of the first assistant postmaster-general. It is said that Mr. Heath, because he recommended Chas. F. W. Neely to an appointment in Cuba, will be forced to retire from political life. His supporters, however, are showing fight, and threats are made that others must also resign if the administration attempts to make Mr. Heath the scapegoat.

A Wrong Pension.

Congress should stop overdoing or rather wrong doing in the pension business and save the money for worthy veterans who need it. Here are some cases in point:

Representative Talbert, of S. C., has been making another warm speech on the Pension question, his text being the case of the Michigan man who draws $1,800 a year as a clerk in the Interior department, and $1,200 a year as private secretary to Representative S. W. Smith of Michigan, and who has been voted by congress a pension of $72 a month for total disability. Representative H. C Smith cited the case of Justice Long of the supreme court of Michigan, who draws a pension of $140 a month as an excuse for this case, and Mr. Talbert said in reply: "Two wrongs do not make one right. The gentleman asks now because one man is robbing and plundering the government unjustly and unmeritoriously, that another man may be placed on the pension roll and receive a high pension. This is the trouble about this indiscriminate grabbing of pensions. One man gets in and another man wants to get in. Members have their friends and they will not vote against each other. They will not have the reports read because they sit here like dummies saying, 'Oh, they will reach my case next.' That is what is the matter. You want to do a dozen wrongs to make one right and you want to continue to do wrong in order that your own cases may be favorably acted upon. I want to see justice done by the old soldiers and I will help do it every time if I can, but I do not want to give any soldier what he does not deserve."

Jackson Caucus.

Someone failed to make a full report of this meeting and we did not get it in time for the Weekly. It seems it was one of the largest ever held in the township.

The voters met at two p. m. Saturday, May 26, and waited till 3 to begin balloting. The chief struggle was on trustee for which there were four candidates, all good men. Tom Stafford stood two ballots, Silas Nugen stood seven, and then withdrew. The two candidates left were S. M. High and Simeon Maurer, Mr. High getting a majority of nine on the eighth ballot. This close vote on a total of 181 proves that Mr. Maurer is a hustler. But he says that Mr. High is a good man, which is a fact, and all will turn in and give him a big majority at the polls.

ASSESSOR.

There was quite a struggle over this office. S. J. Tarney took one ballot and then withdrew. The other two candidates were L. D. Nelson, Mandis Myers and S. J. Andress; Mr. Myers getting it on the third ballot.

Geo. Watson, Jack Huston and Joe Wilks were nominated for supervisors, but we did not get the names of the other three, nor of the men nominated for the township advisory board.

We wish the secretary of caucuses, or some one in it would send in full reports of all township caucuses.

Child With Two Heads.

A child was born to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Marshall, living six miles northwest of Elkhart, about five weeks ago, which had two heads, the extra or smaller head being on the left side of the neck and featureless, says the Goshen News. The physicians thought it would die within a few hours, as such freaks of nature usually do, but contrary to expectations it lived and grew. When three or four days old, the physicians operated upon the babe to remove the extra head, it being explained to the parents that if it lived, contrary to expectation, it had better be without the deformity than with it. The head was removed and was found to contain a relative amount of brain matter. The child is still alive and getting stronger physically. The physicians claim, however, that it will never be bright mentally if it lives.

It speaks well for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy when druggists use it in their own families in preference to any other. "I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for the past five years with complete satisfaction to myself and customers," says Druggist J. Goldsmith, Van Etten, N.Y. "I have always used it in my own family both for ordinary coughs and colds and for the cough following la grippe, and find it very efficacious." For sale by H. B. McCord.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

(Concluded from last week.)

The sun had just sunk as the German and his vehicle came around one of the continuation of hills. A swish, swish, swish attracted attention, and there in the road was just what Indiana people think they have to go back to the Middle Ages to find—a monk. His beads were swinging by the side of his black robe, his head was bare, the black cowl hanging loose. He was walking along in a solitude that few people realize exists in Indiana, and was humming, or rather chanting, a religious tune. There was glitter of a golden cross through an opening in the trees, and just then there came over the hilltops the 7 o'clock chimes from the old St. Benedictine Monastery. As though an echo of these great silver tongues brought from Europe, there was a tintinnabulation of chimes from different churches scattered over the hilltops. Ten minutes later there was a last dip in the hills and the old wagon drew into St. Meinrad, the monastery town of Indiana.

Crowning a majestic hill overlooking the hamlet is possibly the second heaviest and the least known building in Indiana—a monastery patterned in detail after the old one built by St. Benedict in the sixth century just outside the city of Naples. Located as it is, it commands a view of a valley of 10,000 acres converted into the great abbey farm and made to bloom like a garden in a paradise. Fifty monks were in from their missions, shut up in the monastery, doing penance. Beside the monks, there were over sixty "brothers" whose dress is not perceptibly different from that of the monks. Life at the abbey, and the monastery itself, may do for separate articles. It is sufficient that the summer vacationist knew that he need not go to Europe to find the historical "black monks" of an order over 1,400 years old, and that here in Indiana is an exact duplicate of a monastery erected before 600, and that it is filled with books and curios that date back to the days of the Crusades.

Old St. Meinrad, itself named after a monk, is a quaint old German community. English is spoken by the younger generations, and there is not the trouble one who only converses in English experiences in some other isolated communities. The heart and guiding spirit of the town is the monastery on the hill, and the pride of St. Meinrad centers in the $250,000 church that is being erected way out here eighteen miles away from a railroad and in a purely farming community. Wooden shoes are in every stock of goods, and they are worn, especially in wet weather and by the women working about the house. German customs and dress prevail.

The next morning on the mail stage—on a trip across the hills to Leopold, the wooden shoes were seen everywhere. The children came running down the paths carrying what seemed to be ponderous loads on their feet, and as the stage left the German country for a time and entered the French settlements centering around Leopold, twelve miles farther back in the hills, the wooden shoes seemed to be in even greater favor. The somber hues of German dress underwent, in a few miles, a most noticeable change in favor of the color of a gayer people. Leopold is another picturesque valley, the hilltops crowned with Catholic churches. It is said that on the out-roads there are in both the German and the French communities a few of the old fashioned wayside shrines.

Sun-dials are used out through isolated country communities and hour-glasses can be found in many homes. Spinning wheels that have been laid aside are still to be seen, and old women weave carpet on hand looms. The ordinary countryman, who has no watch has a habit of standing a stick upright, glancing at the shadow and announcing the time. The man with the watch finds it is within probably three minutes of being correct. Out through the isolated German communities the traveler may be shown to a bed where he will crawl between two feather-ticks as in old Germany. The Germans and the French are devout, hospitable and well posted, considering their isolation. They are, however, taciturn in conversation.

The next relay is over the hills, through German, French and English communities, to old Leavenworth, clinging to the side of an Ohio River hill, and enjoying in her isolation the reputation of being the Indiana point farthest off the map. Over four miles of hills to Wyandotte Cave and a day in the twenty two miles of underground passageways throws the next day's relay over eighteen miles of Crawford and Harrison county hills and through superb valleys to old Corydon. The last day is over the old Corydon, Lanesville and New Albany turnpike and plank road, that for beauty caused Bayard Taylor to say that at points it has no equal. It winds in and out, over the Silver Hills of Floyd county and down through the Knobs, and at last almost a week after he has left Lincoln City, the boyhood home of Abraham Lincoln, the traveler is again in the land of railroads and standard time, with a different appreciation of Indiana.

Stands Without a Rival.

Mr. Jno. N. Wilkie, of 36 Adams Ave. West Detroit, Michigan, writes:

"I have been troubled with very severe headache for years and have taken a great many different remedies, but have never found anything to give me as speedy and permanent a cure as Krause's Headache Capsules. In my opinion they stand without a rival; they have cured me every time." Sold by H. B. McCord.

—Colonel Cody, familiarly known as "Buffalo Bill," prophesies that we shall have a horse famine in this country next year. He advises farmers and ranchmen to go into the business of raising good horses, as the demand for them will be greater and the price better than for many years.

A Noted Doctor

Once said "most women lose their freshness and good looks much earlier in life than necessary because of inattention to nature's requirements. Because of their peculiar habits all should make a practice of using some simple laxative." There is no laxative so simple, so pleasant to take and yet so potent as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. —The disease known as "pink-eye" is prevalent among horses in the vicinity of Fort Wayne and the board of health there have ordered all public drinking fountains shut off in the hope of preventing a spread of the epidemic.

Quick Relief From Asthma.

Miss Maude Dickens, Parson, Kans., writes: "I suffered eight years with asthma in its worst form. I had several attacks during the last year and was not expected to live through them. I began using Foley's Honey and Tar and it has never failed to give immediate relief."

—Considering that Britain goes wild because ten of her men are slowly whipping one Boer, what would she do if she won a victory over a real foe?

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

ONE OF THE HUNDRED THOUSAND.

The funeral of Chas. Watkins, of Oxford, occurred at Green Hill cemetery recently, the deceased having been raised to manhood in the vicinity of Green Hill and Independance, Indiana. His school days were spent in Warren township—Pleasant Valley school. A bright little fellow he was, often having been heard to declare that he would never drink whiskey, as his home was cursed by the rum fiend in the person of his father. His grandfather was also a victim of our nation's greatest foe. Today "Charley," as we were wont in other days to call him, lies in a suicide's grave, one of the hundred thousand yearly driven to the drunkard's doom by the licensed dramshop, the craving for strong drink having descended to this representative of the "third generation."

When the Warren township's christian people think of the boy who was raised in their midst, let them remember that when "Charlie" shall settle his last account with his judge, at other hands than his shall his blood be required. It is said that just before he committed the rash deed that landed him in eternity, he declared, "Nobody cares for me," and yet the "big tenth" is dotted with churches. "O, it is pitiful near a whole city full," many of whom claim to walk "In His steps."

"We have been playing the part of ambulance conductors for the drink traffic long enough in picking up from the ditch of drunkenness these specimens of saloon handiwork in the form of bloated, besotted humanity, transformed by the saloon from the image of God to that of the brute creation, without adding some preventive for an alterative result.

"We have been whitewashing them and bringing them back to manhood while up the stream above are myriads of breweries, distilleries, saloons and while other drink dives and anti-rooms to shades, manufacturing a hundred where we can save one, and down they go through the slums of shame, disease, death and eternal damnation. While we extinguish one conflagation ten thousand torches are kindling fresh ones."

A Squirrel Story.

While in the office of Taxidermist I. A. Hathaway Wednesday, we saw a very large, fine fox squirrel which he had just mounted for Clarence Monroe, of Corunna. This spring Mr. Monroe cut a tree in which the squirrel had its home and when the tree fell the animal was found to be badly hurt. In its nest was found four baby squirrels about two days old, and they with the mother were taken to the home of Mr. Monroe and all made as comfortable as possible, but the mother squirrel did not recover. She realized herself that she would die, and before doing so she bit each of her little ones through the neck and then huddling her babies about her, this mother squirrel died in their midst.—Hudson Banner.

EVENTS OF INTEREST

THAT OCCURRED DURING THE PAST WEEK.

Tersely Told Telegraph Tales in Brief Paragraphs—Many Casualties—A Few Crimes—Some Fires—Political and Religious News.

Chicken Swallows Diamond.

George Rogers, who spends much of his leisure time on his country place, near Richland, Mo., feeding chickens for the market, is in a great dilemma. The other day while feeding his pets from his hand one of the greedy fowls nipped a $500 diamond from the ring on his finger, and before he could identify the culprit it had lost itself in the crowd. Rogers may have to kill his entire flock of 300 to find the jewel, though they are not yet ready for the market. If he kills them and doesn't find the jewel, he will be out over $100.

Rain Floods Illinois Town.

A heavy fall of rain in the nature of a cludburst caused several thousand dollars' damage along the banks of a small stream close to Heymouth, Ill. The stream rose so rapidly that in ten minutes from the first drop of rain the water had risen to the first floor windows of houses. People were driven to second stories, and the occupants of one-story houses forced to take to flight. Houses, barns and stacks were carried away, and there were a number of narrow escapes from drowning.

From Poverty to Millions.

David Ward, a pioneer, capitalist, lumberman and owner of a fortune of upward of $25,000,000, died at his home at Pontiac, Mich. Mr. Ward had been ill for several months with a brain trouble and general breaking down. Deceased was a native of New York. A self-made man of the hardest character, but of broad culture and education, Mr. Ward was identified since 1850 with leading enterprises, chiefly in the line of lumbering and pine land development and speculation.

Murder and Suicide.

At Cleveland, Ohio, Carl Raub, formerly connected with a German newspaper, shot and killed his niece, Miss Bertha Yucker, assistant principal of the Orchard street kindergarten school, and then killed himself. Raub was 50 years old and his niece 25. The exact motive for the deed has not yet developed. Raub was despondent over business affairs. The tragedy occurred at the home of Raub's sister, Mrs. Yucker, at No. 30 Steinway avenue.

Frightful Explosion of Glycerine.

At Whipple, just east of Marietta, Ohio, in shooting a well on the Kelly farm, there was a premature explosion of fifty quarts of glycerine. Four persons were killed and four fatally and three seriously wounded.

As everybody on the ground was either killed or injured, it is next to impossible to get a reliable description of the explosion.

Lightning Kills Two Men.

Lightning and wind played havoc at Jacksonville, Ill. Centenary Church spire was knocked over, and Thomas Wakely, who was riding in a street car by the building, was knocked senseless. George Osterholt and Carl Roach, who were at work in a corn field east of the city, were killed under a tree, where they had sought shelter from the storm.

Smallpox on Board.

San Francisco special: The transport Meade, with Major General E. S. Otis, which arrived Wednesday night, has three cases of smallpox aboard. She was placed in quarantine, where she will remain an indefinite period.

The Meade has on board the bodies of 112 soldiers who died in the Philippines.

Killed by Lightning.

Capt. Arlie Morrison, Frank Campbell and William Medlar were killed by lightning at St. Clair, Mich. The three men were at work in the cabin of a new boat. The lightning struck the mast, splintering it and passing down into the cabin. Morrison and Medlar were killed instantly; Campbell died in half an hour.

Warrant Out for Taylor.

Frankfort (Ky.) special: Judge Cantrell has directed Circuit Clerk Ford to issue a bench warrant for the arrest of former Governor Taylor. The warrant is based on an indictment secured several weeks ago charging Taylor with being an accessory to the assassination of William Goebel.

British Flag Floats Over Johannesburg.

The following dispatch from Lord Roberts has been received at the War Office in London:

"Her Majesty's forces are now in possession of Johannesburg and the British flag floats over the Government buildings."

Young Composer Ends Life.

Robert Wiziarde, a young author and composer who went to St. Joseph, Mo., several months ago from Kansas City, committed suicide in his studio by cutting the arteries in his wrists with a razor. He left no note to explain why he committed the deed.

One Woman Kills Another.

Mrs. Mattie Cadell was shot and instantly killed by Mrs. Lilly Gardner at Blocton, Ala. Mrs. Gardner had been living with her victim's husband. Mrs. Cadell had left home, but returned to get some of her belongings, when she was shot down.

PRICES RANGING DOWNWARD.

Transition to a Lower Range Comes Slowly—Dun's Trade Report.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: "Transition to a more natural range of prices after a time of extraordinary buying, speculation and rise is not wholly delightsome, however needful it may be to business health. But the gradual change this year, though wearying, has given opportunity in various branches to avoid losses. The decline in cotton was rendered sensational by the failure of the firm which had most strongly resisted it. The course of the market for some months to come cannot well be predicted, as provision for the future has been made by spinners on both sides of the ocean. Weakness in wool, as yet not enough to prompt heavy buying, has hindered free purchases of goods, without doubt. But the market is waiting, rather than unhealthy. The nominal price of Bessemer pig is held without change at Pittsburg and without transactons. Sudden and extensive changes are now reported in leather, and boots and shoes, the general decline averaging about 3 per cent. Failures for the week have been 185 in the United States, against 142 last year, and 20 in Canada, against 16 last year."

DAM BLOWN OUT BY CITIZENS.

Obstruction at Outlet of Lake Bemidji Is Removed.

The Scanlon & Gypson dam, recently erected across the Mississippi river at the outlet of Lake Bemidji, Minn., was blown out by a body of indignant citizens. It was constructed without any fishway and without an act of Congress. The back water from the dam flooded the cellars of many of the business houses in Bemidji. The village board of health formally condemned the dam as an obstruction of the Mississippi river and ordered its removal. The dam had just been completed by Scanlon & Gypson for the purpose of running saw logs from Lake Bemidji to Caps lake. The water in Lake Bemidji had been raised almost four feet by the dam and had shut down the Steid sawmill and made a dry bed of the river for six miles below the outlet of the lake, completely preventing the running of fish.

DEATH HALTS BRIDE AT ALTAR.

Dramatic Interruption of Wedding Ceremony in a Connecticut Town.

Death crept into a church at South Manchester, Conn., and laid its cold hand in veto of a marriage ceremony. The altar was banked in flowers and brightly illuminated. The organ was playing Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" and the bridal party were approaching the altar when suddenly the bride, Miss Hannah Leavitt, reeled and fell to the floor. "Hemorrhage of the brain," a doctor said. "She cannot recover." The bridegroom, John Wrenn, begged and implored the holy fathers to unite him in marriage to the woman he loved, but they shook their heads and said it would be impossible, as she was unconscious and could not make the necessary response nor understand what was going on.

TWO STUDENTS ARE KILLED.

Fatal Accident at a Picnic of Pekin High School.

A pile of bridge timbers, on which Wesley Smith, aged 18; Miss Jessie Skaggs, aged 16, and Miss Mabel Clauser, aged 18, were standing, collapsed at Mackinaw falls, Ill., instantly killing Smith, whose back was broken, and Miss Skaggs, whose neck was broken. Miss Clauser was severely injured. They were attending the picnic of the Pekin High School, of which they were members.

TURFMAN DWYER'S SON ELOPES.

Runs Away to Florida with Pearl Webber, 16 Years Old.

James Dwyer, son of Michael Dwyer, turfman, and his pretty 16-year-old sister-in-law, Pearl Webber, laughed at parental opinion that 21 and 16 were ages too tender for matrimony and have sailed away husband and wife. With two big wax dolls for traveling companions the youthful couple started on their way to Florida via the Clyde line steamer Comanche.

Suicide Ascribed to Eclipse.

After viewing the eclipse at Marietta, Ga., C. M. Crosby, a prominent druggist, shot himself fatally in the presence of his wife and children. The family arose early to witness the phenomenon, and the constant talk of the townsfolk on the great event seems to have perturbed him. He was of a nervous disposition and the strain was too much for his overwrought mind.

Held for the Kifer Murder.

Joseph D. Kieth, aged 38, a farmer living in Warrick County, was arrested on the charge of murdering Miss Nora Kifer, whose body was found in Pigeon creek, near Evansville, Ind. His 13-year-old son Jesse was arrested as an accomplice. William Clark, a carpenter living near Elberfeld, who was to marry Miss Kifer, is held as a witness in the case.

Young Girl Burns to Death.

The 12-year-old daughter of Mary Kent, who is now in McDowell County, W. Va., jail for the murder of George Bassett two months ago, was burned to death at the home of her brother, James Kent. Two other children were burned seriously. The burning building was falling in before any of the family awoke.

Girl Kills Vicious Bull.

Mary Potter, aged 15, of Milesburg, Pa., by a deed of courage saved her mother's life. The girl's mother, who is near 70, was driving cattle to the barn, when a vicious Jersey bull turned on her, throwing the aged woman into the air and trampling and kicking her. The screams of the injured woman attracted the attention of her daughter, who secured a pitchfork and ran the sharp tines into the animal's side. The second stroke sent the fork into the bull's heart, and he rolled over dead.

RAG PICKER HIDES HER RICHES.

Beautiful Clothes and Goodly Fortune Left by Supposed Beggar.

Sarah E. Gardner, an old, decrepit rag picker who died at Newport, R. I., turns out to have been the niece of Commodore Perry of Lake Erie fame. Her will, which was offered for probate, leaves property estimated worth between $20,000 and $50,000 to the Rhode Island Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Miss Gardner was about 70 years old at the time of her death and her body was found in a wretched hovel in which she had lived alone for years. Since her mother was killed by a railroad train in 1842 she had lived as a servant in the houses of society people. When she became too old for active work she secured a hut and for many years had made her daily rounds of the garbage barrels and lugged to the hut the results of her day's labor. She was never known to sell any of the old rags, junk and bones that she picked up in her travels and it had been a mystery for years how she disposed of them. When she died every room in the house was found crammed to overflowing with the product of her years of labor.

MUST KILL FLOCK TO FIND GEM.

Breeder Will Seek a Chicken that Swallowed His Diamond.

George Foster, a wealthy chicken breeder at Richland, Mo., who makes pets out of the fowls so that they eat from his hand, has learned that it does not pay to get too familiar with them while feeding for fattening. It cost him a diamond ring, and now he will either have to kill the entire flock consisting of 300 not quite big enough for market and lose more than $100 or he will have to forego the chance of recovering his jewel. While feeding from his hand a chicken pecked at the flashing gem and it came out and was swallowed. Before Foster could identify the particular diamond eater he had lost himself in the flock and a serious dilemma confronts him. He has decided to cut the gordian knot by killing the entire flock.

STATE DISCLAIMS ANY RIGHT.

Half-Breed Murderer Over Whom No One Wants Jurisdiction.

Van Moore, the half-breed who beat a squaw to death on the Bad river, in South Dakota, several days ago, surrendered at the Cheyenne agency. The agent has asked Deputy Marshal Strayer to take charge of him, but Strayer has received a telegram from United States Marshal Kennedy that the crime having been committed in the organized county of Stanley it must be taken up by the State courts. The authorities of Stanley County insist that as the parties interested are all wards of the general government it is the duty of the government to care for them.

Fire Ruins Business Blocks.

At Apalachicola, Fla., fire destroyed six blocks of business houses and many private residences. The fire originated in the residence of Mrs. Broughton. It leaped over to the Methodist Church, which was destroyed, and from there spread over the business portion of the town. In less than three hours six blocks were consumed. The loss is $500,000.

CENSUS ARMY MOVES.

ENUMERATORS ARE COUNTING UNCLE SAM'S MILLIONS.

Experts Say Results Will Prove that This Is the Greatest of Civilized Nations—Complete Figures Are Due December 1.

The 52,600 census enumerators are making their rounds. Two hundred and ninety-seven supervisors have them in charge. In addition to the staff at headquarters in Washington, four chief inspectors are out on the road and more than 2,000 special agents are also prepared to jump into their designated fields of inquiry. Fifty-five thousand men to gather information about 75,000,000. It looks like a big army, and it is bigger than any army the Boers have had in the field in South Africa. But this is a great country.

The end of the century census, the twelfth which Uncle Sam has taken, is expected to show that the United States is to-day the greatest, the most populous, the richest, the most prosperous and the most rapidly growing modern nation. The experts have already figured out that the total population will leap from 62,000,000 in 1890 to between 75,000,000 and 76,000,000 in 1900.

Mulhall, the English statistician, last fall figured the population of the United States June 1, this year, at 77,300,000. The treasury experts made it still higher. Census Director Merriam has estimated 73,000,000 or 74,000,000, but for obvious reasons he is conservative. There are experts here who are willing to wager that the grand total, when finally wound up, will not be over 76,000,000 nor under 75,000,000. It will beat the civilized world. Germany has only two-thirds as many people, France and Great Britain only a little over half as many. Russia and China have more, but their hordes are not to be reckoned in the category of fully civilized modern peoples.

Director Merriam expects to be able to announce the population of many American cities within the month. Washington will come first and rapidly thereafter New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and all the large cities.

The census experts give a most interesting prediction. It is that this census will show the United States to have a larger number of cities with a population exceeding 100,000 than any other nation. We shall show about forty such municipalities, and our nearest rival, it is believed, is India. In this competition China is not counted, as the population of Chinese cities is largely a matter of guessing, and they are mere collections of villages at best. The experts have also figured out that the center of population in the United States has now traveled about sixty miles west of Columbus, Ind., and is now not far from the Illinois line. "Westward the star of empire."

In increase of wealth the great West is expected to astonish the East. As a new apportionment of the United States for Congress and the electoral college is to be made next winter upon the basis of this census, as required by the constitution, the growth of population in the West will speedily bring increase of political power. Before Dec. 1 Director Merriam expects to announce the total population of the United States so that Congress may upon its reassembling at once proceed to make the new apportionment required by the constitution. The total cost of the census is estimated at from $15,000,000 to $16,000,000.

Just a hundred years ago Virginia was the first State of the Union, with a population of 880,000. This year it will fall back to about twentieth place. At the beginning of the century Massachusetts stood third in the list. Ten years ago it was sixth. In this census it is pretty sure to be outstripped by Texas, Indiana, Michigan and Iowa.

The special agents who are to gather information as to American manufacturing industries are at work. During the next three months they will finish their tasks. On this score the results are likely to be amazing. This feature of the census more than any other will show the greatness of the United States.

SURVIVORS OF THE CIVIL WAR.

Evans Estimates that Union Veterans Number 925,000.

Veterans of the civil war are dying off at the rate of about 3 1-3 per cent per annum. Commissioner of Pensions Evans estimates that there are about 925,000 survivors of the civil war. Of this number there were on the pension rolls last year 742,467. During the year 24,787 pensioned veterans died. This number is slightly more than 3 1-3 per cent. Assuming that the death rate among those not pensioned is the same as among the pensioners, the total number of veterans who died during the year would be about 30,855.

PRESIDENT KRUGER.

KRUGER BEGAN THE WAR.

Natal Invaded Just After His Ultimatum Was Cabled.

After a little longer than six months of hard fighting, having 240,000 men in the field—the largest army England ever raised—Great Britain has conquered the two Boer republics of South Africa, which hereafter will be a part of the empire. Presidents Steyn and Kruger are fugitives, and when captured doubtless will be sent to join the intrepid Cronje on the rock of St. Helena. The war has cost England fully £200,000,000 in money; the lives of fully 10,000 men were sacrificed; as many men are yet in hospital suffering from wounds or disease, and 5,000 prisoners of war are waiting at Pretoria to be liberated by Lord Roberts' victorious columns.

In return for her expenditures of blood and money England gets undisputed possession of the diamond fields of the Orange Free State and the gold fields of the Transvaal—the latter the main source of the empire's gold supply—and hereafter those who own the property and pay the taxes in these two countries will have representation in their governing bodies.

As for the Boers, whose brave and determined fight against overwhelming odds commanded the admiration of the world, they lose an identity which never benefited them to any particular extent and an independence which existed only in name. President Kruger's government was in reality an oligarchy; its chief executive was more of a despot than Russia's Czar; the burgher was not a freeman in the American sense; he enjoyed few educational facilities; his thinking was done for him and he cast his ballot as directed. The South African republic was the only nation calling itself civilized that encouraged slavery; women occupied an inferior position; religious liberty in the republic was unknown; only those in power could hope to secure a competence, the main body of the people being poor, with no opportunities for bettering their condition.

It was the night of Oct. 10, 1899, that President Kruger cabled his ultimatum to Lord Salisbury, which was, in effect, that war was on between the two countries from that date unless the British Government receded from its contention that it was entitled to exercise the right of suzerainty over the affairs of the South African republic. Within a few hours the English premier replied through the office of the secretary of state for the colonies that the question was too grave a one to be answered without reflection, and the next day the invasion of Natal by the Boers began, three columns pouring in from the Free State and the Transvaal. So far as can be estimated, about 45,000 Boers were put into the field, and as every man was a fine marksman, fighting behind defenses practically impregnable, the burghers had advantages on their side that only numerical superiority, patience and time could overcome. Therefore, the Boers scored many successes, the British suffering several disastrous defeats before they learned the art of war as practiced by the wily mountaineers.

No figures regarding Boer losses have ever been given out, it being the practice of the burghers to bury their dead as soon as possible and make no report on them whatever.

Bloemfontein, the capital of the Orange Free State, was entered by the British March 12, this resulting in breaking the backbone of the Free Staters' resistance. President Steyn fled to Winburg and established his capital there, but was later compelled to abandon the place, and the Orange republic being declared out of existence, hundreds of burghers gave up their rifles and returned to their farms. From that date the advance of the invading forces was not checked; the siege of Wepener was raised after several sharp engagements had been fought, the border of the Orange Free State was crossed and the territory of the South African republic entered for the first time since the opening of hostilities; Mafeking was relieved after a siege of 214 days, and the march upon Johannesburg, the metropolis of the Transvaal, was begun in earnest. It was thought there would be serious resistance at the Gold Reef City, but when Lord Roberts' army approached the Boers decided it was futile to attempt driving the British back, and the town was surrendered May 30 without a shot being fired.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS.

Their World's Convention Promises to Be a Great Gathering.

The first world's convention of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor will be held in London, beginning July 10. This convention promises to be the greatest on record; 10,000 Americans, the largest delegation that ever crossed the sea in a body, are expected to be present, and with the Endeavors in the United Kingdom and those from the continent and other foreign countries, the total number will probably reach 60,000, representing 4,000,000 members. The convention is to be held in the Alexandra Palace, an immense structure just out of London proper.

The task of caring for such a great crowd is one of no mean proportions and many difficulties have arisen in the path of those who have in charge the arrangement of the details for the reception of the visitors. The principal one of these is to find boarding places for the delegates. Every bed in the hotels, boarding houses and private homes of the Endeavorers has been engaged for the eventful week and still 5,000 of the expected guests would have no place to lay their head, to say nothing of filling their stomachs. This difficulty can be averted, however, in the minds of the managers. It is planned to lodge these 5,000 homeless ones in the Alexandra Palace. The structure has a great banqueting hall and this large room will be divided off into dormitories, enough of them to hold 1,200 young women. This leaves 3,800 young men to be cared for and for this army the managers planned to erect a mighty encampment under canvas, like any other army would have. One thousand tents are needed, but the job of getting them is a herculean one. All the tentmakers of any consequence in England are engaged in turning out tents for the great army of British soldiers who are at war in South Africa. The managers of the convention were therefore obliged to place their orders with small tentmakers who are also rushed with work and so they hardly know where the tents are coming from, but they do know that none of the guests will be left out in the cold. Another setback for the delegates is the fact that the ocean rates are high this year, due to the fact that England has many of the passenger ships in her transport service and also to the Paris exposition.

The Endeavorers will get a royal welcome in the English metropolis. The lord mayor himself will give a reception to the American contingent and the bishop of London will probably make an address the day before the convention.

THE GREAT ALEXANDRA PALACE.

Lightning Hits Monument.

Lightning struck the soldiers' monument at Byron, Ill., partly destroying it. It was the first to be erected after the civil war. A terrific electrical storm forced the crowds to retire to Gill's hall to conclude the memorial ceremonies, and while the speaker of the day was calling the roll of the dead there came a terrific crash, accompanied by a sheet of flame, shaking the ground like an earthquake, and the monument was ruined.

Seize Neely's Printing Plant.

United States Marshal Foley of Indianapolis went to Muncie and with a writ of attachment closed the plant of the Neely Printing Company pending a hearing in the United States Court before Judge Baker of Indianapolis. The action is the result of alleged discoveries that the property is subject to the liabilities of Charles F. W. Neely, charged with being a defaulter in the sum of more than $40,000.

CONGRESS

In the Senate on Friday discussion of the Spooner Philippine bill was continued by Mr. Morgan. On the general question of government of the islands by the United States he was in accord with Senators Spooner and Lodge, but he regarded the Spooner bill as unwise and dangerous legislation because of the great power it placed in the hands of the President. Mr. Allison then called up the sundry civil appropriation bill, which carries $65,812,930, or over $4,000,000 more than the bill as it passed the House.

The Senate on Saturday agreed to the resolution for an investigation by the committee on Cuban affairs of the Cuban postal and other irregularities, authorising the committee to visit Cuba if necessary to pursue the inquiry. Some time was given to the sundry civil appropriation bill without completing it, and to District of Columbia business. One of the latter measures provides extensive depot and terminal improvements in Washington for the Baltimore and Potomac and Baltimore and Ohio railroads, and for the removal of the historic "long bridge," the highway from the North to the South during the war of the rebellion. Passed the bill granting a pension of $50 a month to Mrs. Mary L. Stotsenberg, widow of the late Col. Stotsenberg of the First Nebraska volunteers, who was killed in the Philippines. The House practically completed the consideration of the Alaska civil government bill. Mr. Cooper (Wis.), chairman of the committee on insular affairs, presented a favorable report on the Hay resolution calling upon the Postmaster General for certain information regarding the reports of E. G. Rathbone, director of the posts in Cuba, and the resolution was adopted without division. Another resolution from the same committee, introduced by Mr. Jones (Va.), calling upon the Secretary of War to report in detail the payments made and to whom from the revenue of Cuba and Porto Rico, was also adopted.

In the Senate on Monday reading of the sundry civil appropriation bill was completed, but not all of the committee amendments disposed of. A lively debate was precipitated over the proposition to continue the life of the industrial commission until Oct. 31, 1901. Charges were made that the commission was being used as a Republican campaign machine and that important testimony had been suppressed. The committee amendment, however, was agreed to. In the House the Alaskan civil government bill was passed and some odds and ends of legislation were cleaned up. Mr. Dalzell gave notice that the anti-trust resolution and bill reported by the judiciary committee would be considered Wednesday, Thursday and Friday under a special order.

The Senate on Tuesday added to the sundry civil appropriation bill an amendment appropriating $5,000,000 for the Louisiana purchase exposition, to be held in St. Louis in 1903, on condition that $10,000,000 in addition be raised by the exposition authorities. The amendment was adopted without debate and without division. Because an amendment offered by him subsequently was stricken out on a point of order, Mr. Gallinger (N. H.) moved to reconsider the St. Louis fair amendment, and that motion now is pending. Mr. Bacon (Ga.) addressed the Senate at length on the Teller resolution expressing sympathy for the Boers, after which the resolution was referred to the committee on foreign relations by a vote of 40 to 26. Mr. Fairbanks (Ind.) endeavored to secure consideration of the bill providing for the extradition of criminals from the United States to Cuba, but Mr. Allison declined to lay aside the appropriation bill for that purpose. The House, by a vote of 107 to 124, refused to accept the Senate amendment to the naval appropriation bill relating to armor plate, and adopted a modified proposition authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to secure armor by contract, and if he cannot purchase it at what he deems a reasonable price, he is instructed to purchase a site and erect a factory for the manufacture of armor plate, appropriating the sum of $4,000,000 for this purpose. With regard to ocean and lake surveys, the House refused any appropriation for surveys by the navy, and tied up the conferees with instructions. It also refused to concur in the Senate amendment to abolish the two years' sea cruise for naval cadets. With the above action the naval bill was sent back to conference, the conference report on the other items having been agreed to. The conference report on the postoffice appropriation bill, agreeing on all items except the Senate amendment appropriating $225,000 for pneumatic tube service, was adopted, and the House then concurred in the excepted amendment.

The Senate was not in session on Wednesday. In the House the program of the leaders contemplated the launching of the debate upon the anti-trust resolution and bill, but there was a strong undercurrent in favor of adjournment on account of Decoration day. Mr. Dalzell, who presented the special order under which the House was to operate, in deference to this sentiment withdrew it in order that the 190 pension bills might be passed, and after they had been disposed of, as a further mark of respect the House adjourned. The Chinese commission bill, which was under consideration several weeks ago, has gone back to the calendar, the motion to strike out the enacting clause having been defeated.

FROM THE BLOOMS O' THE MAY.

You have drifted away from the blooms o' the May—
From the sunshine that silvered Love's beautiful day;
But your memory, sweet as the tenderest song,
Cheers a desolate life on the dark way along.

You have drifted away—so I sing—so I say;
The green's left the hills, and the heavens are gray;
But love that shone true in the dear eyes of you,
Makes me dream that those heavens are still bending blue!

You have drifted away. Like an echo to-day
In my soul, rings that sad song of "Drifting Away!"
But can Love ever drift to the darkness? No sight
Can drown with its shadows Love's beautiful light!
—Atlanta Constitution.

The Heart of a Singer

"COME back to Erin, Mavourneen, Mavourneen." Joyously sweet and clear, nearer and nearer, came the voice. The professor sat motionless, listening with bated breath, lest he lose a syllable of that sweet old song, sung in that sweet young voice. As the voice ceased he looked out. Coming toward the house, balancing in either hand a foaming pail of milk, was a young girl. Even ere the song was finished a harsh, tired voice called sharply, "Come, Beth, don't yell so. You'll wake baby, and I've been an hour getting her asleep. Hurry and set the table."

The world was two months older. Into the best parlor shone the afternoon sunshine, playing gleefully on walls that seemed to shrink from the unaccustomed glare. In one of the prim, straight-backed chairs at the front windows sat Prof. Helfen, while opposite at the other window sat a weary, sad-faced woman, tearing idly at the huge red woolen curtain tassel, that had never before been treated so roughly.

"My good woman, think. She has a

"DID IT TELL YOU ALL?"

fortune in her voice. She has a voice in a thousand—a gem. But it is in the rough; it needs polishing—years of it; and it must be polished gently. Then it will shine—oh, doch!"

Over in the corner a slim, dark-eyed girl hung broken-breathed on their words.

A silence that seemed to the girl full of strange bright sounds chasing one another noiselessly till they met in one clash. "Yes, yes; she can go. But bring her back, bring her back. I've seven, but I can't spare her forever." Then somehow Beth found herself in her mother's arms, who for once in her life of habitual self-control had given way. And so the ultimatum went forth. Beth was to go.

Out in the garden twilight was falling; the beautiful tender sky colors were slowly fading into the dusk of night; the very air, full of the scent of the hay, was a caress. The very peace of it seemed a mockery to Paul as he stood before her.

"You say you'll remember, Beth, but you won't—you won't; I know it as if years had already passed."

"Listen, Paul." Her voice, soft and soothing, had caught his earnestness. "I shall never forget; you know my nature too well to believe your own words. This is the hardest part of it, Paul—to leave you. But the years will soon pass, Paul. We are both young, and no lesson he may try to teach me can blot out the teaching of eighteen years of life, and with such a teacher. You believe me, Paul?"

* * * * * * *

Two weeks of the opera had begun. In breathless, darkened silence the vast audience waited for the opening aria, to be sung by this unknown singer, whose fame, rumor had whispered, would become world-wide.

At the end of the third act, an act of triumph for the little unknown country girl, a note was handled her. She tore it nervously open. "You looked long at me more than once to-night. I knew then memory was whispering to you. Was it faithful, I wonder? Did it tell you all? Did it tell you where and when we last met? Did it repeat the words that were spoken then?" There was no signature.

It seemed ages to Paul before the boy returned with an answer. He opened it slowly, yet with quick fingers. "Memory has been whispering eight long years, Paul. Can I then forget? Ah, 'tis you who forgot; all my foolish little letters unanswered. You were cruel, Paul. Didn't you hear me tell you my heartache in that last song? I was singing to you—not my fierce Italian lover. I'm alone after the opera in my dressing-room."

Like a flash he saw all; heard the professor's voice saying: "You can't love, child; art has no room for love." And the seven long years of silence grew shorter.

Paul knocked at the door the stage hand pointed out to him. He had evidently been expected.

"Who?" said a voice inside, answering his knock. "I—Paul!" And the door slowly opened.

Distinguished Opponents of Exercise

A story is going the rounds that when William M. Evarts was asked the other day to what he ascribed his long life and excellent health, he replied:

"I don't know, unless it is because I don't take any exercise."

Mr. Evarts isn't the only public man who has a theory that physical exercise, added to mental effort, is a waste of tissue which tends toward debility and shortening of life. Joseph Chamberlain is a conspicuous example. He spares himself all physical effort so far as he can. He will not walk up a single flight of stairs if he can help it. Senator Hanna is, perhaps, the most notable exponent of this practice in Washington. Vigorous as he is in speech and in mental effort, the Senator is seldom seen save in an attitude which suggests physical repose. The president walks daily. He feels badly without his constitutional. Nobody can remember to have seen Senator Hanna accompanying the president on a walk in the three years at Washington.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A MODERN MARTIAN.

French Woman Who Recalls in France Three Previous Existences.

French savants are excited over the discovery of a woman who is subject to fits of somnambulism in which she refers to three previous existences—on the planet Mars, in India, and in France in the time of Marie Antoinette. As regards her most recent previous existence, there are too many opportunities for trickery, in these days of historical novels, for her investigators to lay any stress upon this period. Without any opportunity for learning those languages, however, she speaks Sanscrit and Arabic fluently when reverting to her Indian pre-existence. Ancient manuscripts have demonstrated the truth of certain episodes to which she referred. It is, however, as a Martian that she naturally becomes of most interest. As such she speaks a presumably Martian language, with clearly articulated sounds, and referring certain recurrent words to associated definite ideas. She also writes in the Martian language—or what is assumed to be that—as the peculiar characters used do not vary. No wonder the French savants are excited.

We rather suspect that the belief in the doctrine of reincarnation is more general than is supposed. Those who are believers are very strong in their belief. Indeed, some of them insist that they are able, in their dreamy moments, to recall some snatches of their previous existence. But unfortunately few of them are able to speak Sanscrit or Arabic or write in the Martian language. Therefore, when one comes along in whom the reincarnation is strong and who has these accomplishments, we seem very near the solution of a profound mystery. Let us hope that the lady in question, who, according to the account, is "30 years of age, of unimpeachable character, and works in a commercial house," will not fall in love. We all remember how Kipling's hero, by such a catastrophe, spoiled "The Greatest Story in the World."

Still, we must await further developments before passing judgment. There be those among us who remember Locke and the "Moon Hoax." And so, until we have other testimony as to the truthfulness of the story that this thrice reincarnated woman has actually been seen, and is not a creation of the space writer's vivid imagination, we must take M. Flourney with a grain of salt.—Boston Transcript.

HE DODGED THE PENITENTIARY.

Fate of a Man Who Wrote His Experience on the Problem of Living.

"These letters on the problem of living on stated salaries take me back a few years to the time when I was working seven nights and Sundays on a Western newspaper," said a man who is still in the business.

"The editor encouraged the staff to write on the problem of keeping up appearances and a bank account at the same time on the salaries they drew weekly with promptness. The editor had been a successful man and he wanted his men to follow his methods.

"Every one on the staff had contributed the called for article except myself. The editor called me in his office and said he would like to have my experience for publication. I turned in the same a week later. A few days after the editor called me in again and said he had read the screed—that is the name he gave it—and proceeded to tell me what he thought of it. 'You say,' he began, 'that you get $25 a week; that you keep up with the fashions; that you have course dinners; that you sometimes go home in a cab; that you smoke six cigars daily, at 10 cents a smoke; that you entertain your friends after office hours, and so on. Do you mean to tell me, for you have kept that out of your article, that you save any money at this gait?'

"I replied that I didn't save a cent.

"'Do you break even at this gait?' he inquired.

"I replied that I did not; that I was in debt, and hopelessly so.

"'Then,' he said in a very fierce way, 'if you keep this up you'll land in the penitentiary.'

"I thanked him for his consolation and passed out. But the article appeared the following Sunday. I quit the paper soon after and went to another city. About ten years after I met my former boss and after the usual greetings he asked me if I was still living at the same gait. I told him I was, or had been.

"'And you have escaped the penitentiary?' he asked. I informed him that I had up to that time succeeded in dodging that institution. He grunted and we separated. If he had asked me if I had escaped the poorhouse he would no doubt have got an answer that would have tickled him to death."

BUFFALO'S EXPOSITION

NEXT spring the city of Buffalo will throw open to the world the gates of an exposition which will go far toward making Buffalo famous for something else besides the Niagara Falls. For two years artists, landscape gardeners, architects and public-spirited citizens have labored with but one point of view, to make the Pan-American exposition of 1901 a show notable among the minor expositions of the country. It will not be of a class with the Chicago World's Fair, for to that stupendous exposition all the civilized world contributed its share. Indeed, the very name of the Buffalo exposition signifies that it is not a world's fair, but an exhibition of the products and progress of all America. Canada, Mexico and the States of Central America will vie with manufacturers and producers of the United States in the competition for medals and diplomas, and the exposition will serve to bind still closer together the peoples of this continent.

The aggregate resources of the Pan-American exposition authorities amount to $5,800,000 and with this sum a splendid exposition should be assured. The government appropriated $500,000 for the government exhibit, the State of New York added $300,000 and in addition there is an authorized capital of $2,500,000 and an authorized bond issue of the same amount.

In June, 1899, the national government, through the Department of State at Washington, issued invitations to the foreign nations of the western hemisphere to participate in the exposition.

Official acceptances have already been received from Canada, Mexico, Honduras, Nicaragua, Salvador, Guatemala, Guadaloupe, Dutch Guiana, Bolivia, Argentine Republic and Chili. Inofficial assurances have been received that the other South American countries will accept the invitation as soon as the necessary forms of legislative sanction have been complied with.

General Plan of Exposition.

The exposition grounds include 350 acres, of which 133 acres are improved park lands, a part of Delaware park. The grounds are about one mile from north to south and a half mile from east to west. Their situation is in the northern part of the city, accessible from every direction. The park lands form the southern part of the extensive grounds and are pronounced by expert landscape architects to be among the most beautiful in the world. The trees and shrubbery in wonderful variety, the romantic footpaths leading in all directions among the thick foliage, the loveliest of lakes, on whose surface numberless swans and other water fowl of immaculate plumage are constantly at sport, the wide reaches of lawn and the rich embroidery of flowers everywhere to be seen all combine to refresh and restore the mind of him who tarries within these delectable precincts.

The visitor who approaches the exposition from the south will enter the grounds on Lincoln parkway, a broad, beautiful, shaded boulevard. Crossing the triumphal bridge, which will be one of the artistic beauties of the grounds, the visitors enters the esplanade, an immense open space which will accommodate 250,000 people and in which it is designed to carry out various ceremonies during the exposition, at which a great concourse of people may attend.

The visitor is now fairly within the grand court formed by the main group of exposition buildings. The court is of the shape of an inverted T. The approach, fore court and bridge are about 1,000 feet in length, 300 feet wide. The main court is 2,000 feet long, 500 feet wide, and the transverse court, across the esplanade, is 1,700 feet from east to west. On either side of the triumphal bridge are the mirror lakes. These are a part of the grand canal, which completely encircles the great group of buildings, and upon which the visitor may ride in one of the many electric launches or take a more leisurely trip in a Venetian gondola. The canal is lined with young trees and banked with grass on its outer edge. Picturesque bridges cross it at many points.

Standing on the esplanade and facing north the great group of buildings at the right, at the extreme east end of the transverse court, are those of the federal government. The main building, in which will be sheltered a greater portion of the government exhibits, is 600 feet long by 130 feet wide. A central dome rises to a height of 250 feet above the main floor and is surmounted by a statue of Victory, twenty feet high. The lesser buildings, each 150 feet square, are west of the main building 150 feet on the north and south lines of the main structure. Curved colonnades connect the smaller buildings with the greater, forming a spacious semi-circular court opening to the west. The government exhibits will include the aquariums and ichthyological collection of the United States fish commission and extensive collective exhibits from the Philippines, Porto Rico and Hawaii.

At the far western end of the broad transverse court is the horticultural building, 220 feet square, flanked on the north by the graphic arts building and on the south by the forestry and mines building. They are connected by circular arcades, forming a broad court similar to that inclosed by the government group. Behind the arcades are the conservatories. The Esplanade is made beautiful with fountains, sunken gardens, pergolas and colonnades.

Immediately north of the Esplanade is the court of the fountains. At the right is the ethnological building and at the left the music building, each 150 feet square. The court of the fountains is to be the great center piece of the exposition. Here the principal electrical displays are to take place. The court is to be illuminated at night with the diffused light of more than 100,000 incandescent electric lamps, the distribution being so perfect that there will be no shadows. Colors will be extensively employed to produce fantastic effects. The huge steel tower, 350 feet high, which stands at the north end of the court of the fountains, will be used in the production of extraordinary electric features. One of these will be an electric waterfall thirty feet wide and of seventy feet descent, from a niche in the tower. The tower itself is of imposing design and intricate workmanship. The many foundations in the great basin of the court will be made beautiful at night by means of electric lights of all colors. The very extraordinary electrical features of the exposition are made possible by the fact that electric power from the largest power plant in the world, at Niagara Falls, is to be provided in unlimited quantities. This power plant is only half an hour's ride from Buffalo and is one of the great sights for visitors to the exposition to include in their itinerary.

Opposite the court of the fountains the the two big buildings of the exposition, the machinery and transportation building on the west and the manufactures building on the east. These are each 500 by 350 feet and each has a beautiful tropical court with an aquatic pool in the center.

Some of the Buildings.

From here a broad avenue shaded by poplars, called the Mall, extends between the agricultural and electricity buildings and beyond them are the manufacturers building and ten acres devoted to live stock exhibits. Headquarters of all the officials of the exposition will be in the service building, which is close to the machinery and transportation building, one of the most important structures of the exposition.

The massive steel tower divides the court of the fountains from the Plaza. It stands in a large aquatic basin and a picturesque bridge enables the visitor to reach it from the Plaza. In the tower, at the height of seventy feet, is a large restaurant. There are promenade floors at various heights and a balcony near the summit, from which a bird's-eye view of the exposition, the city, Lake Erie, Niagara River, and open country may be obtained. All the floors are reached by means of elevators.

The Plaza is 500 feet by 350 feet. Standing at the tower building, at the right, is the stadium building, 341 feet long by 52 feet wide, with towers 164 feet high. This ornate building forms the entrance to the athletic field or stadium, where 25,000 people may be seated to witness the high-class athletic contests to be provided. The athletic carnival of 1901 is intended to be the greatest ever given in America.

Of course there is a Midway. No exposition would be complete without one after the world-famous "Midway" of the Chicago exposition of 1893. Midway of the Buffalo show will be in the form of an anchor, one rather winding street lined with the principal shows and a cross street at the end for the "overflow." Applications for space on the Midway have poured in from all concelvable sources and for all manner of entertainments and novelties, and the director of concessions will be enabled to choose a splendid lot of "shows" for the street.

The general style of the buildings is that of the Spanish renaissance, modified to suit the character of an exposition. There is a generous use of color, the red roofs and tinted walls giving the completed work a festival aspect. Domes, lanterns, pinnacles and statues, waving flags and streamers make gay the sky line. The facades of the buildings are everywhere broken with elaborate architectural features and arcaded effects are much used throughout the vast group. There are more than twenty large buildings and massive architectural works, besides the numerous state and foreign buildings, buildings for special exhibits, public comfort and other purposes. The extensive use of trees, shrubs, flowers and aquatic pools relieves the severity that is usually encountered in exposition groups.

Nevada Spunk.

There is a humorous florist in this city by the sea. Whether it is intentional or not, nobody knows, but he has certainly had some funny experiences of late. The other day a woman in Nevada wrote to him that her husband was dead and that she "wanted something nice for John" to be sent at once. With due dispatch he plucked a horseshoe off the wall where it had rested for years, and filling it with sweet white roses, he forwarded it to the widow.

In a few days the expressman drove up and said the charges on an awkward-looking bundle he carried were $1.05. The florist paid him, and upon opening the little gift found the horseshoe, looking as if it had had a bad night, and thoroughly dilapidated. On top was pinned a slip of paper which said:

"Dear Sur—Mebbe you think yer funny, but even if my John wuz a blacksmith you needn't send no horseshoe. He wuz rispectable and honest and you hain't got no right to make fun by him."

At last accounts the budding young man had made no reply, but it's two to one that if some gambler dies he will send up a broken wheel.—Salt Lake Tribune.

Invented the Arc Light.

A patent record which has been unearthed at Toronto shows that the original inventors of the electric arc light were two Toronto men, Henry Woodward, a medical student, and Matthew Evans, a saloon-keeper. The invention, completed in 1873, was the fruit of their joint experiments. It was patented in the following year.

"Protection" for Gamblers.

It is estimated that gamblers in New York have been paying over $2,000,000 a year for "protection."

Flowers in Mexico.

One of the chief delights of the city of Mexico is its flowers. Roses, violets, forget-me-nots, marguerites and lilies bloom all the year round. There are few weeks when a quarter will not buy a splendid big bunch and when a silver dollar will not fill the vases in the house to overflowing. Flowers are sold not only at the flower market near the cathedral, that is devoted entirely to flowers, strawberries and birds, but at the other markets and on the street corners. The "flower girls" of the capital are all boys and men. At some places in Mexico, particularly Guadalajara, little girls are to be seen on the streets all day and in the evening offering boutonnieres for which they will not set a price, but ask you to give what you please. It is hard to find a flower on sale anywhere after midday. The flower seller makes bouquets in the most artistic fashion. The street venders never sell loose cut flowers, but arrange them on a basework of green so that each flower stands by itself, and the whole bunch is prettily finished with a garniture of green leaves or ferns.

AUBURN WEEKLY COURIER.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, postoffice as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.....JUNE 7, 1900.

An Up-to-Date Youngster.

The following story is told on a young man about town who has been taking charge of the family milk producer. The cow in question has been kept in a pasture on the edge of the city and it has been Young America's duty to drive the cow to and from pasture.

About 15 days ago the cow gave birth to a calf and for a time the two were allowed to remain at the pasture. The young man's parents had never seen the calf and one day last week Young America sold the calf to a meat dealer, bought a five-day-old calf from a party living near the pasture and put it with the cow.

The lad cleared $1.50 by the deal, which he invested in a livery rig on Sunday and had a royal good time, while the deluded mother calf is compelled to play the part of an orphan asylum and raise an adopted calf.—Decatur Journal.

Aguinaldo Dead.

After all the rumors about the death of Aguinaldo and also about his escape from the islands, there are now the best of reasons to believe that he was killed in a skirmish, May 19.

Major March of the 33d infantry has been following him since last November. At times he would get near the fleeing chief, and then lose him in the wild and mountainous parts of northern Luzon. Then March would stop and give his men a rest. Then he would again get a trace of the fugitive and start after him. May 6 word came that he was at Loboagan, province of Abra. He was closely followed day after day until May 19 there was a skirmish and the only officer on horseback among the enemy fell. The horse was captured, and from papers in the saddle-bags it was either Aguinaldo or his adjutant. The body was carried away.

Sunday School Convention.

The thirty-fifth annual convention of the DeKalb County Sunday School Association will be held in the M. E. church at Corunna, on Wednesday and Thursday, June 13 and 14, for which a good program has been prepared.

The convention will open at 9 a. m., Wednesday and continue until Thursday afternoon. Among those from this city on the program we notice the following: Rev. T. M. Guild, subject, "Lawlessness, Its Cause and Cure;" Rev. J. D. Brosy, "The Sunday School's Greatest Foe, the Legalized Liquor Traffic;" Mrs. Mary Ehlers, "The Commercial Side of Religion." Other prominent Sunday school workers will be present and take part in the exercises. The music will be under the direction of Prof. A. F. Myers of Toledo and will be especially fine. All Sunday school workers are cordially invited to attend. The following are the officers of the association:

President, F. M. Willis, Waterloo; vice-president, Henry Fretz, Sedan; secretary, Mort E. Olds, St. Joe; treasurer, Mrs. Jerome Brown, Butler; organist, Miss Jennie Rudolph, Sedan; chorister, Prof. A. F. Myers, Toledo, Ohio.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern in the land who are not afraid to be generous to the needy and suffering. The proprietors of Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles of this great medicine; and have the satisfaction of knowing it has absolutely cured thousands of hopeless cases. Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness and all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs are surely cured by it. Call on H. B. McCord, druggist, and get a free trial bottle. Regular size 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed or price refunded.

National Wagon Road.

Parties are petitioning congress to build a national highway across the country from Portland, Me., to San Francisco, and another from Albany, N. Y., to St. Augustine, Fla. They want it 120 feet wide, and to have the national government pay one-third, the state through which it passes, one-third, and the county one-third. It is to be used for all wheeled vehicles and as a military road. The former line would pass through Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana.

Ballots for Trustees.

By request of several COURIER subscribers we publish the vote on trustee at the recent Jackson township caucus, which was as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8
Maurer	55	58	63	60	60	63	65	83
High	46	46	62	68	69	69	76	92

THE STATE CONVENTION.

Democrats of Indiana Do the Preliminary Work with a Rush.

Last evening, as is the custom, the preliminary work of the state democratic convention, was attended to. The several congressional districts met in different rooms and chose their delegates to the national convention and also the electors to go on the ticket, the alternates for both and their share of the officers of the convention which meets and finishes its work today.

TWELFTH DISTRICT MEETING.

The Twelfth district had an animated meeting. Judge Zollars presided and James McDonald was secretary. The following elections were made: Delegates to national convention, Henry Colerick and Dr. Nusbaum; alternates, S. S. Shutt and Senator Heller; member committee on permanent organization, A. J. Moynihan; convention, vice-president, John Kimmel; electoral, Frank VanAuken. R. C. Bell was endorsed for delegate at large; contigent elector, S. H. Haler.

AS TO GOVERNOR.

It looks as if Shively would be nominated although Kern and Burke have each a strong following.

Judge Adair of Columbia City has his friends at work to help him on as judge of the fourth district of the supreme bench, with a good chance to get it.

There are 1,527 delegates in the state convention making 764 necessary to a choice.

TO BE NOMINATED.

Governor.
Lieutenant Governor.
Secretary of State.
Auditor of State.
Treasurer of State.
Attorney General.
Reporter Supreme Court.
Superintendent Public Instruction.
Chief of Bureau of Statistics.
Judge Supreme Court, First District.
Judge Supreme Court Fourth District.

The convention is one of the largest ever assembled at the capital, all counties having good delegations.

Ice Trust Scandal.

The Ice Trust, a great corporation in the city of New York, is now being exposed. It is known that it has had fat contracts to furnish ice for the big city's offices for some time but it was not known till lately that city officers own stock in the trust. Such, however, is the case, though the law under which Greater New York was incorporated and is governed says very plainly that none of the municipal officers shall own any stock or have any financial interest in any business that has contracts with the city. And these special laws also give the governor the power to remove from office any or all of the officers who violate this law. In this case it is learned that the mayor himself has 30,000 shares in the trust stock, and of course reaps the benefit of the favorable contracts for furnishing ice to the city as well as profits of furnishing it to private customers. If Gov. Roosevelt rempves him, the office by law goes to the president of the municipal council. But he too, owns ice stock and therefore is liable to be ousted. The next man in order is the vice-president of municipal council, who is an alderman from the "Borough of Brooklyn." It is proved that leading officers of both political parties including some judges are strong holders. It is the greatest scandal the city of New York has had since Tweed's time.

Board of Review.

The annual Board of Review will meet at the commissioners' room in the court house in Auburn on Monday, the 18th day of June, 1900, and remain in session as required by law. All parties who are dissatisfied with their assessments will please meet this board.

FRANK P. SEILER, Auditor.

Auburn, Ind., June 5, 1900.

Oregon Republican.

The election on Monday in Oregon, was for a part of the state officers, including two judges of the supreme bench. On these two judges, the vote as far as ascertained from the scattered counties, gives the republicans a majority of about 8,000. Their majority in '96 was over 2,700; in '98 over 10,000. Woman suffrage was defeated.

Marthas Entertain.

The Marthas, a recently adopted name of the young women's foreign missionary society of the M. E. church, held an open meeting last night to which all were invited, and guests to the number of about 250 availed themselves of the young ladies' hospitality. Guests were met in the vestibule by the reception committee and conducted to the lecture room where Japanese tea was served. The room was tastefully decorated with flowers and Japanese lanterns, as the topic of the evening was Japan. After a season of social conversation the visitors were ushered into the auditorium where the meeting was opened with devotional exercises led by Mrs. George Kunlman. The following program was then given:

Roll Call—Fruits, Flowers and Vegetables of Japan.
Piano solo—Miss Leila Warrick.
Excuses—Miss Mary Baxter.
Vocal solo—Miss Marie TenEyck.
New Version of an Old Rhyme—Miss Nellie Murphy. (Mite boxes brought in by Miss Etta Heist.)
Trip to Japan—Mrs. R. W. Coob.
Ladies' Quartette—Mesdames Will Eckhart and Lena Patterson, Misses Belle DePew and Grace Zimmerman.

The meeting then adjourned. Those who had not been served with tea were invited to the tea room, and others to the basement where the Marthas served ice cream and strawberries.

The room was beautifully decorated and lighted, and the young ladies spared no pains to make the affair a success. In passing upstairs souvenir badges were pinned on those present.

OBITUARY.

Albert Edward Rowe was born in Fairfield township, DeKalb county, Indiana, April 15, 1880, and died at his mother's home May 27, 1900, aged 20 years, 1 month and 12 days.

He was converted and united with the U. B. church at Maple Grove last winter in a meeting held by Rev. Tussing. His death was very sudden, being caused by an accident on the railroad while returning from Waterloo. How it occurred no one knows. May the Master sustain his bereaved mother. Funeral services from the Lutheran church at Fairfield, conducted by Rev. A. E. Gaff, assisted by Rev. A. H. Tussing.

Lovina Groh was born in Stark county, Ohio, June 16, 1844, and died at her home in DeKalb county, Indiana, May 25, 1900, aged 55 years, 4 months and 9 days.

She was united in marriage to Israel Groh December 20, 1863, who preceded her to the spirit land a few months. She leaves three sons, two brothers, two sisters and a large circle of friends to mourn her departure. The funeral services were held at Richland Center church by her pastor, Rev. A. E. Gaff.

Free to Inventors.

The experience of C. A. Snow & Co., in obtaining more than 20,000 patents for inventors has enabled them to helpfully answer questions relating to the protection of intellectual property. This they have done in a pamphlet treating briefly of United States and foreign patents, with cost of same, and how to procure them; trade marks, caveats, designs, infringements, decisions in leading patent cases, etc., etc.

This pamphlet will be sent free to anyone writing to C. A. Snow & Co., Washington, D. C.

NOTICE.

We, the undersigned, do hereby agree to refund the money on a 50 bottle of Downs' Elixir if it does not cure any cough, cold, croup, whooping cough or throat trouble. A full dose on going to bed and small doses during the day will cure the most severe cold and stop the most distressing cough. E. M. FISCHLER, F. E. DAVENPORT, HOWARD MCCORD.

Meeting at St. Johns.

Rev. W. L. Meese will begin a week of meetings at St. Johns on Sunday next June 10, the first service being that evening. The last service of the series will be one week later, on the evening of June 17. These are to be union meetings and people of all denominations are invited to attend and assist. Tell your neighbors about it.

BE YOUR BEST.

A Sound Mind in a Sound Body Depends on Sound Digestion

The accomplishment of nearly everything depends on bodily and mental energy. This energy is a product of the food we eat. Indigestion robs us of the vigor that makes life worth living. Stomach troubles always go hand in hand with a host of bodily and mental troubles, and none can be banished until sound digestion is restored. Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure often does seemingly impossible things, but that is because it makes the stomach right, and a sound stomach does so much. If you have any form of stomach or liver trouble, be just to your own interests. Try this famous remedy. It cannot possibly harm you. If it should fail to benefit you, your druggist will return your money. You have never tried anything like it. It helps at once and you stay helped. No other remedy benefits so quickly or cures so thoroughly. Price 50 cents. Sold by H. B. McCord.

CHARLES ECKHART.

Sketch of the Life of the Prohibition Candidate for Governor.

Charles Eckhart, acclaimed standard bearer of the Indiana prohibition party, was born February 24, 1842, in historic Germantown, near Philadelphia, Pa.

Familiar with poverty and sternly schooled by its privations, his youth from his eighth to his sixteenth year was passed as a weaver in his father's factory, helping to earn the daily bread for a large family. Slight were his opportunities for education, as school advantages were denied him save during brief uncertain periods permitted by slackness of work.

As a consequence of the financial depression of 1857, the mill closed its doors and compelled its workers to seek other resources. In recognition of the fact that a trade must be a reliance for self-support, Mr. Eckhart chose that of a carriage maker, and early in October, valise in hand, three dollars in pocket, he set out on foot to find a situation where he might serve as an apprentice. The second day out, when thirty miles from home, he achieved his object, and at once began to learn wagon and carriage building. The plant soon changed owners and the new manufacturer failed. Then the apprentice bought his interest, giving unsecured notes in payment, and began work for himself.

On the outbreak of the war for the Union, he responded to the call of duty, enlisted September 6, 1861, as sergeant of Company A, 104th Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, settled his affairs in full and departing to the front with his regiment, shared in its marches and battles from Newport News until the close of the memorable seven days' fighting before Richmond. He was discharged from the service in May 1863, on surgeon's certificate of disability, and returning to Philadelphia resumed work at his trade. In 1864 he went to visit an uncle in Waterloo, Ind., and then proceeded to South Bend, where he was for a time in the employ of the Studebaker Bros.

An acquaintance made during his stay in Waterloo resulted in his marriage October 31, 1866, to Miss Barbara Ellen Ashelman, with whom he returned to Philadelphia, and for seven years quietly perfected himself in the details of his chosen occupation.

He came to Auburn, Ind., in October 1874, and there began and conducted a business, which under his able and prudent management, has amplified and prospered till he has become a leading carriage manufacturer of the thriving young city, employing many persons and sending out thousands of vehicles. From the outset he insisted upon the prime material and honest work. This was well known to the public, and the name "Eckhart Carriage" was a guarantee of both to his patrons.

In 1896 he took his three sons, well schooled in the business, into partnership, and gradually relinquishing the management to them, retains a controlling interest.

He early turned his attention to the misery and crime created and fostered by intemperance; directed all his influence and much of his time and means to aid in suppressing the traffic, and attracted public attention by his uncompromising position. Fighting against heavy odds in the field and at the polls, and never disheartened, he was recognized as a leader in opposition to the saloon and called upon to fill various party offices.

For thirteen years he had the position of county chairman and at the recent state convention held at Indianapolis was the unsolicited and unanimous choice of delegates to head the prohibition ticket for the office of governor.

In person, Mr. Eckhart is tall, spare and erect; nervous in temperament, abrupt and decided of speech and resolute of purpose. He has well earned and firmly holds the respect of his towns-people.

Knowing by dire experience what it is to need employment, he studies to assist such as prove themselves worthy. In a mission conducted and supported by himself, free religious experience is invited, and he in his daily life exemplifies the Christian.

The Great Show.

Not only have the newspapers of New York City recently and again emphasized the fact, but it is generally known throughout the breadth of the whole land, as well that the Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' great consolidated shows, which are to exhibit at Fort Wayne on June 21, far surpasses any other similar organization in the number of wild beasts, amphibia, elephants, horses, performing animals, riders, aerialists, acrobats, clowns, leapers, charioteers, jockeys, great artists and glorious acts, and in the quantity and quality of entertainment furnished for the ordinary price of admission. Among the most notable new prodigies introduced will be found Hassan Ali, the Egyptian giant, said to be the tallest man on earth, and for the past two years a big feature with the Barnum and Baily show in London and Great Britain. The number of principal male and female bareback riders has been increased to nineteen; that of the clowns to twenty-five, and in the aerial and acrobatic departments the additions are proportionately large and brilliant. The grand double street parade has been made still more richly and uniquely attractive, and in every direction still greater effort has been made and greater outlay incurred to more than meet the popular demand for cheap, wholesome, stirring and hilarious entertainment. d&wlt

OBITUARY.

Mary Jane Walters Stafford, was born in Jackson township, DeKalb county, Ind., February 8, 1848, and died at her home in South Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, May 29, 1900, at the age of 52 years, 3 months and 21 days. She was united in marriage to William H. Stafford January 30, 1870. To this union were born four children, 1 son and three daughters; one daughter preceding her in death, leaving to mourn her departure 1 son, 2 daughters, 1 grand-daughter, 2 brothers, 8 sisters and a great number of other relatives and friends. She united with the Church of God at Auburn, Ind., about 12 years ago and has ever since lived an honest, consistent Christian life. The funeral was conducted from her home May 31, 1900, and the body laid to rest in Woodlawn cemetery by the minister her pastor, Rev. Isaac Markley.

"He Got the Job."

A Boston Clergyman advertised for a boy and among the many applications was this one:

"I seen your advertisement for a boy. I am one. I can do things as you want 'em done and can hustle. Most folks ain't got no use for a boy. Betes hel how hard times is. I want the job.

JOE WHITE.

He got the job. While the boy's language is not exactly what it should be, nor his grammar according to "Harvey," yet it is evident he meant what he said. This is true of our advertisements. We mean every word we place in them and we have the goods in our stock to back them up. Like the boy, we are getting the "job." Each month shows an increase in our sales over the same month in any previous year; each day brings us new customers and good words from our regular ones.

This week we are offering special inducements in each department of our store. A number of lines are broken to such an extent that we wish to close them out. For instance, we have but one suit of clothing left of a certain pattern, this suit you can buy at 25 per cent discount. One dress pattern, one waist, one carpet the same way. We have the largest and best selected stock and are saving you money on every purchase you make from us. Come often.

—While at work at an equalizer at the Greenler factory yesterday, Henry Anthrup lost the third finger of his left hand by having it caught in one of the saws. The second finger was also badly cut but it is hoped he will save it. Drs. Hines and Baxter dressed the wounds but Mr. Anthrup will be kept from work for some time.

—Icelanders are on their way to Winnipeg, Canada, to settle. They leave Iceland because the English require them to kill the sheep they send over as soon as landed, thus killing the the business, for heretofore they have had the privilege of feeding the sheep after landing. It may compel most of the people to leave the island.

—There will probably be no summer normal here this year, as the number of students applying is not enough to justify it. The work was arranged for three able teachers and though there were students enough to pay one and even two teachers, it was felt that the course as intended could not be followed. Hence we understand it will be given up.

—Two brothers married two sisters and lived in the same house, and in the course of human events a girl was born to each of them, making six in the family; bnt some wag declared there were sixteen of them, and being asked how that could be he enumerated them as follows: Two fathers, two mothers, two brothers, two sisters, two uncles, two aunts, two nieces and two cousins, making sixteen in all.

—The city council has done a wise thing in ordering that all able-bodied tramps found begging on the streets, in stores at residences shall be arrested under the vagrancy law and upon conviction and fine be put to work on the streets under guard and with shackles. When these fellows learn that it is to be enforced they will give Auburn a wide berth and our people will have a rest from their insults and depredations.

—Coroner Williams of Whitley county has filed his finding in the case of John Wolford, who died at Churubusco recently under suspicious circumstances. He finds that Wolford came to his death by poison and recommends the arrest of several parties connected with the case.

—In order that the biographer of the DeKalb County Pioneer association may make a complete report at the annual meeting to be held soon, each township president should at once send the obituary of any pioneer or old settler that has died since our last meeting to M. B. Willis, Auburn.

—A. W. Madden has put in a private water main from Ninth street to his residence on Seventh. The line runs on McClellan street and the people along that street will get the benefit, at a reasonable cost, of water service Mr. Madden believes in having his surroundings about right and took the proper method ofgetting city water into his lawn.

The Eminent Kidney and Bladder Specialist.

The Discoverer of Swamp-Root at Work in His Laboratory.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell. Then the richness of the blood—the albumen—leaks out and the sufferer has Bright's Disease, the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root the new discovery is the true specific for kidney, bladder and urinary troubles. It has cured thousands of apparently hopeless cases, after all other efforts have failed. At druggists in fifty-cent and dollar sizes. A sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling about Swamp-Root and its wonderful cures. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. and mention this paper.

WOMEN

ABOUT EARLY MARRIAGES.

I think," says Ella Wheeler Wilcox, in the charming May Success, "there is more danger of disaster in early marriages than in those contracted at full maturity. The youthful choice is apt to be unwise. The man whom a girl thinks she loves at 17 would rarely appeal to her so strongly if she were 25, and the girl whom a young man of 21 believes he would like to marry would probably not be his selection if he were 30. A knowledge of the world before marriage is conducive to contentment afterwards. The most unfortunate unions I have known were formed while the husband and wife were still in early youth. The man, when he assumes the responsibility of matrimony before he has reached maturity has had little or no experience in the typical bachelor life, and its attractions are likely to seem much greater to him than if he has already tested them. The wife who was married very early also feels the temptation to taste of life beyond the prosaic domestic circle, although usually in less degree than the man. She has not experienced enough of ballroom and summer resort flattery to have wearied of it and to have become cognizant of its emptiness. There seems to her to be gayety in life which she whose youth has been devoted to home duties has never known, with the result that she, as well as her husband, becomes restless. Unless there are strong ties and will power to keep a husband and wife who are in this mental condition to the road which leads away from this temporary unrest, they may stray into bypaths which lead to dissatisfaction and ultimate misery. It is comforting to know, however, that the number of unhappy marriages is small compared to the immense number of marriages."

The Work Table.

A decorated table for a lady's room may be made either quite elegant or simple and dainty. The lower board is two feet at the long side and one foot seven and one-half inches on the two short sides; the second is one foot seven inches by one foot three and three-fourths inches, and the third is one foot two and one-half inches by one foot

A DECORATED TABLE.

one and three-eighths inches. These boards may be covered with linen, denim or tapestry with flounces to suit. The bottom legs are curved, one and one-half feet high. They might be made straight; the middle supports are eleven and three-fourths inches high and those above are eleven inches.

Tonic for the Skin.

Many people are troubled by the appearance of spots and pimples on the surface of the skin. These cannot be removed outwardly. One of the best internal remedies is sulphur, says the New York Telegram. Take a teaspoonful of flour of sulphur and add sufficient warm milk to make a smooth paste. This should be taken every night for two or three weeks, when the spots will be found to have entirely disappeared. Another, and perhaps simpler, remedy is a glass of hot water taken the last thing every night. The water can be made more palatable by adding a few drops of lemon juice.

To Wash Corsets.

If it is necessary to wash corsets take out the steels in front and sides, then lay them on a flat surface, and with a small brush scrub them thoroughly with a tepid or cold lather of white castile soap. When quite clean let cold water run on them by holding them under a running faucet until the soap is all rinsed off. Pull them lengthwise until they are straight and shapely and let them dry in a cool place, pulling them again when partly dry. By this treatment they will retain their natural shape and wear for months afterward.

Heiress to $1,000,000.

Mabel Eversole, a 15-years-old St. Louis girl, has just fallen heiress to $1,000,000. She knows less about her fortune than many of her schoolmates, and is apparently very indifferent. She frankly admits that her only wish is to become a pianiste, after she has acquired a good education and has been through college, which is the only plan she has, for spending her money.

MABEL EVERSOLE.

Caring for Canary Birds.

Says a woman who has made a special study of birds and their diseases, and is a famous bird doctor: "Do not allow them to hang in a draught and never hang the cage out of doors, either in summer or winter. The temperature should not be allowed to fall below 65 degrees in the room where the bird is kept, and, if necessary, a covering should be put over the cage, except a small portion, at night. Lettuce, water cress or celery tops should be fed them frequently. When these are not easily procurable an excellent substitute is found by planting German black rape seeds in a pot. The canary is extremely fond of the little plants that soon spring up. Oranges, apples and split figs are good occasionally. Gravel must be supplied in abundance. Hemp seed is objectionable, as it tends to fatten the bird and thus spoil its song. If fed on proper food, kept in clean cages and given shelter from draughts, disease rarely makes its appearance."

Captured a Man.

Mrs. F. G. Runa, of St. Louis, is not afraid of men who break into her house. She was in court the other day and calmly told how she captured a supposed daylight burglar. Mrs. Runa's cook discovered a man in her room. He was rifling her trunk, and she screamed. He ran. So did Mrs. Runa, with a pistol in her hand, when she heard the cook scream. She headed the man off and brought him to a halt by firing a shot. She then kept him covered with the revolver until the police arrived.

MRS. RUNA.

More Sleep for Women.

It is a well-known fact among physicians, nurses and those generally interested in the restoration of health that the percentage of women among the middle and upper classes who retire early is very small. There are many women so constituted that the wear and tear of daily life consumes to a great extent their vitality, which can only be restored by means of perfect repose. Especially are long, unbroken hours of rest necessary for wives and mothers, all of whom are giving their strength unreservedly and getting little physically in return save that which is derived from sleep. Those who earnestly desire to use the most effective means for the preservation of health and beauty should not fail to keep early hours.

Where the Fault Lies.

Women make society; they are accountable largely for the faults of the male portion of it, at least for the growth and extent of fault; if men fall short it is because women have not demanded higher standards. And if the woman who works is not treated with the same courtesy as she whose delicately gloved hand holds her own bankbook, it is the fault of that same dainty hand which is not held out in kind comradeship to one that wields pencil or scissors. Men get their cue from woman's treatment of woman. But men are rarely unkind; theirs is rather the absence of kindness; and of the two the latter were preferable.—Woman's Home Companion.

A Habit to Be Avoided.

Attention is called to those essentially feminine habits of putting pins in the mouth, or moistening a pencil with the lips. A pin swallowed means only a surgical case, but the greater danger lies in the contagion that may be lurking in the pin itself. Under the head of the pin, or in the point of the pencil, all kinds of malignant germs may be located, which will be transmitted by the mouth quicker than any other way. It hardly seems possible that anyone needs to be cautioned against holding money between his lips; yet a person can scarcely go any distance on a street car without noticing someone indulging in this dangerous and filthy habit.

Treatment for Tired Feet.

There is nothing more strengthening to the feet than salt. Those who suffer from tired feet will derive much relief and benefit from a salt bath, prepared by adding to a quart of warm (not hot) water a tablespoon of salt. First thoroughly wash the feet with warm water and soap, then place them in the salt bath for about eight minutes; finally, wipe perfectly dry, and dust over them a little boracic acid powder.

Earrings Again.

Jewelers are announcing the return of earrings and are showing some very bizarre designs in Egyptian and old Italian effects, which they say women are going to wear. This periodical announcement is made with great regularity. Women having outgrown this barbarism, however, show a commendable reluctance in justifying the prediction.

Removing Rust from White Goods.

After trying many ways I at last found the following successful and extremely simple method of removing iron rust. Wash the article in the usual manner, and when it is ready to be boiled tie a little cream tartar in the rust spot, and when the article is boiled and rinsed the rust spot will have disappeared.—Mrs. W. A. Gwynn.

Good Things to Learn.

Learn to laugh. A good laugh is better than medicine.

Learn to attend strictly to your own business. Very important point.

Learn how to tell a story. A well-told story is as welcome as a sunbeam in a sick room.

Learn to stop croaking. If you cannot see any good in this world, keep the bad to yourself.

Learn to keep your own troubles to yourself. The world is too busy to care for your ills and sorrows.

Learn to hide your aches and pains under a pleasant smile. No one cares whether you have the earache, headache or rheumatism.

Learn to greet your friends with a smile. They carry too many frowns in their own hearts to be bothered with any of yours.

BRAVE RHODA RIGGS.

ARIZONA GIRL NOT AFRAID TO PURSUE APACHES.

There Are Scalps to Her Credit, Though She Did Not Remove Them from Her Fallen Foes—How an Assassination Was Avenged.

A plucky girl is Miss Rhoda Riggs. At the head of a detachment of cavalry and with the escort of cowboys from the Riggs ranch, she pluckily pursued the Indians for five days and shot three of their number.

This exciting adventure was the result of the recent treacherous killing of J. D. Mack, a prospector in Pinera Canyon, Arizona. He was shot from ambush by an Apache of the Chiricahua tribe, one of half a dozen who, in war paint, were out for murder and plunder. They took his ammunition, rifle and six-shooter and left him, as they thought, dead. He then painfully dragged his bleeding body over the sharp rocks of the trail to the Riggs ranch, where he knew he would receive kindly care, for Miss Riggs had often spoken cheering words to him when he came to her ranch after a fruitless search for gold in the mountains.

She heard his cries early in the morning, and, dressing hurriedly, ran down the trail in the direction the moans came from. Mr. Mack was almost exhausted and could scarcely speak. She took him in her strong arms and carried him to her cot, where she made him comfortable. The cowboys had started out to attend to their horses and Miss Riggs and her aged father were alone at the ranchhouse. She bandaged the wound of the injured man, and, learning the story of the shooting, quick as a flash buckled her six-shooted, which hung in a belt on the wall, about her waist and was off to the corral.

There she summoned one of the cowboys to attend to the injured man until her return, and, saddling one of her fastest horses, and taking a rifle, started on a run along the trail which cut across the foothills to Fort Grant, where she told the officers what had taken place. A detachment of cavalry was at once ordered to return with the young lady and run down the Indians if possible.

"We got sight of the Apaches and we never lost them," said Miss Riggs when she returned from the trip. "The Indians that went toward the pass were clever, for they left the trail one at a time, half a time or so apart, and bore off toward the high places where the band we followed hit for. The places where they left the trail were picked out so that the soldiers would not be able to tell unless they got off their horses and picked about in the grass where the blades were knocked down and trampled. All but one of the Indians jumped the trail, and the one who stayed with it led the soldiers through the pass and around the other side of the mountain and was going to take them to a place where the others could shoot them from ambush. The Indians that left the trail went up over the mountain and down the other side and they were about all together excepting the man who was herding the soldiers, when we saw them. We got out of the canyon and were not long in getting up on the side of the mountain. The Indians were just disappearing over the ridge when we caught a second glimpse of them. We lit out and went straight after them.

"I reckon it was about five miles of the hardest riding the boys ever saw. We sure sifted through the pines, and it was all I could do to keep the men from yelling, they were so glad that the Indians were in sight. We spoiled the prettiest ambush you can imagine when we struck down the mountain side. There were the soldiers coming up on the trail of the lone Apache, who was leading them an interesting chase, and not a mile below us were half a dozen Indians hidden behind rocks so that the soldiers could not see them. They were getting ready to surprise the soldiers, and I reckon those brave men from Fort Grant would not have returned had it not been for us. We cached our horses in the pines where they could not be seen and crept down toward the Indians. There were only two rifles in our crowd and the other men had six-shooters. We could not fight unless we got up close, and this we were trying to do. All the time the soldiers were getting nearer and I was afraid that they would be fired on and killed before we could engage the attention of the Apaches.

"'Don't go any further, boys; I'm going to shoot,' I said to the men, and they jumped toward me and tried to take my rifle from me.

"'Can't you see that the Indians are getting ready to fire on the soldiers, and they will be right in range in a few minutes. Let me alone. I know what I'm about,' I said, and I pulled away from the men, took good air and fired. The Apache who was slowly leading the soldiers into the ambush of his companions dropped from his horse dead, and down we all went on the ground behing a big rock. The soldiers stopped in their tracks when the Indian fell, the ambushed redskins acted like crazy men and the soldiers bunched together and seemed uncertain what to do.

"I saw that the Indians had located our hiding place and their rifles were trained in our direction. It would not do for us to move, because we could not fire at such long range with six-shooters, and the soldiers could not figure out who killed the lone Apache they were trailing. They were too far off to do us any good, but I told the boys that I would start things moving and requested my man, with the other rifle, to go after the Indians with me from the best place he could find in the rocks. So we just peppered away and the Indians came at us, but did not hit even so much as a piece of leather. We could see them getting into their saddles and in a moment three of them lit out down the mountain, with the soldiers after them. The other three were done for."

Place de la Concorde.

There is said to be no equal in the world to this grand and imposing square of Paris. On one side of it is the Tuileries, on the opposite side the Champs Elysees, and on a third the River Seine. In the center stands the obelisk of Luxon, a magnificent monolith of red Egyptian granite, seventy-four feet high and weighing five hundred thousand pounds. This obelisk was one of two of the same shape and size, erected in 1350 B. C., by Rameses the Great, at the entrance of the Temple of Thebes. Mohammed Ali, Pasha of Egypt, presented it to the French government, and in 1836 it was removed to its present position in the Place de la Concorde. The removal and erection on the new site required an outlay of eighty thousand pounds, the obelisk being transported to France in a vessel built especially for the purpose. The Place de la Concorde is rich in historic interest. It was there that the guillotine was erected in the "reign of terror," after the death of Louis XVI., and it was there that the signal was given for the attack on the bastile in 1789. Louis XVI., and Marie Antoinette were beheaded there in 1793, and it was the scene of great rejoicing in 1848, when France was proclaimed a republic. The Place de la Concorde has also been termed the Place Louis XV. and Place de la Revolution.

A Matter of Principle.

"No, my dear," said a fashionably dressed woman, whose little girl was gazing into a shop window on Chestnut street recently, "those large eggs you see are not fit for Easter. They are ostrich eggs, and the ostrich is not a religious bird."

"What nonsense!" interjected her husband. "Buy the child one if she wants it."

"It would be against my principles," replied the wife, firmly. "It is the duty of an ostrich to hatch eggs and raise feathers for our hats, and I will not assist in limiting the supply. Your benevolent fanatics are depriving us of all the birds of the air for millinery purposes, and I insist that the only available bird that runs on the ground must not be diverted from the real object of its existence."

Although rather dazed by this line of argument, the husband and father entered the store and priced the eggs. When he came out he admitted that there was considerable truth in what his wife had said.—Philadelphia Record.

The Personal Pronoun "I."

The use of the personal pronoun "I," printed in capitals, M. Zola looks upon as one of the most singular features of the English language. He calls attention to the fact that "A Frenchman, referring to himself, writes 'je' with a small 'j;' a German, though he may gratify all his substantives with capital letters, employs a small 'i' in writing 'ich;' a Spaniard, when he uses the personal pronoun at all, bestows a small 'y' on his 'yo,' while he honors the person he addresses with a capital 'V.'" The English "I" strikes Zola as being very arrogant.—New York Home Journal.

Novel Railway.

In the western part of British Columbia is a novel railway, two miles in length. The rails are made of trees from which the bark has been stripped, and these are bolted together. Upon them runs a car with grooved wheels ten inches wide.

Mantels of Petrified Wood.

Among the richest and handsomest mantels and fireplaces now manufactured are those made of petrified Arizona wood, veined and colored like Sienna marble and as highly polished.

It is unfortunate that every one's memory is best in retaining things it would be more genteel to forget.

As a rule, the man who will lie, won't pay his debts.

HOW A MAN SPENDS HIS LIFE.

Time Devoted to Sleeping, Eating Working and Other Pursuits.

An ordinary man would laugh away as preposterous the suggestion that he was likely to spend twenty years of his life in sleep. But that is because he does not conduct his life according to a schedule and really has no idea of how he does spend it. As a matter of fact, most men over 60 years old have already spent more than twenty years in bed. Which is only one of the surprises in store for the man who sets himself to work to discover how those twenty-four hours that daily slip by so mysteriously are disposed of.

By a painstaking study of averages a skilled statistician has recently arrived at the conclusion expressed in the following figures. They apply to the average American man of 60 years of age. They do not accurately represent his life to-day, because his years of infancy and childhood are included in the computation. They will apply neither to the man of leisure nor to the laboring man. But perhaps the average man, who both works and plays, will recognize himself in them.

Twenty years in sleep.

Three years nine months in eating and waiting for the waiter.

Seventeen years six months in working.

Seven years six months in pursuit of pleasure.

Six years three months in walking and other exercise.

Two years six months in making one's toilet.

Two years six months doing absolutely nothing.

The item of toilet may be subdivided into seven months for shaving, eleven months for washing, one year for dressing. Most men walk about three years and six months and spend two years and nine months in other exercises.

The little table becomes more intelligible if less impressive when it is reduced to a scale of days. In which case it stands as follows:

Eight hours sleeping.
One hour thirty minutes eating.
Seven hours working.
Three hours amusement.
Two hours thirty minutes exercise.
One hour toilet.
One hour doing nothing.

The average man if confronted with this will doubtless claim that he does not spend eight hours in sleep. You may retort by telling him that it is doubtful whether he spends seven at work, but in his youth he slept more and worked less, and all this is taken into account in estimating averages.

An elaboration in any direction of the statistics given above is interesting. For instance, it has been computed that in a single year a man may speak 11,800,000 words and give 1,200 handshakes. The total energy dispersed in this fashion alone during fifty years would be sufficient to raise 2,500 tons.

SHOES POLISHED IN RAG TIME.

Experience on Shoeblack's Stand When a Hand Organ Came Along.

"Just after I had got comfortably settled in one of the leather-cushioned chairs," said Mr. Billington, "there came along the street one of those big piano organs with a voice like a calliope's, and halted right in front. It was a two-chair stand, and there were two men on it. I was the only customer up at the moment, and the two each took a foot.

"They had just begun the polishing when the hand organ began to hoot 'Loozyana Lou.' Instantly the two blacking artists swung in with the music, and from that on, with many original rag-time variations of their own, they plied their brushes and polishing cloths in time with it. When I stepped down to the sidewalk to be brushed off both men took up that work, the hand organ playing now 'The Georgia Camp Meeting,' and the two men coming in with their whisk brooms with an interlocking flip-flap movement that was nothing short of marvelous. I wouldn't have been surprised any minute to see them each turn a cartwheel handspring changing places in the turning, but keeping up the brushing and never for a minute losing time. They kept right on down to my feet, and putting in there a singularly able combination effect in that last final touch around my hoppers, they turned me loose.

"I paid for the polish, and put a nickel in the organ collector's box, for the blacking artists and myself, and then I walked away, keeping step with the music, on the sidewalk, on one side of the hand organ, while a horse pulling a grocery wagon, and going the same way, kept step along on the other in the street. The whole earth seemed to move, in fact, to the stirring strains of rag time."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

NOT WHOLLY A COWARD.

Railroader's Good Reason for Not Resisting Train Robbers.

"When I hear people boast what they would or wouldn't do under the persuasion of a six-shooter," said an old passenger conductor, "I am awfully reminded of an experience of mine years ago on the Iron Mountain Railroad.

"I was station agent at the time at a little town near Texarkana, and had been summoned up to Little Rock on some business that has nothing to do with this story. I was in the first day coach, well up to the front, and in the next seat was an express messenger who had attracted a good deal of attention from the fact that he wore his hair long and had a pair of enormous revolvers stuck in his belt. The rest of the car was well filled with a mixed crowd, including perhaps a dozen women. At about 9 o'clock at night, while we were going over a very desolate part of the road, the train slowed down suddenly, and before we could inquire what was wrong the front door flew open and a masked man stepped inside with a sawed-off shotgun at his shoulder. 'Sit still,' he yelled. 'I'll turn loose if airy soul moves a finger!' As he spoke another masked man stepped around him with a cocked revolver in his hand and started down the aisle, looting the passengers as he went. When he came to the express messenger he burst out laughing. 'You —— scarecrow!' he said, 'what are you doing with them guns,' and he snatched one of the pistols out of his belt and hit him over the head with the butt. Then he took the other, made him hand over his watch and money, and passed on. The messenger wiped the blood off his face and said nothing.

"After it was all over and the robbers had disappeared the messenger was a target for numerous sneering remarks. 'If I had made a break,' he said to me, quietly, 'that feller at the door would have blazed away with his sawed-off gun and killed half the women folks in the car.' At the next stopping place he got off, and one of the women stuck her head out of the window and screamed 'Coward!'

"Two days later that same messenger walked up to a little cabin in the mountains, kicked in the door, shot two of the robbers dead in their tracks, and captured three others, all single-handed. I often wondered whether the woman who hollered 'Coward' heard of that incident."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

How Drowning Can Be Avoided.

Anatomical experiments have shown that the weight of the body is about equal to the same bulk of seawater, so that persons falling overboard who cannot swim, if they do not attempt to keep more than their mouth out of water, can sustain themselves for a considerable length of time. Most persons who fall into the water lose their presence of mind, and either draw their hands up or wildly dash them through the air and water. Of course, the instant the weight of the arms is added to the weight of the head above the water the body sinks, and a few repetitions of this ends in "another accidental drowning." The same struggles with the hands and feet under the water would have preserved life. What all persons should impress upon their minds is this: That in case they should fall overboard they must retain control of their senses, the hands and arms must be kept under water, and the feet and hands kept in motion to sustain the head out of water. So long as the mouth and nostrils do not get submerged there is no danger.

War Sometimes Profitable.

The adage that "to the victors belong the spoils" works very well with nations who have been successful in war. In her war with China, Japan had only 80,000 men engaged, and the war cost her altogether the comparative trifle of $30,000,000. China had to pay her afterward the nice little sum of $180,000,000, leaving a clear profit of $155,000,000, which, reckoning the time the war lasted, worked out a profit of $50 per Jap a week.—Army and Navy Journal.

THROW DICE FOR PUNISHMENT.

Two Soldiers in the Philippines Use the Bones to See Who Is to Suffer.

"I was in the Philippines about three months ago," said the Chicago agent of a well-known tea house, "and saw the queerest throw of dice I ever saw in my life. Two soldiers had been court-martialed for getting drunk and assaulting their superior officer—about the gravest offense a subordinate can commit. Being after dark, the officer didn't know which one it was. Neither did they, nor much of anything else that happened about that time. But the court insisted that for the sake of discipline one of them must be punished. It was hard lines. For they were really not bad young fellows and everybody was sorry for them. Each was willing to take the penalty and let the other one off. But that wouldn't do, so it was finally agreed that they should throw the dice for it.

"The first one that took them shook them hard and turned them out. Five and two! The second man followed suit. His were five and two. Then the first poured out a six and five. Six and five came out for the other. You should have just heard the shouts and bets.

Then the first one threw again. Two and three! And two and three showed up for the second soldier. This was getting interesting. 'Aces!' said the first. 'Aces!' cried the second. The excitement was tremendous. Everybody crowded into the room anxious to get a sight at the miraculous performances.

"They all held their breaths. The soldier whose throw it was gave the bones an extra shake. Out tumbled four and three. The second one pounded and shook enough to have worn the spots off of 'em. No use. Three and four! 'The Devil's in 'em,' 'I can't get used to that game!' 'They're loaded all around,' exclaimed the crowd."

Here the tea agent paused and rose to go away.

"But how did they come out finally?" everybody asked, wrought up to intensest curiosity."

"Oh, out of the box, I s'pose, like they did before," calmly explained the agent. "You see, the steamer for Honolulu was whistling for the last time and I had to come away before the thing was settled. They may be at it yet, for all I know."—Chicago Chronicle.

What Concentration Will Accomplish.

"Many persons, seeing me so much engaged in active life," said Edward Bulwer-Lytton, "and as much above the world as if I had never been a student, have said to me, 'When do you get time to write all your books?' How on earth do you contrive to do so much work?' I shall surprise you by the answer I made. It was this: 'I contrive to do so much work by never doing too much at a time.'

"Now, since I began really and earnestly to study, which was not till I had left the college, and was actually in the world, I may perhaps say that I have gone through as large a course of general reading as most men of my time. I have traveled much and I have seen much; I have mixed much in politics, and besides all this, I have published somewhere about sixty volumes. And yet, what time do you thing, as a general rule, I have devoted to study, to reading and writing? Not more than three hours a day. But then, during these three hours I have given my whole attention to what I was about and lost not a moment."

Every great man has become great, every successful man has succeeded, in proportion as he has confined his powers to one particular channel.—Pushing to the Front.

Polite Hate.

The other night, at the Albisu, a variety theater, one performer made a display of flags. When the Stars and Stripes appeared someone hissed, and the galleries and part of the body of the house joined in. Whatever prompted the demonstration, it ceased instantly when several Americans seated in the orchestra rose to leave the house. They passed out amid silence as respectful and deferential as though in their persons they represented the highest authority. Some of the audience clearly hated the flag, but they wished those present who loved it to understand that no personal affront was intended, and they conveyed that wish as clearly as an audience could.—Santiago, Cuba, letter.

Good Civic Work of Women.

The Town Improvement Association of Montclair, N. J., is composed entirely of women. Its annual report showed the association's work last year was very successful—little crime in town, many needed public improvements made and a balance in the association's treasury.

Bogus Curios of All Kinds.

It is said of old curiosity shops in general that nearly half the objects offered are spurious, expressly manufactured for sale. The ingenuity of the forger of antiques is remarkable. Furniture, china, prints, bronzes, armor, ivory and tapestry—all are imitated successfully.

Shot Dead by a Dead Man.

After the battle of Spion Kop a British soldier was found dead with his finger on the trigger of his rifle. A Boer who attempted to take the rifle out of his hands was shot dead by a slip of the dead man's finger.

Travelers in Arctic Regions.

Notwithstanding the difficulties and dangers attending a trip from 1,200 to 1,400 miles over snow and ice in the most inclement season of the year, no less than 700 people left Dawson for Nome between Dec. 4, 1899, and March 1, 1900.

INDIANA INCIDENTS.

RECORD OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK.

Prisoner's Daring Jump for Liberty—Power Houses and Pumping Stations Burned—Heavy Fire Loss at Waterloo—Girl's Body in a Pond.

David Taylor made a wonderful escape from the Montgomery County jail at Crawfordsville. Feigning illness, he induced the turnkey to take him from the steel rotary up to the third story of the jail ostensibly for fresh air. The windows there are not barred, and when the turnkey's back was turned Taylor crashed through one of the windows into the limbs of a shade tree twenty feet below. He caught safely, dropped to the ground, and ran off unhurt. Although closely followed, he swam the river and made good his escape. Taylor by clever forgeries swindled the banks of Darlington and Colfax out of nearly a thousand dollars.

Firbugs in the Oil Field.

No less than half a dozen power houses and pumping stations were burned in the oil field in a recent week, and it is believed to have been the work of incendiaries. The Phoenix Oil Company of Hartford City lost two. One on the Kelly farm was just fired and the pumper on the Baker farm nearly shut down to assist in putting out the fire. During Baker's absence his place was also set ablaze. A power house on the J. P. A. Leonard lease was also destroyed, as was one of the J. H. Hardison farms. The loss will aggregate $8,000.

Fire Loss Is $10,000.

An entire business block was destroyed by an incendiary fire at Waterloo, the fire originating in the bowling alley. The night watch heard the match struck which set the block on fire, but the incendiary escaped. Oil had been spread over the dry woodwork of the interior of the building. The loss is about $10,000, with but little insurance.

Girl's Body Found in a Pond.

The body of Emily Price, aged 18 years, a daughter of a well-known farmer, was found in a pond near Youngstown. The girl had not been living at home for some time, but had been employed in the household of a prominent farmer who lives near the scene of the tragedy. It is not known whether the case is one of murder or suicide.

The eastern Indiana C. E. conference closed a successful session at Hagerstown.

Michael Tracey, well-known farmer, hanged himself in his barn near Moore's Hill. Cause unknown.

T. B. Armstrong unearthed a log near Laporte which scientific men say is more than a million years old.

It is denied at Montpelier that the oil production is slacking, but that, on the other hand, business is booming.

Muncie police board acquitted Chief Cashmore on all eight of the charges preferred by ex-Policeman Lewis Jones.

Two Fairland husbands went out with shotguns after their truant wives, who had gone walking with two young men of the town. No blood was shed and the quartet kissed and made up.

Judge Fox at Richmond set aside the will of Charles T. Price, Sr., who bequeathed an estate of $10,000 to the Ruskin co-operative settlement of Ruskin, Tenn., cutting off his aged widow and children.

Charles, the 7-year-old son of Moses Linn, a section boss on the Baltimore and Ohio road at Nappanee, was ground to pieces by a freight train on that line. He climbed between two cars and as the train slowed down fell on the track.

PERFECT TENEMENT HOUSES.

Improving the Condition of New York Working People.

Some novel idea in the model apartment line will be incorporated in a group of new buildings that are to be erected at a cost of $300,000 in the borough of the Bronx, reports a New York letter. The Baron de Hirsch fund has advanced the money, the aim being to provide better homes for working people at a moderate cost. There are to be two rows of tenements, one row on one side of the block and the other directly opposite. In the intervening space, midway in the block, will be constructed an ornamental arcade for the common use of all the tenants. There will be five distinct buildings opening on each street, making a frontage of 150 feet. The depth of the block is 200 feet. The central arcade will extend up to the cornice of the houses and be covered in with a glass roof. The ground floor will contain a kindergarten, nurseries, recreation rooms and a club room, all for the exclusive use of the tenants and their families. There will be accommodations for two families on each floor, making 140 families in the ten buildings, the height being seven stories. There will be two elevators in the arcade, and ornamental bridges will connect each floor with the elevator platforms. There will be stairways also on each side of the arcade. Both these features are novelties in tenement construction. Light pressed brick, with Indiana limestone trimmings, will be the material used on the steel framework. It is the intention to make the structures as nearly fireproof as possible.

A Popular Toy.

Among the new things in the toy stores is a scheme of blocks, which when assembled represent a battleship, which is provided with a central detachable deck portion on which the turrets, separable masts, smokestacks, davits and other deck fixtures are loosely placed. Secured to the bottom of the deck, within the hull, is a small powder receptacle provided with a percussion cap-holder. A strong spring is secured to a support within the hull, its free end being held in a catch to which a cord is secured. Upon pulling the cord the spring, released from its catch, flies up, strikes the percussion cap, and produces an explosion which completely demolishes the vessel. Within a few minutes, however, the parts of the toy can be reassembled for another explosion.

The blocks are made chiefly of cardboard. Strips of wood are used for the deck and bottom. The material used, although light, is durable enough to withstand many explosions.

Military Material.

He bore the title of colonel, and he had a civil war record, but it was not in the field.

"Possibly you do not know," said a friend of his, "how the colonel happened not to be continued in command of his regiment. He was a first-class mechanical engineer till he fell heir to a fortune and went into politics as a recreation, with a racing stable on the side. When the war came he had pull enough to get a cavalry regiment, and one day the commanding officer asked him something about the strength of it.

"'Well,' said he, 'it's—around 800 horse power,' and then it occurred to somebody that possibly the colonel had better be detailed to some other branch of the service."—Detroit Free Press.

Electricity in Capsules

Is made from cheap chemicals, and when added to a certain quantity of water will furnish electricity enough to light a house or drive an automobile. But this is nothing compared to the strengthening power contained in a bottle of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It cures indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness, liver and kidney troubles.

Keeping the Wolf Away.

Sincerely pitying the unappreciated vocalist, the editorial "we" of the Detroit Journal asked a few leading questions.

"How," we ventured, gently, "do you manage to keep the wolf from the door?"

"Well, in the first place," he replied, "I do all my practicing at home!"

Then he started violently, and hastily explained how it this way he saved the rental of a studio.

Germ Theory.

"Miss Quickstep had miserable health until she became engaged to be married, and then she grew as strong and vigorous as anybody."

"She accounts for it on the theory that the love microbe drove all the others out of her system."—Chicago Tribune.

What Do the Children Drink?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing, and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs about ¼ as much. All grocers sell it. 15c and 25c.

Danger in the Church.

Not long since the bishop of L—— was a guest at a dinner party in Birmington, when a lady noted for her witty remarks, who was a guest, said:

"Do you know that there are times when it is dangerous to enter a church?"

"What is that, madam?" inquired the bishop with great dignity, straightening himself in his chair.

"That there are times when it is positively dangerous to enter a church," was the lady's reply.

"That cannot be, madam," said the bishop, "pray explain."

"Why," said the lady, "it is when there is a canon at the reading desk, a big gun in the pulpit, when the bishop is charging his clergy, the choir murdering the anthem, and the organist trying to drown the choir."—Golden Penny.

Suspense and Suspension.

An eminent vegetarian doctor once wrote to the judges of London, England, asking if it were not time that, by way of experiment, capital punishment should be suspended. He received only one answer, which was to this effect: "Dear Sir—I consider it preferable that the murderer should be suspended." The vegetarian replied: "May your lordship never know what an awful thing suspense is!"—San Francisco Wave.

"Oh! How Happy I Am."

"HOW HAPPY I AM to be able to say that I am free from pain after five years of severe suffering from neuralgia," writes Mrs Archie Young, 1817 Oaks avenue, West Superior, Wis. "I am so thankful to be able to say that your '5 Drops' is the best medicine I ever got in my life. When I received it from you last November, I used some of it right away. The first dose helped me. It is impossible to explain how I was suffering from neuralgia. I thought no one could get worse and that death would soon come. I was very weak, and I hardly thought I could live to see my husband come back from his daily labor. Now I can say that I am free from pain, my cheeks are red, my appetite is good and I sleep well all night. Many of my friends are surprised, and say they will send for some '5 Drops.'" LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE
Must not be Imitated.

JUDGE—(to imitator of Laxative Bromo-Quinine)—You have made imitations of Laxative Bromo-Quinine. You have tried to pass them off as the genuine. You have traded on a business reputation which has cost years of labor and thousands of dollars to upbuild. The United States guarantees to every man the undisturbed enjoyment of the fruits of his toil, and it will protect the public from fraud. You are, therefore, ordered and commanded to desist from your unlawful practices under the extremest penalties of the law!

Laxative Bromo-Quinine

Is a Valid Trade-Mark and must not be imitated.

The Paris Medicine Co., St. Louis, Mo., recently won a suit in the U. S. Circuit Court for the district of Indiana, establishing the validity of Laxative Bromo Quinine as a trade-mark, and perpetually enjoining the defendant, Newton C. Davis, of Frankfort, Indiana, from using those, or any similar words, to describe a medicinal preparation of his manufacture. On account of the popularity of Laxative Bromo-Quinine it still has a few imitations put up under similar names, which are calculated to deceive the public and in order to get the genuine be sure this signature E. W. Grove is on every box. The Paris Medicine Co. will bring suit at once against all other infringers.

Laxative Bromo-Quinine is a prescription compounded exclusively for colds, and it seldom fails to cure a cold in one day. All druggists in the United States and Canada sell it—No Cure, No Pay. Price 25c.

MOODY & RICKEL.

Foley's Honey and Tar heals lungs and stops the cough.

Wednesday's Daily.

—Mrs. James McDowell is considerably improved.

—James May has a cousin visiting him—Frank May, whose home is in Toledo. He is an employe in a plant making printing presses.

—Albion New Era:—Roy Squires, who has been staying with his uncle, H. C. Peterson, and attending school, went to Auburn where he will spend the summer with his father.

—A Decatur merchant has announced that henceforth and forever more, or as long as he is in business, he will give to the churches of Adams county one-fifth of the gross sales of his store on each Friday.

—W. A. Davidson, the jeweler, has rented the Beuret store room, and will occupy same immediately upon his return from Chicago, where he went this afternoon on business. We welcome Mr Davidson to this part of the city and he is to be congratulated upon securing so desirable a location.

—Charles B. Harris, of Goshen, consul to Nagasaki, Japan, has forwarded his dues to the Masonic lodge in his home city, calling for $4, in Japanese coin. The coin came by express and embraced 361 pieces, ranging in value from one-twentieth of a cent to twenty-five cents. The collection is large and unique.

—Mrs. Will Kessler and her sister Mrs. Stevens, with their children start tomorrow for Buckhannon, West Virginia, where they will spend about six weeks visiting their brother, Wm. Groscop, whose home is there. Will follows them in about three weeks, and the COURIER hopes they will all have a lovely time.

—Surveyor Krontz goes to Fort Wayne tomorrow and will be employed several days in surveying on the Brunstetter estate in Lafayette township, Allen county. He was appointed surveyor in the case, by the Allen county court, as the surveyor there. Mr. Buschman, is a nephew of Mr. Brunstetter and therefore an interested party.

It is Strange

that some people who say they never read patent medicine advertisements will be found lugging home every now and then a bottle of some favorite remedy of theirs. We don't bother you with much reading but just ask you to try a 10c trial bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for constipation, indigestion and stomach troubles. 50c and $1.00 sizes. At H. B. McCord's.

Thursday's Daily.

—Ira Thrush has announced his name as a candidate for surveyor before the coming republican county convention.

—T. C. Elson is here again from Berrien Springs, Mich. He has probably decided to remain here permanently.

—D. Z. Hoffman and daughter Flora will occupy the upper rooms of their home on South Main street, the lower floor being rented.

—The Central Union Telephone Company is arranging to issue a new directory, in book form for Auburn and Garrett subscribers.

—Mrs. Morris Widney and little son Waite are visiting her family at Fredericktown, Ohio. They will be be absent several weeks.

—The ladies of the Degree of Honor had a quilting at the home of Frank Groscop, northwest of town, and the report comes in that they had a pleasant meeting. We don't doubt it.

—There was a large attendance of old neighbors and friends at the funeral of Mrs. William Stafford today. Rev. Markley of Columbia City conducted the services and the interment was at Woodlawn cemetery.

—The first number of the St. Joe News under the management of Lloyd W. Yeiser, the new proprietor, is very creditable. Brother Yeiser is evidently made of the right kind of material and we hope to see him succeed.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. Girardot received on Wednesday a fine bunch of jasmine from Smithville, Texas, for the decoration of their son, Eugene's, grave. It was the gift of Engineer John Pepple, for whom Eugene was fireman on the M. K. & T. road in Texas.

—Bert Rowe, a young man living with his mother north of Sedan, and we believe a brother of Dave Rowe, fell off a Lake Shore train Saturday evening, receiving injuries which caused his death Sunday morning. He was buried at Fairfield Center, Tuesday.

—Smith Bailey of Spencerville wants the county news. He wants the very best and he wants the paper that has the most. Besides, he has the time and the means to enjoy plenty of good reading. So he subscribes for the Old Reliable, paying a year in advance.

—Wm. Elson and Mrs. Sarah Hosack were married last evening at the Methodist parsonage by Rev. Guild. It was a quiet affair, but we have heard that the happy couple were given a lively reception by a few of their friends on North Cedar street, The COURIER extends congratulations and hopes Mr. and Mrs. Elson may enjoy many happy wedding anniversaries.

$500 Reward,

for any trace of antipyrine, morphine, chloral or any other injurious substance found in Krause's Headache Capsules. They are more pleasant and convenient to take than powders, wafers, elixirs or salts. 25cts. Sold by H. B. McCord.

Cheap Insurance.

Many a man has been insured against Bright's disease, diabetes, or other dangerous ailment by a fifty cent bottle of Foley's Kidney Cure. H.B.McCord.

Friday's Daily.

—Squirrels can now be killed without violating the law.

—M. H. Bishop of Moores is a welcome addition to our weekly list.

—J. J. Latson is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Elmer Cowan, at Angola.

—Gen. Blair was down from Waterloo today on some matters in court.

—Isaac Hague has been appointed administrator of the Geo. W. Stahl estate.

—The Noble county regulators will hold their annual reunion August 29 at Albion.

—Sol Barney of St. Joe was in town last evening attending the Odd Fellows' meeting.

—The republicans of Steuben county will nominate their county ticket at Angola on Saturday, June 30.

—Two women have been elected delegates to the republican national convention, one from Utah and the other from Idaho.

—A ship load of beer has been captured by the Filipinos. The dispatches do not say, but it has probably been taken into the interior before now.

—The thirty-sixth annual state Sunday school convention will be held at Bluffton June 12 to 14. The meeting promises to be very large and interesting.

—August 7 will be republican day and August 10 democratic day at Island Park Assembly, Rome City. Speakers of national prominence have been secured.

—Mrs. Rowland and her niece, Mrs. Schneider have returned from a week's visit with the former's brother, John Wilson, at Mentone in Kosciusko county.

—Samuel Stafford of Elkhart is here attending the funeral of Mrs. Wm. Stafford, wife of his brother. He is one of the veteran engineers of the Lake Shore road.

—That was a plucky girl who married Mr. Price of New York, the day after he had failed for thirteen millions. And her friends say that she is as pretty and good as she is plucky.

—A friend of the COURIER remarks that January and February can March, and April May, but don't July about June. We hadn't thought of this before, but it is not a bad idea.

—Hicksville business men have raised a substantial amount of cash and will have a big celebration on the Fourth of July. They will doubtless draw a big crowd from Auburn.

—Cal. Husselman is still suffering from injuries sustained by falling from his wagon in the mill yard here about two weeks ago. The nerves in his back seem to have been injured.

—An exchange says the United States Express company will beginning today, accept money and packages to be sent free of charge to the New York committee for the India famine relief fund.

—There is a woman under arrest in New York has eloped twice, been divorced three times and has had five husbands. And she dosen't come from Utah.

—A new conundrum is on the rounds. "If a goat should swallow a rabbit, what would the X ray reveal?" Of course you'd give it up; so would the goat. It would expose a hare in the butter.

—Mrs. Barns returned last evening from Wabash where she had been a few days. She left the family of W. C. Hartman in fairly good health, though little Stanley still suffered some from the hard cough he had here.

—Under a ruling of the commissioner of internal revenue it is not necessary to affix revenue stamps to checks against the county on account of court expenses or fees. The commissioner holds that the law does not apply to state or circuit courts.

—Fort Wayne Sentinel:—Judge J. L Best of Indianapolis, Minn., was in the city Wednesday calling upon a number of acquaintances of former years. Judge Best formerly resided at Waterloo, and was a prominent member of the bar of Northern Indiana.

—FOR SALE;—Two short-horn bulls, ten months old, color red, weight about 900 pounds, good individuals. Farm about 4½ miles southeast of Butler, Ind. Correspondence and inspection invited. Joseph Wilson, breeder of fine registered short-horn cattle, Butler, Ind.

—Nobody asked the United States to go into Cuba. It went of its own accord with the expressly declared intention of teaching both Spaniards and Cubans honesty and good government. It invited the inspection of the world. If it meets with criticism, it has only itself to thank for it.

—Fraud:—Our competitors will soon place in your papers a flaring advertisement in which they say it's impossible for one dye stuff to color silk, wool and cotton. They do this to keep you from trying Putnam's Fadeless Dyes, [which will color either silk, wool or cotton,] for they know if you ever use Putnam Fadeless Dyes once you will never use their goods again. Sold by F. E. Davenport. 22-23

—Mr. W. S. Whedon, Cashier of the First National Bank of Winterset, Iowa, in a recent letter gives some experience with a carpenter in his employ, that will be of value to other mechanics. He says: "I had a carpenter working for me who was obliged to stop work for several days on account of being troubled with diarrhoea. I mentioned to him that I had been similarly troubled and that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy had cured me. He bought a bottle of it from the druggist here and informed me that one dose cured him, and he is again at his work." For sale by H. B. McCord.

Saturday's Daily.

—Charlie Hague is here for a visit with his parents and friends.

—Mrs Amy Kelly has rented property in Waterloo and is arranging to move there in the near future.

—Frank McNabb has been appointed postmaster at Fairfield Center to succeed Wm. F. Krahn, resigned.

—The cases of McIntosh vs. Leas and Leas vs. Wood have been sent to the superior court of Allen county on a change of venue.

—WANTED:—Black Walnut logs for timber. Highest cash prices paid for same. Address, The Sanders & Egbert Co., Goshen, Ind. 8

—John Leas is expected home from Lake Forest, Ill., about the last of next week. This closes his first year of school at the academy there.

—Al. Treesh will return to Chicago tomorrow to resume his work after a week's vacation. He has a good position in a railroad machine shop.

—A fine boy baby who tipped the scales at 10½ pounds arrived at the home of J. D. Kline and wife last night. Dr. Casebeer was the attending physician.

—William Satterfield and Mrs. M. C. Steppe, both well-known residents of Garrett, were married at Cumberland Md., this week, returning to Garrett yesterday.

—Frank Rush and Charlie Tenney employed by the Pioneer Hardware Co., have just completed a good job of plumbing for Thomas Sommers at his place of business.

—Judge Adair of Columbia City, who is a candidate for supreme judge, has opened headquartes in the Grand hotel at Indianapolis where he will be glad to meet his friends.

—Cal VanAuken has returned from Stroh where he has been overseeing the construction of a house he is building there. The town is building up rapidly and houses are in demand.

—The latest new name on our Weekly list is J. H. Armstrong of DeKalb. He is in the employ of the Lake Shore road on section 13, under section master Delbert Pember.

—Cal Husselman sent out over 600 packages of seed corn to various parts of the country this spring. He is making a specialty of choice seed corn for sale to farmers all over the country.

—Dr. L. A. Hines has organized a baseball team at Warsaw, and has secured a number of good players from the material at hand in that city. The doctor is a hustler and the team ought to succeed under his management.

—The Ashley Times says a new rail road is being surveyed from Toledo to Chicago. It goes through the north part of Williams county, Ohio, the north of Steuben county, striking Orland and then through Lagrange.

—The following marriage licenses have been issued since our last report: William Elson and Sarah Hosack, Jas. A. King and Mamie Loy Ruggles, Terry V. Ferguson and Grace B. Rush, George C. Martin and Libbie Hastler, Claude Tyson and Anna Fay Hornberger.

—While in the haymow of his barn this morning James Griswold fell to the floor below and for a time it was feared that he had been seriously injured. Dr. Swarts was called and on examination found that though no bones were broken Mr. Griswold had been badly bruised and shocked. He is now confined to his bed, but hopes to be out again in a short time.

—Wm. Elson was over to Garrett yesterday and brings word that his daughter Olive, now Mrs. Gordon, went to Fort Wayne the day before to have the trouble in her jaw investigated. It has been troubling her for a long time having become a sort of ulcer, and it was found the bone of the jaw had become honeycombed. But on taking out the bone at that point it was found that the bone was sound. It is believed that an operation and treatment of the affected part will heal it.

—We were pleased at a call this morning from Judge Best, who with Mrs. Best, is here for a few days. Both are in reasonably good health, though Mrs. Best has not fully recovered from the injuries received by a fall about three years ago. The judge went to Fort Wayne today, and early in the week they expect to return to Minneapolis, or at least go as far as Chicago, where the judge has an important case in court that he will attend to some time in the week.

—Laporte Argus:—It is said that the Lake Shore may absorb the Eel River road, which the decision of the supreme court wrests from the possession of the Wabash. The Eel River taps the main line of the Lake Shore at Butler, and many years prior to its lease by the Wabash delivered large amounts of freight to that road. The Lake Shore now owns the Lake Erie & Western, with which the Eel River connects at Denver. Previous to the Eel River becoming a part of the Wabash, the Lake Shore sought to buy the road from Butler to Logansport, but a satisfactory price was not made by the Eel River stockholders.

SHULLS

The Round Table.

Maud Muller, on a summer's day,
Called "Number, please?" to earn her pay.

Before her, numbers, printed small,
Fell down when anyone would call.

The judge took down his office 'phone,
And made to Maud his wishes known.

Said he, "I'll ask you just once more,
For four-eleven-forty-four."

Said Maud, as mild as summer seas,
"What number did you ask for, please?"

Said he "I told you twice before,
It's four-eleven forty-four."

Said Maud, and you could hear her smile,
"Just hold the 'phone a little while."

A weary interval ensued,
The wires hummed an interlude.

And broken bits of talk came o'er
The 'phone, and made the waiter sore.

The wishboned-shaped receiver hook
He seized upon and wildly shook.

Till Maudie's voice he heard once more
"What number are you waiting for?"

The judge responded with a roar,
"It's forty-eleven forty-four."

Serenely Maud made answer then,
"That line is busy; call again."

The judge had business late that day,
And so he merely walked away.

But as he walked he shook his head,
And this is what he sadly said:

"Of all the words of tongue or pen,
The d—dest are 'Busy; call again.'"

Joke on British Museum.

The British Museum trustees, who include Premier Salisbury, Lord Rosebery, Alfred Rothschild, and several other eminently important personages, have just been made the victims of an extraordinary hoax.

Francis Douce, a famous antiquary, who died in 1834, bequeathed a box to the British Museum trustees, stipulating it should not be opened until 1900. In May this box was solemnly unsealed and unlocked by the curator of the museum, when it was found to contain nothing but old fragments of paper, torn book covers and other rubbish, with a note from Douce, saying that in his opinion, it would be wasting any more valuable or interesting objects to leave them to persons of the average intelligence and taste of the British Museum trustees.

The trustees tried to look amused, but the meeting dispersed in silence. The janitor was called in to throw Douce's bequest into the ashbin.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters;' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50cts., guaranteed, at H B. McCord's Drugstore.

Not Satisfactory.

A reliable letter from Manila says: There are about 240 garrisons in the Philippine islands, each of which has succeeded in cowing the region bounded by its outposts. The natives behave themselves while they are in the immediate presence of American soldiers with loaded guns. But it is not advisable for any white man to wander beyond the outposts of a garrison, especially if he is unarmed. He is in danger of being shot from ambush or set upon and baloed. Any traveler who wishes to go from one garrison to another must be accompanied by a guard of soldiers. The railway from Manila to Dagupan is being operated, but there is a heavy garrison in every town and a night and day guard at every bridge. Wagon and pack trains are fired on from ambush every day.

GRAND GIFT DISTRIBUTION

A Forty-Cent Sugar Shell FREE To Every Married Lady.

EDITOR COURIER:—We believe that the most effective advertising we can do is to get samples of our goods into the homes of the people. Therefore we are sending an elegant sterling silver-plated sugar shell, such as we sell regularly at 40c each, to every married lady in the United States who writes for it. There is nothing to pay. The gift is absolute. You will confer a favor upon your readers by making this announcement in your paper. Each lady will send her name only, as this is too valuable a gift to send to persons who don't ask for it themselves. We give choice of any of our 40c designs, and will send illustrations from which selections may be made.

Court Notes.

The two state cases against David Heckathorn were dismissed by the prosecuting attorney for reasons filed and the defendant dismissed.

The case of the State vs Frank Brown and Adolph Krontz, destruction of property, was dismissed by the prosecutor, but the case against them for malicious trespass—throwing stones at switch lamps and a moving caboose on the Lake Shore road was heard Wednesday by Judge Hartman. The defendant, Brown, through his attorney, F. L. Welsheimer, entered a plea of guilty and Krontz not guilty. The court decided from the evidence that both were guilty. Both get a fine of $1; Brown thirty and Krontz fifteen days in jail.

The bastardy case of Alice McKinley vs. John Swank has been continued until the new term, defendant furnishing bond in the sum of $500.

The case of Griffin vs. Durfee and Sheriff Hathaway, on injuction and to quiet title was heard by Judge Bratton today. Welsheimer, Rose & Rose were attorneys for the plaintiff, and Lowry of Fort Wayne and Leas of Waterloo for the defendants.

Eliza J. Sterling vs. William Wood, replevin. Settled and dismissed at defendant's costs.

A motion for a new trial was filed in the case of Guy vs. Liberenz, in which judgement was rendered a few days ago for the plaintiff. Motion overruled and an appeal taken to the supreme court. Thirty days given to file the appeal and stenographer ordered to file long-hand transcript of evidence.

George DeWald & Co. vs. Levi Hartman on note. Judgment for plaintiff for $437.95.

Henry P. Baldwin et al. vs. Levi Hartman, on account. Judgment for $1667.48.

The case of Lottie Heckathorn vs. David Heckathorn, to declare the defendant of unsound mind and appoint a guardian, was heard by Judge Hartman, Mr. Heckathorn was declared to be of sound mind and the court ordered that his guardian be discharged after filing his final report.

In the matter of Samuel Shoup and wife, petition to adopt Gertrude Elling er, the case was continued until next Friday.

William C. Aldrich, surviving partner of the copartnership of Aldrich & Son of Butler, filed his petition showing that he is the sole surviving partner of said copartnership; that he does not intend to settle copartnership business as surviving partner, but renounces his right to do so and asks the court to appoint a receiver to settle same. The petition was examined and Alfred Kelley of Waterloo was appointed receiver to settle up the affairs and take charge of all the property of said copartnership according to the provisions of the statutes.

In the matter of Michael Teutsch, will, the plaintiff files amended complaint against all the defendants. The defendants were called and defaulted. The infancy of Detie Tomlinson is suggested and Jas. H. Rose appointed guardian ad litem who is sworn and files answer to amended complaint, submitted to court. Finding for plaintiff that he is entitled to partition and that land is indivisable.

The divorce case of Mary Patterson vs. Chauncey Patterson is on trial before Judge Hartman and is rather racy and will probably take a greater part of the day. Roby & Harper are for Mrs. Patterson and Moody & Rickel for the defense.

The divorce case of Luna E. Soule vs. Darwin Soule was disposed of after the apjournment at noon and divorce granted to plaintiff.

A Good Meeting.

The annual meeting of the DeKalb County Sunday School Union, held at Corunna Wednesday and Thursday, was a success from every point of view. There was a large attendance and the progrm was interesting throughout. Frank W. Willis of Waterloo was re-elected president, and the same compliment was paid the efficient secretary, Mort E. Olds of St. Joe. It was decided to hold the session of 1901 at Garret. Mrs. Edgar Wise was chosen president for Union township, to succeed Mrs. J A. Barns, resigned.

It speaks well for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy when druggists use it in their own families in preference to any other. "I have always used it in my own family both for ordinary coughs and colds and for the cough following la grippe, and find it very efficacious." For sale by H. B. McCord.

Grove Bethel.

From Auburn, going eastward,
Two miles you take your way,
Thence two directly southward,
On a quiet country way,
Stands a church renowned
The country 'round—
The "Bethel o' the Grove."

The sturdy wood that lent the name
To this church, now grim and old,
The woodman's ax and consuming flame
Has leveled to the mould;
But a sentry band
Of elms still stand
By "Bethel o' the Grove."

Its walls are built of plainest stuff;
Nor paint nor sign of ornament;
Bleak and bare, grim and rough—
Speak of long strife with the elements;
But walls, though rough,
Are good enough
At "Bethel o' the Grove."

No clanking bell from belfry tall
Peals out on the evening air,
To call the worshipers, one and all,
Forthwith to this house of prayer.
For the people know
Just when to go
To Bethel o' the Grove."

Though otherwhere I make my home,
And other friendships claim;
In structures set with towering dome
To my christian rites attend.
My heart o'er yearns
When mem'ry turns
To "Bethel o' the Grove."

And so in life we always find
'Tis not the beautiful and sublime
About which our love-cords bind
While treading the sands of time;
But close relation
Comes of association,
As to "Bethel o' the Grove."

A Thousand Tongues

Could not express the rapture of Annie E. Springer, of 1125 Howard-st., Philadelphia, Pa., when she found that Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption had completely cured her of a hacking cough that for many years had made life a burden. All other remedies and doctors could give her no help, but she says of this Royal Cure—"it soon removed the pain in my chest and I can sleep soundly, something I can scarcely remember doing before. I feel like sounding its praises throughout the Universe." So will every one who tries Dr. King's New Discovery for any trouble of the Throat, Chest or Lungs. Price 50c. and $1.00. To Sell Corn Products.

We have at the Pan's Exposition a building the principal object of which is to increase the sales abroad of American corn to which European nations have not heretofore taken kindly.

Just at present the American corn propaganda seems to afford our French friends some amusement. A kitchen has been established to prepare corn bread, corn fritters, etc., as a free lunch and thus recommend the use of corn and increase the demand for it. At the exhibits of all the countries there is a guard or soldier standing or walking in the uniform of his country. The nations have not forgotten to select soldiers of good appearance for this service. Mr. Hugo Krause of Milwaukee, a veritable Hercules, six feet five inches tall in his uniform, ruddy and handsome, is on guard at the American corn bread kitchen, and if any foreigner is skeptical as to the effect of corn as a diet he is pointed to this corn fed American, and Mr. Krause can tell them in good French what corn has done for him.

Stands Without a Rival.

Mr. Jno. N. Wilkie, of 36 Adams Ave. West Detroit, Michigan, writes:

"I have been troubled with very severe headache for years and have taken a great many different remedies, but have never found anything to give me as speedy and permanent a cure as Krause's Headache Capsules. In my opinion they stand without a rival; they have cured me every time." Sold by H. B. McCord.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

We have often said this chapter should be largely reminiscent. There are so many things called up by reading an old newspaper, that we take this issue to quote somewhat from one that is nearly a quarter of a century old.

A CENTENNIAL NUMBER.

The Auburn Republican, now the Dispatch, of March 2, 1876, is before us and is now and always will be an object of interest to Auburn and DeKalb county people. The three leading papers at that date, were the Auburn COURIER, Auburn Republican and the Waterloo Press. Each paper made special efforts to get out a big "centennial edition," and for that purpose, employed extra writers and compositors. This brought in more new matter than had been seen for many years. W. H McIntosh wrote a special centennial article for the Dispatch; C. P. Houser did the same for the COURIER, and J. A. Barns wrote one for the Press. All three of these articles appeared in the some week, and all were largely made up of local history, and detached facts of pioneer days. Auburn received a considerable attention in all, but we have in this present article, only attempted to call up business and other timely items.

P. D. Graham was president of the Richland Sunday school Institute.

Auburn's population is put at 1,911; Waterloo, 1,640. W. W. Griswold took the enumeration in Auburn.

Among the attorneys not now on the bar roll were: E. W. Foedick, R. Wes McBride, Cosper Altenberg, Judge McClellan, John W. Rickel, Guy Plumb, J. L. Morlan, H. C. Peterson, W. L. Penfield, A. J. Little, D. Y. and Cal. Husselman, A. P. Reinoehl, W. H. Hoffman, O. L. Young, R. A. Franks, J. B. Endley, W. C. McGonigal and P. J. Lockwood; James I. Best was judge.

There was one mail each way daily on the B. & O., and on the Jackson branch, and the same on the Eel River.

G. C. Lahnum was making tile and brick.

Charles Eckhart, carriage maker.

F. X. Goodman, sign and house painter.

W. H. Rakestraw, clothing etc.

Joseph R. Lanning, president of the First National Bank and James V. Hazzard, cashier. The directors were Dr. Ford, J. R. Lanning, S. W. Ralston Wm. McIntyre and George Hazzard.

Shearer & Wilson were contractors and builders.

Miller & Casebeer were merchants; C. P. Houser, books and stationery; Geo. H. Munn, dry goods; J. Abright, jewelry; W. H. Stone, lumber; S. W. Ralston, merchant; E. Williams, groceries; F. E. Davenport, druggist, and J. L. Davis, hardware.

There were but few of the present business men of the present day, Ed. Baker, Davis and Davenport, we believe are the only ones left with the same business on the same lot. Possibly Eldridge may be another. The town is all changed. The scattered buildings south of the jail, and on West Seventh street have given way to good blocks. The Ensley block, then a big store is now a carriage repository, and the fine opera house takes the place of a quagmire. The public square was then almost without trees and those living were quite small. There was a wooden fence about the grounds, and the citizen of today could see many other interesting changes if he could be set back twenty-four years.

It Saved a Leg.

I have used Dr. C. D. Warner's Compound of Seven Cures with such good results that I recommended it to Geo. Chipp, who was taken with typhoid fever about two years ago. The disease settled in one of his legs, causing enlargement of the entire limb, which resulted in a fever-running sore, rendering the leg entirely useless. The doctors tried to cure it, but had no success, and they advised him that his leg would have to be amputated. Then I urged him to give the Seven Cures a fair trial and accordingly he commenced taking it, and continued to use it for six months. He is well and hearty today and his leg is just as sound as ever.

Costly Colonies.

France has colonial possessions equal to the area of the United States, and with a population of 53,000,000, yet M. Peletan, a minister of France, declared that for a profit of $4,000,000 in trade and the pleasure of ruling foreign peoples, France was annually expending $15,000,000.

Germany has a colonial area of 1,000,000 square miles, with a population of 11,000,000, upon which she expends $5,000,000 annually for a trade of $2,000,000.

The debate in the Reichstag on the 17th of February showed an unprofitable condition of the German colonies—the appropriation of expenses growing and the imports and exports either stationary or decreasing. With her own colonial balance against her, Germany enjoys, without expense to herself, a trade of $125,000,000 with British colonies.

A comparison of colonies in the tropical and temperate zones shows an enormous disparity in the consuming and producing capacity of the two classes. For instance, Victoria exports $70 per capita, and the tropical colonies of Great Britain $25.80. Each person in the temperate zone colonies consumes $12.32 in British goods and each person in the tropical colonies 71 cents. "It pays Great Britain better that one child be born in Canada than that twenty-five children be born in Ceylon."

QUESTION ANSWERED.

Yes, August Flower has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers' and grandmothers' never thought of using anything else for Indigestion or Billiousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart Failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Sample bottles at O. P Barber's, Corunna.

A Noted Doctor

Once said "most women lose their freshness and good looks much earlier in life than necessary because of inattention to nature's requirements. Because of their peculiar habits all should make a practice of using some simple laxative." There is no laxative so simple, so pleasant to take and yet so potent as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. W. C. T. U. NOTES.

No amount of 16 to 1 or sound money will atone for the souls ruined by licensed rum.

We have no difficulty in agreeing with the Chicago magistrate who said to a newspaper reporter: "Go anywhere you please, and you will find almost invariably that whiskey is at the root of all evil."

THE MEANEST THING.

I suppose the meanest thing that a person can do is to stand upon the bank when some one has plunged into the water to save a drowning man, and to criticise the stroke of the man that with laboring arms is bringing his brother to the shore. Poor creatures! Very poor creatures! Why, if we can not take off our coats and go in ourselves, because God has not given us the spirit, surely we can find a bit of cheer in our hearts to give to the man. Give no heed to the crowd on the lower bank. There are more crowds than one on the bank, and there is a crowd of witnesses higher up; they bend over him, they understand it all. They say, "Well done," and if he does not hear it on account account of the babel, he will hear it in the quiet time coming. Yea, although he does not succeed through the strength of the tide; although he fling an empty hand up to heaven before the waters go over his head, that hand shall be caught in the hand of Christ.—Dr. John Watson.

NO SALOONS IN NEW PALESTINE.

The Ministeral Institute of the Indianapolis District M. E. church held its annual meeting this week at New Palestine. In a resolution they strongly endorsed the attitude of Rev. John Ward, M. E. pastor, in leading the temperance hosts against the three saloons in New Palestine and abolishing them. He and Dr. O. C. Nier canvassed the township and secured the requisite number to oust them. They have secured the power of attorney which will keep them free of the saloons for two years.
